KAMCHATKA AND ASIA MINOR

Those contracts for the development of mineral properties in Asia Minor, obtained from the Turkish government by Rear Admiral Chester, appear to be the real thing. There must be oil and other valuable resources in Anatolia, or so clever a man would never have spent years in seeking them, and France would not be making such a fuss about them. Yet somehow the incident reminds one of Kamchatka.

A couple of years ago there was just such an ado over concessions obtained from the Russian government by a California promoter for the exploitation of the natural resources of Kamchatka, which might be called Asia's most eastern peninsula, as Asia Minor is its most western. Those concessions were estimated to be worth a billion dollars. And everybody knows, they may be. But the public has heard nothing about the matter since, and there is a general impression that the enterprise has gone dead, for lack of capital willing to take the risk or from political difficulties, or both.

The same sort of disappointment has been experienced dozens of times with regard to ambitious ventures in Central and South America.

All this may have no application to the Turkish enterprise. It may be, as the men interested say, that there is $500,000,000 to be made out of it. But surely neither American promoters nor American investors need to be reminded that there's many a slip between a concession in a foreign land and its conversion into cash profits. This is particularly true in a land so cursed by bad government and vexed by all the cross-currents of international hatred and business rivalry as Turkey.

Now that the craze for endurance dancing contests has swept the country, we may expect to see the same mania breaking out in other forms. There is piano-playing, for instance. The test of a pianist will come to be not how well he can play, but how long. Some village blacksmith who happens to pound the ivory keys instead of an anvil may win Paderewski's laurels. Painting too, instead of annual exhibits of artist canvases, hung in an art gallery, there will be contests in public halls in which the man or woman who paints on for the longest time, without pausing for sleep, food or rest, will be adjudged the master painter. Oratory, of course, will fall into line. And this will be a less unatural development, as far as America is concerned. Marathon speaking contests should offer a rare opportunity for retired congressmen. Likewise singing. We may yet have some human songbird touring the country, with a salary of several thousand dollars a week, on the strength of the fact that she once bested—or worsted—all rivals by singing steadily for three days and nights. There is also a rare opportunity for preachers to get into the game. It may seem a bit undignified at first, but it's all in getting used to a thing. Oh, there are unlimited possibilities in this new outbreak of the higher civilization.

The American Legion, a patriotic order of ex-service men, is combating the I. W. W. by every means it is lawfully possible to employ remarks an exchange. The proposed general strike in the lumber industry, that is to paralyze logging camps and saw-mills on May 1 will be carried out by the Wobblies if present plans mature. The American Legion, composed of men who served in the world war and leaders who were over seas, stands for American industries and peaceful solution of labor problems. It is opposed to syndicalism, to sabotage, to picketing and force methods—in fact everything the I. W. W. believe in and advocate. The Legion was organized to preserve law and order, the I. W. W. to destroy and tear down by organizing corrupt and diabolical elements. Many will remember the crimes committed by the Syndicalists in the lumber manufacturing city of Centralia, where the American Legion organized to prevent rioting and destruction of industries. Can any sane American give a single reason for disturbing the prosperous conditions now prevailing in the lumber industry to gratify the ambitions of the Wobblies to establish a reign of terrorism?

THE VILLAGE RHYMESTER
by Carlyle Emery

To be jealous without reason, is a curse and nothing less. It has wrecked a lot of households, leaving bleak unhappiness. When I see a man or woman with their eyes alight with green, then I know the demon Jealousy, is coming on the scene.

It's a wicked looking monster with no brains or common sense. It breathes out a fume of malice with a heat that is pitiless. Eyes of strong imagination seem to pop out of its head, and its jaws with foolish envy are forever dripping red. It will pounce upon a woman, tell her hubby's love is true. It will wheedle, coax and argue till its face is black and blue. If the woman stops to put it, there'll be trouble right away. If she gives it no attention, it will crawl and slink away.

To a man it often blithers and begins to drip its salve, but without a constant feeling, it will wither up and starve. It delights in bringing torture when there's not the slightest cause, and grows with gentle purring, there's a poison in its claws.

So beware the demon Jealousy and treat it with disdain, strike it hard with Joy and Confidence and watch it wither in pain. Put a bolt of satisfaction and of love upon your door, when it sees that you are guarded, it will come around, no more.

rang up "no bill," causing much

TOO NUMEROUS:
A dorky employee at an office boy

"Henry," demanded his surprised employer, "what in the world happened to you?"

"Well, sah, boss," explained Henry,
"I got into a life argument las' nite

"HERE'S TO YOU, DAD!"
We happened in a home the other night and ever the parlor door saw the legend worked in letters of red.
"What is home without a mother?"
Across the room was another bed.
"God bless our home."

Now, what's the matter with "God bless our dad?" He gets up early, lights the fire, boils an egg, grabs his slippers and wipes off the dew down with his boots while many a mother is sleeping. He makes the weekly hand-out for the butcher, the grocer, the milkman and baker, and his little pile is badly worn before he has been home an hour. He stands off the billiard and keeps the rent paid up.

If there is a noise during the night, dad is kicked in the back and made to go down stairs to find the burglar and kill him. Mother darts the socks, but dad bought the socks in the first place and the needles and yarn afterward. Mother does up the fruit; well, dad bought it all, and jars and sugar cost like the mischief.

Dad buys chickens for the Sunday dinner, carves them himself and draws the neck and the ribs after every one else is served. "What is home without mother?" Yes, that is all right; but what is home without a father? Ten chances to one it is a boarding house, father is under a slab and the landlady is a widow. Dad here's to you! You've got your faults —you may have lots of 'em—but you're all right and we will miss you when you're gone.

Some folks with a mean disposihis handwriting from that already appearing on the sidewalk.

ADVICE
TO THE LOVELORN
by
MRS. ELLSBURY
(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Where can I buy a mah jongs set, and is it possible to learn to play it from the instructions that come with the set?
Are they very expensive. MAUDE

Ans. I do not think the sets are sold in Roseburg, but all the large department stores in Portland sell them. It is possible to learn to play it from the instructions, but counting is very difficult. It would be well to take a lesson if possible, at the department store where you buy your set. The cheapest set possible to buy costs $14.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: In receiving men guests after one has been quite ill for some time, is it correct to receive them in a kimono, or negligee?
My daughter has been quite ill, and is now sitting in a chair although she cannot dress. Many of her friends wish to come and see her. The doctor said not to let her talk for long to any one. How should I tell them that she is tired without seeming rude?

Ans. It is all right for her to receive guests in a negligee under the circumstances. Callers after an illness expect that, and they also expect to be informed how long they can stay.

4,000 EXTRA BUGS FOR U. S.

(By Associated Press.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 23.
—Approximately 4,000 extra, beetle-grasshoppers and similar insects that banned for a brief lifetime among the trees and grasses of the south seas until recently, are now in San Francisco awaiting shipment to various parts of the United States for further classification by entomologists.

The insects were captured under the direction of Professor Frederick L. Washburn, head of the department of entomology of the University of Minnesota who arrived here with them recently. Professor Washburn embalmed and examined them over a period of six months. Most of the exhibits are from the Marquesas Islands where insect life had been very little studied before Washburn's arrival.

Many of the specimens are entirely new to the scientific world, according to the professor who says he does not know definitely how many specimens he has. It is to establish definitely all the genera and species he has that he intends to exhibit the aid of other experts on the subject.

Some of the insects are so numerous in the islands, Professor Washburn said, that insectivorous birds from China are imported to destroy them.

CORVALLIS BOY
IS BOOTLEGGER

CORVALLIS, April 23.—To make the sun shine is entirely within the possibilities of the Supreme Ruler, but even mortal man is capable of making the "moon shine." At least that seems to be the general verdict dues Quincy Garrett, a Corvallis boy was called into court yesterday for an interview with Judge Wilson.

Garrett was arrested in a local business house as he was attempting to dispose of a small quantity of his stock in trade. He is said to be one of the smoothest bootleggers that the officials have had to contend with, and according to common statements on the streets he has been successful in disposing of considerable "stuff" to the thirsty element in this community for a number of months. Officers have been on the alert for him, but until his arrest Thursday night he has managed to evade the law. He admitted to District Attorney McHenry that he had been engaged in the business for some time and intimated that his career has covered a period of approximately three years. Garrett admitted his guilt without a moment's hesitation and seemed to take pride in the fact that he had thus far escaped punishment.

Young Garrett intimated that he secured a large portion of his wares from Albany and the Sweet Home territory. He claims to have bought something like $2000 to $3000 worth of the Sweeties, two of whom were landed some time ago by Lin county officials and sent to jail, one of them escaping. Garrett said that he frequently sold $40 to $50 worth, and on the day of the big football game here sold $125 worth.

(By Lorin Britt.)
CORVALLIS, April 23.—Two O.
A. C. graduates are now doing relief work in the foreign field according to Loyal L. Wirt, American ambassador to the near east, who ad-

Leonard Harbhill, '12, at Artvin, Armenia, has charge of 22 tractors and is reeducating the adults of Armenia to self-support. Out of 25, 000 refugees that came to him 21, 500 of them are now self-supporting.
Under the supervision of Harbhill the production of foods in Armenia has been increased 50 per cent. Ethel Lowe, '29, has charge of the boys' orphanage at Djefel-Oghli, Armenia. She took charge of the orphanage in 1921 with 400 children under her care and now the number has increased to 1600.

Doctor Wirt is on a tour of the world and is a noted speaker. He has visited parts of Europe, Australia, Japan, South America, and China.
In Japan Doctor Wirt held conferences with Premier Shensawa who called in 71 newspaper correspondents to hear his lecture. He is just hitting the high spots in the U. S. and students felt fortunate in getting him to come to Corvallis.

heaviest shipments of wild animals ever to pass through the Suez canal arrived here recently from India. It included nine young elephants, having a combined weight of more than five and a half tons, seven tigers, and a number of Indian leopards, besides black panthers, Tibet bears, man-

AMAZING MEMORY
"EASY," SAYS GIRL

(International News Service) NEWPORT, N. H., April 23.—(Remembering people is easy when you give a little thought to the matter," so declares Miss Anna Kennedy, head waitress in the Newport House here, who has a memory that is the envy of many politicians and business men of this state when it comes to remembering names and faces. During the last six years it has been estimated that Miss Kennedy has met and called correctly approximately 28,000.
One should always repeat the name two or three times if possible, then see in mind some characteristic about the person addressed. For example, she says, Mr. Smith may have gray hair which he combs smoothly, a la Valentine, while Mr. Jones may have a bit of impediment in his speech.
And so it goes, for there are no two people in the world alike.

Miss Kennedy was educated to teach school but finds hotel work much better to her liking. She not only recalls the names of guests instantly but also remembers why likes or dislikes in most instances. They have regarding seats in the dining room.

HAWAII PROPOSES
ROAD TO VOLCANO

HONOLULU, April 23.—Haleakala the Hawaiian "House of the Sun" on the island of Maui, and the largest dormant volcano crater in the world, would be more accessible to residents and tourists under the terms of a bill now being considered by the territorial legislature.

The bill would appropriate $75,000 for the construction of a road from Makawao to the summit of the crater. At present the road is reached after a 25-mile automobile ride from Waikuku to Olinde, where the road ends. From Olinde the ride is by horseback. The distance to the crater from Olinde is only eight miles, but it is so precipitous and arduous that the trained mountaineers require three hours and a half to travel the eight miles over stretches of lava.

At the summit, citizens of Maui have erected a concrete padhouse with sleeping and eating accommodations for twenty persons, perched on the very edge of the crater.
The number of visitors to Haleakala has increased appreciably since this building supplanted a cave that was the only shelter provided previously.
The construction of the proposed road is expected to result in further increase in the number of visitors, as the terrors of the arduous horse-back ride have deterred many persons from making the trip.

Haleakala towers 10,012 feet above sea-level and the crater measures 19 square miles. The circumference of the rim is 20 miles and the crater is seven miles long by two miles wide. The walls of the

Quick
Quaker Oats
Cooks to perfection in 3 to 5 minutes

Now there's a new reason for insisting on Quaker Oats. Our experts have perfected a quick-cooking Quaker which cooks in 3 to 5 minutes. So it saves you out dish almost ready to serve.

It has our super-flavor. All Quaker Oats are flaked from queen grains only. We get but ten pounds from a bushel.

But in Quick Quaker the oats are cut before flaking. They are rolled very thin and partly cooked.
So the flakes are smaller and thinner—that is all. And those small thin flakes cook quickly.

Your grocer has both styles.
Both offer incomparable flavor.
Quick offers the quick-cooking oats in the world. Say which you want.
