Miss Josephine Baumgartner, of the University of Oregon, is the house guest over the week-end at the Harry Stapleton residence. Miss Baumgartner is Mr. Stapleton's niece.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harth, accompanied by Mrs. Souger and Miss Souger of Medford, who are house guests at the Harth residence, motored to Marshfield Wednesday, returning Friday.

Mrs. S. L. Moss of Ten Mile spent the week-end at Edenbower visiting at the home of Mrs. Davis and greeting old friends. Mrs. Moss formerly made her home in Edenbower.

Miss Lolita Lough, who has been employed at the Palace of Sweden, left this morning for Corvallis where she will join Mrs. Mae Murray of Detroit, Michigan, to visit with relatives of Mrs. Murray. Enroute to Michigan they will stop at Yellowstone Park and other points of interest. Miss Lough will spend the summer in Michigan, returning to Roseburg in September.

Miss Catherine Olson, and Miss Dora Thorsen, who have been teaching in the Roseburg Schools for the past winter, have taken a cabin at Idylld for the summer, and will spend their vacation there.

Miss Mary Mattley, who taught in the Roseburg High School, and who has many friends here, arrived in Roseburg Friday evening from Marshfield and will spend the week-end as a guest at the James Sawyers residence.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Do you think that it hurts a girl to work in a confectionery store. I want to go to work in one, and my mother won't let me do that kind of work. I am 16. We agreed to ask your opinion.

MOTHER & DAUGHTER.—It is not the kind of work that should be given preference if there is any other kind that can be secured. The work is honest and there is no harm in it, but the fact that confectionery stores are often lounging places for young people, and very often some undesirable characters, it is not the best place for a young girl. However if there is nothing else possible and you must work there is no real reason why you should not. You should try down certain rules of conduct for yourself however if you do and follow them closely.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Do you believe

In the old saying "that opposition makes love grow stronger." My daughter is 22 and of course is old enough to do as she pleases, but she is a very dutiful daughter and always listens to what I tell her. For the first time she is going with a young man that I do not wish her to go with. I have said nothing as I thought she would only go with him a few times and then it would be over and there would be someone else, but she is going with him steadily. Would I make her more determined to go with him if I opposed him? I do not want to cause a quarrel. ANXIOUS MOTHER.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—I do not believe in opposing a girl of that age. Give her all the opportunity possible to judge men for herself, and be sure that you are not too prejudiced also. Treat him as well as you can. Do the others that call on her, and show your daughter that you can be fair minded. She will be more ready to ask your advice if she is sure of that. Perhaps you will find that your prejudice against him is unfounded.

MOVIES

TO NEW FEATURE

"The Girl Who Came Back." Tom Forman's elaborate screen version of the stage production of the same title, proved a completely satisfying offering at the Liberty theatre where it will be shown tomorrow and Monday.

Cost, production and unusually beautiful photography are in keeping with the colorful story of the girl and her adventures. The story is told by the girl, Miriam Cooper, more beautiful than ever. Kenneth Harlan, and Gaston Glass—both recent acquisitions of the Schubert organization—Joseph Dowling, Za Fu Pitts, Ethel Shannon, and Fred Malatesta, make up the scintillating company of players used to interpret the story.

The untangling of an unusual situation provides the cast and Tom Forman the director of the feature, with splendid opportunities for a number of tense situations.

MABEL NORMAND AT MAJESTIC

At the Majestic theatre tonight, Mabel Normand again demonstrates that she has forgotten none of the humorous acrobatic tricks with which she delighted her friends in such pictures as "A Perfect Thirty-Six," "The Slim Princess," and others. The photograph in the Goldenrod production, "Head Over Heels," which had a long run as a musical comedy, "Head Over Heels" was directed by Victor Schertzinger and Paul Bern. In the supporting cast are Russ Powell, Hugh Thompson, Raymond Hatton, Adolphe Jean Menjou, Lilyan Tashman and Lionel Holmes.

MAYOR GETS LETTER FROM LOCAL KLAN

Klanmen Ask That Cases of Disorder Within the City Be Strictly Dealt With and That Laws Be Rigorously Enforced.

A letter was received today by Mayor S. Rice from Umpqua Klan number 5, urging the prosecution of cases of disorderly conduct arising within the city. The letter is as follows:

Roseburg, Oregon, June 1, 1923.
Mr. N. Rice, Mayor,
Honorable Sir:—

Again the local press carries the accounts of disorderly conduct in our fair city, and again such conduct besmirches Roseburg's good name.

You as Mayor of Roseburg have inaugurated "a clean city" program for which all right-thinking people will heartily stand behind you. We, the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, believe you mean by "a clean city" the purging of our city not only of material rubbish but also "human" rubbish.

Therefore, in the interest of our growing generation of manhood and womanhood; in the interest of Christianity; and in the interest of a clean city, we trust you will see that such persons are speedily dealt with according to our laws and by our duly constituted authorities to the end that such persons or persons will receive the full penalty of the laws and that Roseburg must be rid of such persons forever.

The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan stand for the protection of PURE womanhood and against any encroachment by such disorderly conduct as we have had in the recent past and in the last day or two by certain men and women.

You respectfully for a clean city. The Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, by Umpqua Klan No. 5, Roseburg, Oregon.

CLASS OF 1923 COMMENCEMENT

of trades to enter and unless these graduates are helpless cripples or hopeless drunks they can find their work to do and just where they belong. There is no excuse for this sort of a square peg trying to fit in a round hole.

"Some people think that when a boy or girl leaves high school they are capable of going out into the world and taking care of any trade or profession. That is entirely wrong. A high school education merely fits them to choose some profession or line of work.

"We must encourage the boys and girls to finish their high school education if they prepare them for the future. And when they leave the high school their education is by no means at an end. I do not say that it is absolutely necessary to attend college to become a success in this world. Some of the most successful and educated men of my acquaintance are not college trained men. I do say, however, that a college education will increase the chances of the average high school graduate for success tenfold. The situation here is more complex and the demands are greater.

"The high school education of the modern time equals the college education of a few years back. Roseburg has the reputation of having the best high school in the state of Oregon outside of the city of Portland.

"To you graduates I would say, get the best education this state can give you. The boarding of dollars and cents is not the only essential thing as some would have you believe. The richest rewards in life are not measured in that way.

"Do not be ashamed to be called dreamers. It is the dreamer who has raised the civilization of this country to the present high standard.

"In closing I will say that whatever calling these graduates will follow I hope they are good, honest, devoted American citizens, devoted to American ideals and citizenship. The highest responsibility in which anyone can aspire is to be a good honest American citizen.

"It is the test of true citizenship to be able to rise above class and sectional strife. The conflict between east and west, and between association is dangerous. If all of these elements would cooperate it would lay the foundation for the strongest citizenship in the world. The union of all peoples is the holiest thing in heaven. The ascendance of our class over all others. Democracy means the leadership of the intelligent. Society is more than self, state more than nation and humanity more than home.

Following the address a quartette number was given and Chairman Geddes of the school board awarded the diplomas. The names of the graduates were called and the diplomas handed to them. The diplomas this year were quite unique, each having a beautiful leather cover, with the inside lined with orange.

Three scholarships were awarded to members of the class. Those successful in winning the scholarships by their superior class work during the school year were Miss Marion Needham, Lillie Christopherson and Ethel Marks.

Rev. Hilton delivered the benediction.

The exercises were pronounced fine by all and the end of the 1923 class was an event not to be remembered.

The members of the class who received their diplomas last night were: Carmen Alterberg, Mae Barker, Nellie Baker, Jennie V. C. Barker, Leta Barker, Louise Barker, Leo H. CLEVER SWINDLE BY YOUNG WOMAN

A few days ago a young man appeared in the county clerk's office and asked a refund of money paid on a marriage license, stating that the young lady of his choice had changed her mind. It appears that the young man was not only the victim of a disappointed love but also of a rather unique swindle. From all information that can be gathered a very attractive young lady, accompanied by a male companion, is traveling along the coast, making a very profitable dollar by frequent engagements. Entering into a district she makes artificial advances to some young man, her male companion in the meantime keeping out of sight. After a short acquaintance she obtains a proposal of marriage and immediately accepts. Being quite clever as well as good looking she manages to persuade her prospective husband to advance her $100 or more for the purchase of a trousseau and with money in hand she and her companion journey on to the next locality leaving a young man who has received a very expensive lesson in the school of life, and who has little desire to expose the swindle because of the gibes of his acquaintances.

"A PURITAN WIFE"

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER XLIII

Ann and Dick ate in a quiet silence. As he rose from the table she said:

"Have you anything to say to me, Dick?" Her voice was steady, but she was very pale, and her eyes held a world of pain. She was in an agony of feelings that she had never had before—sick with shame—that the doctor, a stranger, that Hattie, should know, had heard Grace Edmund's pleading calls for Dick, her husband.

"It isn't as bad as you think, Ann," Dick spoke in a low voice not looking up.

"She telephoned you—she told—them—"

"Yes," she wanted me to take her to San Bernardino, or somewhere for a day—a sort of picnic. I told her I couldn't—and she said she'd take poison—kill herself. I never thought she meant it—that she would do it. She said she was bored—wanted a day just with—me, I'm sorry, Ann, but it isn't quite as bad as it looks."

As he finished his halting explanation, the telephone rang. Dick took the receiver in his hand, and called "Hello." Ann was looking at him, and saw an expression of pain on his face. Grace was calling him.

He put his hand over the mouthpiece, and said huskily:

"You hear this."

Quietly Ann took the receiver.

"Hello—glad you answered the call yourself, Dick! I told you I'd do things if you refused me. I gave them all a good scare! And I'd give them a worse one if I had. I had the old doctor, instead of that young know-it-all. Oh, it was great! Bess was scared to death! You were horrid, Dick, not to come up when I called. Ann got the shock of her life. I imagine I'll do more next time. I'll really keep my threat, then how will you feel? Why don't you say something, Dicky? Are you terribly angry—or are you sorry you didn't do as I asked you? I'm really sick, that stuff the doctor gave me—why don't you say something? Are you still on the wire?"

"This is Ann. I have been on the wire, not Dick. Your motion picture training evidently helped you stage your comedy."

"Put Dick on the wire, Ann, like a good girl! I was only trying to scare him."

"Dick is standing right there and does not wish to speak to you." Ann hung up, turned to look at her husband.

"I didn't mean to hurt you so, Ann," Dick said with an effort. Although he had heard nothing of what Grace said, he had seen Ann's face register horror, dislike, then such disdain as proved how utterly despicable the whole affair was to her frank, honest nature.

"Did you forget you were married, Dicky? Ann's clear but pain-ridden eyes bored into his.

"No, Ann! On my honor that is true. I liked Grace. She's so jolly, so full of fun," he shrugged his shoulders. "She's always had her own way and tried to get even with me for refusing her by playing a joke on me."

"The joke, 'on you' as you term it, Dick, came near being a tragedy for me. It was a cruel, heartless thing to do."

"Well, she'll soon be gone," Dick resumed his old careless tone. The explanation was over. He dismissed it easily.

"Gone? What do you mean?"

"Why, that's the reason she wanted a long day doing as she pleased. They are going to start the new picture soon, have sent for her."

Ann turned aside to hide the look of relief that swept her face. She believed Dick—that he had not broken his vows to her. But she also believed Grace Edmunds loved him, that she was unscrupulous, that she would hesitate at nothing, knowing nothing of what Grace might say, had helped her faith in him. He had sworn he had been faithful, yet had not asked her forgiveness for making her suffer, had really sworn very little contrition in spite of his explanation, his embarrassment.

But that was like Dick. As soon as he succeeded in making her know he had done nothing wrong, the affair lost much of its importance in his eyes. Grace was Grace! She had been a "damn fool" he said to himself, made him look one too, but she really hadn't meant anything, save to have her little joke. Now that Ann understood, why think of it any more.

Ann caught her lip between her teeth as Dick turned and left the room. Was he going to leave it like this? If only he had taken her in his arms and asked for her forgiveness for making her suffer, for so embarrassing her so frightfully.

Later she heard him on the porch whistling. She rose cleared away the dinner things, then commenced to undress. She was wearily tired, heart-sick; satisfied Dick was true, yet terribly disappointed also. He came in, and taking her in his arms kissed her, and said: "All's well that ends well—so don't worry any more over Grace's joke."

BELLOWS STORE TO REOPEN MONDAY

An announcement was made today that Bellows store will reopen on Monday under the management of Harold Bellows, nephew of Roy Bellows the former owner, and who until recently has been employed with Wilder and Asen. The new proprietor in taking over the drygoods and ladies apparel departments states that the same high grade lines of merchandise formerly carried will be continued and that the stock will be further augmented by new merchandise which will be purchased by the store's buyers at Portland the first of next week. Roy Bellows, who is retiring from the drygoods business, will maintain his radio department upstairs in the building.

The Conservatory orchestra will furnish fine music at Antlers, June 4th.

Every spoonful of Kellogg's Bran helps free you from toxic poisons!

Constipation is largely responsible for auto-intoxication that leads to dangerous diseases unless it is not only checked but permanently relieved. Constipation, in fact, is the basis of a majority of human ailments which could be headed off if people would only help rid themselves of this serious, health-undermining condition, which can be easily done.

Constipation must be fought to a finish—not with pills and cathartics, which are dangerous to the delicate membranes of the intestines and temporary at best—but with nature's greatest health food—Bran—Kellogg's Bran, which is as delicious as it is beneficial.

Kellogg's Bran is wonderful in its work because it is ALL BRAN. And to get permanent relief, ALL BRAN is a necessity, for it is the "bulk" of Kellogg's Bran that sweeps and purifies, ridding the system of poisons and bringing conditions to normal. Eat Kellogg's Bran regularly—at least two tablespoonfuls daily—as much with each meal in chronic cases—and we guarantee that you will get relief permanently and naturally.

Kellogg's Bran is delicious. You do not have to learn to like it. Eat it as a cereal or sprinkle on or mix with hot or cold cereals. Or, cook it with hot cereals, allowing two tablespoonfuls for each person. Kellogg's makes wonderful muffins, griddle cakes, raisin bread, macaroons, etc. Recipes on package.

Leading hotels, clubs and restaurants serve Kellogg's Bran in individual packages. All grocers.
