CHAPTERS FROM A WOMAN'S LIFE

By JANE PHELPS

CHAPTER 88

The next morning before he left for the studio, Walter called the superintendent and ordered strong bolts put on both outside doors. He insisted I must rest, was very loving and tender with me, claiming I had been wonderfully brave and so on. Mrs. Page too was unusually gentle said she should probably have fainted at once or done something as foolish. I felt that it would be almost worth going through my fright again to be so considered.

An officer came and questioned me. They had found a man prowling about not far from the apartment, had held him. I could tell them little as the man's face was covered, and aside from his height and that he wore dark clothes, and a slouch hat, my information was of no assistance.

For two or three days Walter's boyish care was evident, then he drifted into his old ways. We ceased talking about the burglar and I once more had reason to think he was devoting himself to Vasil Vernon.

I was looking over the monthly bills. When I opened a florist's bill I was amazed at the amount. We had a few flowers in the house, small orders for the table and so on. But nothing that could make up such a sum. I went through the items, and found roses, orchids, and so on charged in several instances.

I called at the florists and told him there was some mistake, that he had charged me with flowers I had not ordered. He got out his book and said:

"Mr. Page ordered such and such flowers. Let me see, they were delivered at the Ritz hotel. The bill was right after all. I did not pay it, told him I would send a check. I had no idea what I should do, whether I should speak to Walter or not; could not think with the man's eyes upon me in quizzical fashion.

"Mr. Page forgot to mention sending them," I said, feeling the florist was smiling knowingly.

"That's all right, Mrs. Page. It often happens."

As I walked slowly away I thought of that last remark of his: "It often happens."

GLENDALE NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Chaney and family of Days Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, of Days Creek, and Mr. and Mrs. Syd Jacques and daughter, of Speaker, spent Easter Sunday with their mother, Mrs. Ellen Hanks, at the Hanks-Pedue residence in this city. Very impressive Easter services were held at Olivet church, also at the Lutheran church in this city, last Sunday. Special music at each service was rendered.

Our usual downpour of spring showers are in order in this valley, and vegetation is fairly springing from the ground. Natives are all perfectly happy. Activity along all lines of employment is booming. Health and prosperity are the heritage of our favored people.

We all read, enjoy and appreciate our county paper, the News-Review, and we read our local newspaper, and we ratify the stand taken by J. L. Campbell, the editor. Let all who have read his paper promptly pay their overdues and stop the paper. Personally I read and appreciate our city paper and am in line of "America for Americans." My slogan is "Glendale for Americans, and unity of our people in thought and endeavor," will insure all of our interests.

George Hobbs, a leading citizen of Bend was the guest of P. H. Roberts at "The Dillies," on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Austin and daughter are returning to this city to remain permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Hamilton and daughters will arrive today to make their home in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Miller of Anchor, are looking after business at Grants Pass this week.

Rumors and blithum, of strikes of unusual richness are occurring near this city. The lure of yellow gold pleases the eye, and entitles the mind if there is enough of it. We were shown some wonderful horizons of gold, and we hope each sample may be a bonanza to the owners.

To whom it may concern:

Three sets heavy work harness, several fine baby wagens, all kinds of house goods. Big sale Saturday, April 7th, at Auction House, 328 N. Jackson, Radabaugh and Patterson.

MOVIES

BIG FOREST FIRE IN "HEARTS AFLAME"

"Hearts Aflame" announced as one of the largest spectacular plays of recent years, is to be presented at the Antler theatre tonight where it will begin a run of two days. It is Reginald Dwyer's latest production, released by Metro, and it adds considerably to the fame of this director of big pictures.

One thing is particularly attractive widespread attention in connection with this picture, and that is a vivid and exciting forest fire, which is said to surpass anything of the kind ever before presented in motion pictures.

Did so many other married men send flowers to women? And did other wives go to the florists only to be informed of the fact?

For two days I pondered as to whether I should say anything to Walter. Then I concluded to do so. I waited until we were alone and said:

"Walter, I wish you'd look over this florist's bill. It's out of all reason. We have had very few flowers this month."

His face flushed.

"I have ordered some for the studio," he said after a moment. "I take it and have it straightened out."

"That isn't necessary," I would perhaps have said nothing had he not tried to pay the bill, to deceive me. "I have seen the florist he looked up each item for me. Those marked with a check, to the Ritz, and were ordered by you."

Walter turned white with anger. "What if I did send a few flowers to Vasil? That's my business! Nice thing to have a wife who goes snooping around making a fuss to a tradesman because her husband orders a few flowers!"

"I didn't make any fuss, Walter. I thought he had charged us with things we had not bought. You have been very generous with Miss Vernon." I couldn't help that last; it just slipped out.

"Why shouldn't I be? She is very generous with her time; gives me as many sitting as I wish—and no complaints! Not a professional model either. Most society women and girls aren't dependable; say they will come and don't."

"You needn't explain so elaborately, I understand," I said coldly. "I'll send a check as usual."

"That's right! Speak in that hurt tone. One would think to hear you I had no right to spend my own money."

He was working himself into a rage, when fortunately his mother came in.

"Am I intruding?" she looked from Walter's red face to mine, which I knew was pale.

"No, indeed," I said quickly. While Walter, with a stifled exclamation left the room.

Tomorrow—Two Divers Enter.

then pictures. In order to reproduce it for screen purposes, a tract of timber was ignited and twenty cameras photographed it from many angles. It is through this tragic blaze that Anna Q. Nilsson runs a locomotive; and in starting this realistic episode the celebrated actress was pathetically injured. Her injuries kept her confined in a hospital for several weeks.

The forest fire is one of several big scenes in the picture. There is, in addition the blowing up of a dam, done to release thousands of logs which lay stranded and imprisoned. Another big scene is the dynamiting of a hillside, necessary to prevent the spread of the forest fire.

MARIE CORRELLS "THELMA"

Heretofore Jane Novak has been identified with productions depicting life in the open spaces of Northwest. She wore plain frocks, often uly frocks with only an occasional costume that set off her exquisite beauty. In "Thelma" revealed for the first time at the Liberty theatre today and tomorrow she becomes a new Jane Novak, a bewitching, a glittering, a blinding Jane Novak in an exhibition of stunning gown that will intrigue every woman who sees her.

Based on the classic romance of the Norseland by Marie Correll, "Thelma" makes entertainment of the most engrossing character on the screen. It has been superbly created by Chester Bennett, the producer-director, who chose it a vehicle for Miss Novak. Moreover the star is a well high perfect embodiment of the character born in the mind of the famous author. She is the perfect Norse type, combining the delicate, aristocratic beauty and fidelity with true Viking spirit.
