HUGH B. SMITH

many deeds of daring and heroism... could not sleep except when exhausted. I was also about fifteen pounds under weight, all of which made me realize something must be done. "I resigned from the Navy but soon found out new environment and duties made no improvement in my physical condition. "Finally a friend persuaded me to try Tancic and after taking six or eight bottles of Tancic I had gained fifteen pounds, was back to my normal weight, and felt completely recovered. Tancic was a life-saver to me, and I heartily endorse it. "Mr. Smith is branch manager for the Singer Sewing Machine Co., at 261 Flatbush Ave., Brooklyn, N. Admiral Kerr for Unified War Ministry and Better Air Service Development

ADMIRAL MARK KERR, C. B. M. V. O. (International News Service.) ROSEBURG, April 6.—Most people continue to consider that strategy complicated science. One has to be able to read the mind of the enemy, to know the terrain, to know the weather, and the same fundamental strategy of the air, strategy of the sea, strategy of the land, and the strategy of card play. There is no excuse for people who do not look out for their own interests in an understanding way. As any child who cannot be taught to read, a man can be taught to understand the strategy of the air, the strategy of the sea, the strategy of the land, and the strategy of card play. VIOLIN SOLO PROVES VERY ENJOYABLE

That man Royce can surely play the violin. The large audience at the Christiana church sat entranced last night while he played "The Holy City," arranged for the violin. It was conceded to be one of the most beautiful productions ever offered in the church, and played by a master hand. It certainly had wonderful effect. Also the singing by the quartette of "Abide With Me." Illustrated with beautiful stereoscopic slides was a very high class feature of the evening service. The regular numbers of the orchestra, brought forth the usual demonstration. There will be another great service tonight. The children's chorus will sing and give their yell. The young ladies will sing "Bearing His Cross," with the illuminated cross effect, and the orchestra will play. The pastor preached last evening on "Remember the Right Kind of Sacrifice." Sunday will be the last day of the meeting, and the plans are to make this a great day, with all the services. There will be an unusually fine evening program. The orchestra will open the service. Mr. Olson and Mr. Atterbury will play a cornet duet, and Mr. Royce will give another great violin number. The young ladies quartette will sing at least two numbers and possibly three. There will be a special service Sunday evening. The pastor will speak tonight on "The Destinies of Men," using a large chart. On Sunday morning, "Completeness in Christ," and Sunday evening, "The Chain of Salvation," using a chart.

SKULLS REVIVE OLD CONTROVERSY

LONDON, April 6.—Much speculation as to the age of man has risen as a result of the recent discoveries of fossil human skulls in South America. Patagonia and the island of Jersey. The estimates as to the antiquity of the human race range all the way from ten thousand to a million years. Dr. Wolf's reported discovery in Patagonia of a fossilized human skull of the tertiary period, however, may nullify all previous calculations on this subject, and the public is now getting a little clearer about accepting even scientific estimates regarding the date of the origin of the human race. Ever since the unearthing of the skulls of King Tutankhamen, who in the view of anthropologists is to be reckoned only as an "infant" as the age of man goes, startling discoveries have been made all over the world which upset all well-established anthropological foundations. Dr. A. Smith Woodward, director of the geological department of the British Museum, makes some interesting commentaries on the latest discoveries in skulls and bones. "For a moment," he says, "the public seemed to assume that we had found at last the first man who lived on earth. I fear, however, that these conjectures are as baseless as they are interesting. Since the skull from Jersey is said to have been found near a neolithic burial chamber, it is probably much nearer our period than any of the skulls of fossil men which show resemblance to their ape-like ancestors. And since the specimen from Patagonia comes from a country which has furnished more "man's hands" in the study of prehistoric and ancestral man than any other part of the world, it will not excite interest among anthropologists until some geologist admittedly skilled in such matters has satisfied himself that this is a true fossil, definitely associated with the remains of extinct animals. "Who, then, Dr. Woodward asks, was the first man on earth? "To be strictly accurate," he replies, "we have not yet found him, although we have some reason to think we know where to look. In the dim borderland of time which separates man from monkey there roamed, somewhere in Central Asia, a form of large-brained ape destined to be the precursor of man. It is impossible to fix a date for his appearance, but we do know that when he came into being the Himalayan Mountains had not yet reared their peaks. "The eminent British geologist says nothing has yet been discovered respecting the habits and life of these apes. A party of American naturalists is now searching for them in primitive localities in Mongolia, he adds. "It was in the Neanderthal near Düsseldorf, Germany, writes Dr. Woodward, that the remains of the earliest man of whom anything is really known were discovered. "Compared with our knowledge of his ancestors," he says, "he is an intimate acquaintance. But it is impossible to assign him a date in years. Swedish geologists reckon his age as about 12,000 years. "Neanderthal man," continues the British scientist, "was definitely a man. He lived in caves from which he called forth to hunt the animals such as mammoth, rhinoceros, reindeer and bison, which then roamed over Europe. We have found his tools, flint and bone, and we have found even the bone pins with which possibly the early women fastened the rough skins which served them for petticoats. We have also found remains of paint and rouge, which seem to signify the dawn of vanity.

Most remarkable of all, we have ascertained that these early human beings believed in a future life, an enormous advance in thought. They buried their dead, and with the dead we have found both stone implements and the bones of animals which had been buried when still covered with flesh, and were doubtless intended to be used as food in case the departed spirits should suffer the pangs of hunger. This is a Studebaker year.

GOVERNOR PIERCE SAMPLES PRUNES

By LORIN BRITT CORVALLIS, April 6.—Governor Pierce smiled with appreciation as he examined the large heads of broccoli and tasted the big Italian prunes exhibited in the booth of the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce during the business show at O. A. C. The products attracted the attention of every passer-by without the need of an artificially decorated booth. Such corn, broccoli, and prunes they had never seen before. Several persons who had visited the old Douglas County fairs, said the vegetables exhibited were unequalled there. A prune was given everyone passing by the booth, and Morris Newland, O. A. C. representative from the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce, told about the richness of the Umpqua Valley. Contractor Home—John Hakanson, Oakland contractor, who is engaged in an important piece of construction on the Roosevelt highway below Port Arford is spending a few days in Oakland preparing a water tank facility for Port Orford for the summer. Mr. Hakanson has a big contract in Curry county and will be located there for several months.

JUNGLE DEATH WATCH IS ENACTED IN ZOO

TOLEDO, April 6.—A jungle death watch, overwhirling in its tenderness, yet awe-inspiring in its savage intensity, has terminated after four days in the lion house of Walbridge Park zoo here. The watchers were Sahara, the beautiful lioness lent to Toledo by the Cleveland zoo, and King, the jungle giant, pride of the Toledo collection. Between Sahara's two powerful forepaws, crouched tenderly at intervals and guarded by two half-closed eyes, dimmed by grief, were two chubby, fuzzy cubs—both lifeless. Sahara would not believe they were dead—or knowing it could not calm the overwhelming urge of mother love that had aroused all the tenderness, and yet all of the savagery of her jungle nature. Only an occasional whimper escaped the lioness to indicate her grief. Sahara would not believe they were dead—or knowing it could not calm the overwhelming urge of mother love that had aroused all the tenderness, and yet all of the savagery of her jungle nature. Only an occasional whimper escaped the lioness to indicate her grief. For four days the death watch was maintained—after the great stock of the lion world flew over the animal house and left the lifeless bodies of a lion son and daughter. Crouched, ready to spring at the first sign of danger, Sahara hardly moved a muscle during her long vigil. Now and then she smoothed the fur on their little bodies with her tongue, and again she crouched tenderly the still faces. Only twice did she leave them—when keeper Louis Scherer, anxious to put an end to the heart-rending watch, entered the lion house to see if there was an opportunity to remove the two bodies. On both occasions Sahara, in a terrific rage, sprang fiercely against the great iron bars of her cage in an effort to drive off the intruder. King, in a frenzy such as Scherer never has seen him display since he took him as a cub to rear, tried to get at his keeper, frothing at the mouth and sending forth the terrifying roar of the enraged jungle master. "It was the old call to protect the young," Scherer said. "There was no use in trying to take the lifeless cubs away from Sahara." So the big house was locked to fill but the keepers Sahara was permitted to keep her death watch undisturbed until that mysterious healer of animal heartaches stole quietly into this mother's grief-stricken consciousness with that instinctive knowledge of the hopelessness of the struggle when she permitted the bodies to be removed by the keeper.
