

LANCASTER TIRES

Tires Built to Battle Biting, Grinding Wear!

OVER city pavements and well-kept highways, Lancaster Tires roll easily and smoothly—mile after mile, month after month. And mark this: there's a fighting spirit built into these better tires that makes for exceptional service.

Frozen mud ruts—jagged chuck-holes—worn out macadam with sharp edges to bite and tear—it's the unfavorable conditions that reveal the staunchness and stamina of the Lancaster tire body and the remarkable resiliency and toughness of the wear-fighting Lancaster tread.

We would like to show you these better tires.

PROSPEROUS DAYS FOR ALASKA TRADE

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, April 5.—Despite serious handicaps during the past few years, Alaska has recovered its stability and, in the words of a Department of Interior announcement, is riding once more on an even keel. "Like a ship righting herself after a terrible sale."

The forecast of smooth sailing ahead is based upon the report of the collector of customs at Juneau just received in Washington.

"The year closed with an increase in the commerce of the territory over 1921 of $20,780,401 and with a healthy growth in practically all the industries," says the statement issued from the department of Secretary Work. "Exports from the territory doubled the imports, leaving the balance of trade in Alaska's favor by a handsome margin."

"The outstanding increase in value of shipments to the United States is shown in canned salmon, both as to the number of pounds and value. This was due to the revival of the salmon canning industry, as well as a more nearly normal run of salmon in Alaska. An increase also worthy of note, because of its rapid growth, is that of pickled fish represented primarily by the herring industry. A number of large herring canneries were installed during 1922 in southwest Alaska and these were kept running until late in the fall to meet the demands for this sea food."

"In spite of the serious gold mining reverses during the past few years, the mineral output of the territory for 1922 was approximately $18,000,000 or an increase over 1921 more than $1,000,000. This increase was due primarily to a larger output of copper, yet it reflects in some measure the improvement of the entire mineral industry. Pre-war figures can be considered only in comparisons, and for the five years ended in 1914, the average annual value of Alaska's mineral output was $19,700,000. So, compared in values Alaska's mineral output in 1922 is most encouraging for a revival of this industry."

"The canned clam industry, which was somewhat dormant during 1920-21, took on new life in 1922, and the outlook for a larger pack in 1923 is good. With shipments aggregating $144,471. The shrimp industry is showing a steady growth."

"The shipment of sawed lumber from Alaska to the United States and also for export to foreign countries is most gratifying. During 1922 lumber was loaded direct on vessels for export trade. A number of mills are reported to be under contract for smaller shipments during 1923."

"The possibility of increased oil development in Alaska was most promising at the close of 1922. The oil wells of the Katala fields produced steadily during 1922 and their refined product found ready markets within the territory. Production from this field, however, has not yet reached the exporting stage. A new oil field is now under development in the Cold Bay region."

"The travel movement, as shown in the statement of arrivals and departures, discloses a pleasing increase in travel to Alaska from the States. While the departures from Alaska are in excess of the arrivals, it is not believed that this indicates any falling off in population, but rather is due to the fact that the residents of the interior are taking advantage of the cheaper transportation offered by the Alaska Railroad to spend a part of the winter in the states."

MOVIES

Little Richard a Male Vamp.
Part of the sunshine in Reginald Barker's production, "Hearts Aflame," the Metro picture at the Antlers Theatre for the last time tonight, is furnished by one of the most popular children on the screen, Richard Headrick, who will be remembered by the fans for his performance in John M. Stahl's "The Child Thou Gavest Me."

In the role of the orphan who is being cared for by Helen Foraker, played by Anna Q. Nilsson, he has ample opportunity to make him so beloved to his public since he began to work in pictures.

One of Richard's chief objections to his role in "Hearts Aflame" was the fact that he had no opportunity to disport in the water, for even at his young age, Richard realizes that his charms are shown to best advantage in a bathing suit. When he arrives on a bathing beach, wearing his medals for being a regular honest-to-goodness swimming "champ," all the other masculine bathers might as well take their spats and canes and go back to the bath houses. Richard gets 'em—just as he does in "Hearts Aflame."

This photoplay was produced for Louis B. Mayer, and is based on the novel, "Timber," by Harold Titus.

unday only. There is ample reason for its superiority. The story, first of all, is natural and sincere, and the adventures which befall the characters are such as might be the lot of anyone in the same circumstances. It is produced with the right atmospheric backgrounds and is capably directed by Wm. Merrill McCormick, who also wrote the story and acted the role of the sheik. Marin Sarr, a favorite player; Robert Burns, James Welsh and Faith Hope—these complete an uncommonly satisfying cast.

Mrs. Cary had suffered for three years from paralysis brought on by shock from losing her home and contents by fire. She had lived alone as for all the later years of her life except the last two when she made her home with her son Elvin in Roseburg. Here she was tenderly cared for by Mrs. Kennedy. Mrs. Cary was able to walk about the house a little most of the time during her sickness.

until the last few weeks when she became totally helpless. She is survived by her husband and four sons. She was a Christian woman and although we mourn at her passing from this life we could not wish her back, as we realize that she is so much happier in that bright home to which she has gone.
