Fines Are Paid—

Fines of $1 each were assessed against T. H. Hess and George Weaver today, when they entered a plea of guilty in the city court to charges of violating the parking ordinance. City Treasurer Thomas is acting as judge during the absence of Recorder R. L. Whipple.

Boasting Oregon—

A. L. Parkhurst, accompanied by A. L. Jr., proprietor of Nimrod Inn, one of the resorts of the McKenzie river country, stopped here last night at the Umpqua. They were en route to Medford, and are looking after tourist travel and, incidentally boasting Oregon as the greatest playground in all America.

Back From Portland—

Mrs. L. B. Moore, after spending three or four days in Portland, returned to Roseburg last night. While away she accepted the selling agency for the Columbia graphophone and records for Roseburg, and just as soon as the instruments can be supplied from the factory will carry a variety of models in stock. Owing to inability of the manufacturers being able to fill orders, it will be late in June before the instruments are available, with the possible exception of one or two. Records, however, will be carried in stock at once.

SPHINX CARVED BY NATURE

Impressive Figure in the Oklahoma Panhandle Evidently the Work of Wind and Sand.

America has a sphinx of its own. No master sculptor planned the massive head; no human hand formed the features. Yet there it stands, in the valley of the Cimarron river, in the Oklahoma Panhandle, a sphinx nevertheless rugged, aggressive and typically American, carved and fashioned by the sharp tools of nature—wind and sand. And all who go to learn the answer to its riddle will ask in vain; for the mouth is shut tight and the profile is unfriendly, as if the lonely figure had a heart of stone.

The "sphinx" stands in the midst of a hitherto little known wonderland that the construction of a state highway has opened up. Until comparatively recently the beautiful Cimarron valley was a hard place to reach; today automobiles whiz up and down the well-built highway that traverses the south shore of the river. On either side the walls of the valley tower for more than a thousand feet, and the grotesque wind-and-sand-sculptured rocks on every hand utter spell-bound.

The "sphinx," which is the chief wonder of the place, is the representation of a woman's head. The eyes, the nose and the mouth are perfectly proportioned, and the brown-tinted sandstone of which the figure is composed brings out every feature in sharp contrast, especially against a background of cloudless blue sky on a summer day. Standing alone on top of a small hill, she commands a view of the new highway for miles to the east and to the west. Perhaps her riddle has to do with the problem of our increasing motor traffic. If so, no wonder she is silent!—Youth's Companion.

THOUGHT EARTH HOLLOW

Peculiar Theory, in Which Many Had Faith, That Was Put Forward by John C. Symmes.

John C. Symmes (1779-1829) believed that the globe was hollow and inhabited. He claimed the earth was open at the poles to admit air, and contained within it other concentric hollow globes all inhabited in a like manner. In 1823 congress was petitioned to send an expedition to test out his theory, with himself in charge, but the matter was dropped. Humboldt states that Symmes often invited himself and Humphry Davy to descend to the earth's interior and investigate animal and plant life. Symmes said the inside of the earth was lighted by two subterranean suns which he named "Pluto" and "Prometheus." Arctic exploration and the discovery of the north and south poles proved part of his theory a myth.

An official of the Koshonah Unity says that the earth's concavity is proved by an actual United States geodetic survey—"A straight line extended at right angles from a perpendicular post over land or water surface will meet the water or surface of the earth, at a distance proportionate to the height of the perpendicular."

Four leaps ahead and still growing! The Roseburg News-Review is recognized as one of the latest papers in the state. The large circulation proves it to the most skeptical.

AFTER escaping the dangers of the World War, Jno. H. Adams' health was almost wrecked by rheumatism and stomach trouble. He says Tanlac fully restored him after everything else had failed.

"Rheumatism had me where I had to lay off from work for days at a time, and stomach trouble made my life miserable for two years. But Tanlac put me back on my feet feeling fine and I am more than glad to pass the good word on." is the clearest statement of John H. Adams, well-known ex-serviceman of 247 E. Broadway, Portland, Ore.

"I used to suffer from indigestion for hours after every meal and got so I almost dreaded to eat."

"The rheumatism hit me in the arms and legs like shrapnel and I was so racked with pain I was hardly fit for any sort of work. I fell off in weight from one seventy-five to around one thirty, and kept getting worse until I thought the medicine was not made that would set me right."

"But since taking Tanlac I've got back my old army appetite, digest every bite perfectly, and haven't a trace of the rheumatism left. I'm gaining weight right along. I certainly advise anyone to take Tanlac if they're in the fix I was in."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Take no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.
