

"Turn To the Right" Play Really Powerful Sermon

Chautauqua Patrons Will Have Opportunity to Enjoy Great American Drama to Be Presented on Fourth Night by Professional Players, Coached by Elias Day of Chicago—Story is Clean, Wholesome and Delightful.

It's a familiar sign in every city, town and hamlet in the country today. It's a danger signal that might well be applied in traveling along life's highways and byways, too. Incidentally, it's the central theme in America's greatest comedy, which, paradoxical as it may seem, is also one of America's greatest sermons. Maybe that's one reason for its tremendous popularity. "Turn to the Right" is one of the most characteristic American plays ever produced and will be the opening attraction on this year's Chautauqua program. This celebrated play has been declared by competent New York critics to be America's greatest comedy, yet unlike many comedies it carries a lesson of great moral strength. The cast is professional, coached by Mr. Elias Day of Chicago, and they will present the play with the usual complete setting and costuming that characterizes the work of Mr. Day's many other successful companies. "Turn to the Right" will be remembered by many as having been given very effectively as a reading by Mr. Edwin Whitney several years ago. A run of 443 nights in New York City and 319 nights in Chicago is the record achieved by this admitted Broadway success—a success which proves conclusively that the people want clean, wholesome drama with sentiment, but not sentimentality; with comedy, but not burlesque. "Turn to the Right" furnishes this.

PRISONER SENT FROM HERE DEAD

PORTLAND, June 14.—Twelve hours after Frank Scarpino, Italian youth convicted of automobile theft had been released to the custody of his father by Federal Judge Bean, the youth died at the Deer sanitarium, Tuesday night, victim of tuberculosis. Young Scarpino, with four other youths, came before the federal court last summer on the charge of transporting an automobile which they had stolen at San Jose, California, to Portland. All were convicted. Scarpino and two others being sentenced to nine months each in the county jail and the fourth to Leavenworth prison. A short time ago it was discovered that Scarpino was suffering from tuberculosis and Assistant United States Attorney Ryan requested Judge Bean to release the youth to his father, who came from California to care for him. Local Italians had raised a purse to send the youth back to California. The father will return with the body to bury it near the family home. Scarpino contracted tuberculosis while serving in the army during the war.

Frank Scarpino, whose death is reported in the above dispatch, was sent to the federal prison from Roseburg. He was arrested by Traffic Officer Perkins, now deceased, with three companions, while they were engaged in stealing watermelons at Hillard. The traffic officer saw them in the field and arrested them and after investigation found that the car in which they were traveling was stolen. They were taken to Portland where they were tried in the federal court.

SAYS NEW YORK IS OASIS
NEW YORK, June 13.—Lord Castlereagh, son of Lord Kilmaree, owner of the Lakes at Killarney, said today on the steamship Titanic and said he was going home to "sober up."

"Really," he said, "I never saw so much liquor in America. Why I even got so I drank it before my meals for fear of losing some of it. Pardon me—but when does this prohibition law become effective?" Then, examining a more serious man, he declared he had found he could get liquor in any public place he had asked for it and in some places, he said, the waiters

RADIO INCREASES CATCH OF ENGLISH FISHERMEN

LONDON, June 14.—American fishermen off the Grand Banks and the Atlantic coast may find it profitable to emulate the success of their British brethren. The purpose is to enable them to communicate with the shore or with other trawlers whenever they discover a school of fish too large for their capacity. At a time when a remarkable shortage of fish is reported from the North Sea, some thirty steam trawlers have been fitted with wireless apparatus. It has been found that with the use of radio communication, large schools which otherwise would certainly be missed, can be taken in a short time by vessels which are in constant communication with each other and with the shore. The cost of radio installation is insignificant compared to the extra catch of fish it makes possible. Also the value of constant communication between the trawler crews shows why, in the opinion of the fishery department, the adoption of the wireless is the simplest and most obvious. If the supplies at one port are heavy, the owner can send orders for the catch to be landed at another port. If the catch is unusually heavy, by can take arrangements to facilitate unloading.

COWS IN GOVERNMENT HERDS

Average Official Records Give 10,910.7 Pounds of Milk and 451.36 of Butterfat.

Thirty-two official records have been completed by cows in herds owned by the United States Department of Agriculture. The average of these records is 10,910.7 pounds of milk and 451.36 pounds of butterfat. Only eight of the records were made by mature cows and 14 of them were made by cows under three years of age. Four of the records were made on rough-stone farms in the government farm at Huntley, Mont.

BRIDEGROOM, 81 WARNS AGAINST RAPID ROMANCE

But Doesn't Practice What He Preaches; Wins Bride After Four Months

SHE'S HIS THIRD, TOO!

Believes Young Folks Should Think It Over a Long While Before They Take Jump Into Sea of Matrimony

By WILLIAM G. CAYCE, (International News Service Staff Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 14.—Sixty-two long years ago—back in 1861-62—William C. Mothershead courted a pretty girl four years before he could persuade her she loved him enough to marry him.

Now, at the declining age of 81, he has married his third bride, Mrs. Phoebe Dumphy, 76, after a whirlwind courtship of but four short months.

However, with this record of speed to his credit, Mothershead looks upon his white-haired bride with a new twinkle in his eye and cautiously advises young folks on the verge of matrimony to look before they leap.

Their little four-room bungalow, nestled on the shady side of a street in Monrovia, is typically an old-fashioned "love nest." A huge honeysuckle vine covers the narrow but long front porch that extends across the front of the house. At the end of the porch is a climbing rosebush. Inside the "sitting room" floor is covered with a rag carpet, on which an old rocker creaks as in days generally thought to be gone. It was in this little cottage that Mothershead wooed and won his bride, for it is her property.

Living the romantic days of youth, the couple were shy and bashful when asked to "talk for the newspaper."

Bashful-like, despite his 44 years of married life, Mothershead fumbled with the back of the rocking chair and said:

"I don't know that I have any advice to give young folks who want to get married. I haven't had much experience myself." He paused and then went on:

Warns Young Folks:
"I do think, though, that young folks ought to think it over a great deal before they marry. There are too many of them going to dances these days instead of tending to business."

Mrs. Mothershead looked up with an easy smile and, in a gentle voice, said she thought dances were all right, if the husband takes his wife along with him. It is wrong, she said, for him to leave her home alone.

"Sure," the bridegroom put in, "I could dance a pretty good dance myself if there was a good old violin and a good hand playing it. But this present-day business—what do they call them, 'shiks'—if they would put on a little more elbow grease instead of fancy grease on their hair, marriage wouldn't be so much of a risk as it is with some young people."

"Yes," the bride agreed, "and for goodness sake if a fellow can't make a living for two of 'em let her turn in and lend a hand for a while." Mothershead nodded his head.

Mrs. Mothershead also added she did not think a girl should marry for money, but that she should not marry without money. They both agreed that to make married life easier and that to make married life a success neither should keep vital secrets from the other.

DANGER IN REMOVING MOLE

No Matter What Process is Employed, Operation is Likely to Have Grave Results.

Birthmarks are due to an overgrowth of the blood vessels at one spot in the skin. There are two kinds, the raised and the flat. The raised is the easiest to handle. The "strawberry mark," as it is called, is a reddish raised spot, appearing in the forehead or between the eyes of a new baby. There are several treatments for this, of which the best is radium. It should be removed soon after the appearance, as it leaves practically no scar while the child is still young. Any adult, however, with a strawberry mark which was not removed in infancy may safely undergo the same treatment with success.

Moles are really a form of birthmark and are due to an overgrowth of the pigment-forming cells of the skin. A mole is a potentially dangerous blemish. Many dermatologists use the electric needle, radium and freezing on moles, but all of these are dangerous because they may remove only the upper part and stimulate the rest to further growth. This results in the most malignant form of cancer and invariably causes death.—The DeLincator.

REALLY EXPECTED TOO MUCH

Man Probably is Cured of Idea That He Could Have His Own Way When Building House.

Once upon a time a Simple Soul came suddenly into Easy Money. "Now," he said to his wife, "we'll build that house you and I have planned so long, and you can bet that it will be exactly as we want it to be."

He saw an architect and builder. His office comrades offered suggestions. His first cousin and a granduncle, his brother-in-law and his wife's sister's husband's aunt, a man he met on a street car, a friend who'd dropped in to congratulate him, the butcher at the corner and a dealer who was trying to sell him an automobile—all gave him advice with unstinted generosity.

And when the house was built it had a groundwork of Tudor architecture, with Georgian and Colonial mingled, a touch of Gothic here and Old Dutch there and a great deal of what has been called early Rutherford B. Hayes. The architect, the builder, the office comrades, that first cousin and granduncle, together with the brother-in-law and the aunt of the husband of his wife's sister—they agreed privately that what the structure especially needed was the specialized skill of some one in the business of arson.

As for the original designs of the Simple Soul and his wife, they were ignored.

PISTACHIO NUT IN DEMAND

Article That Has Few Rivals for Flavouring Was Originally a Native of Syria.

The pistachio nut, which gives such a delightful flavor to confectionery and ice cream, grows on a small tree which is a native of Syria, but has been introduced into western Asia, countries of the Mediterranean, California and other southern states, although nuts of the best quality are imported from Syria, Persia and Arabia.

The pistachio is oval in shape, with red skin and a greenish kernel, growing in clusters and separating easily in halves. The flavor is delicious and the color makes it very valuable for decorative purposes. It is sometimes salted while in the shell and in some countries it is dipped in sea water in the process of curing.

The pistachio nut was known in very early times and it is said was the spices included in the presents which Joseph's brethren took with them from Canaan to Egypt, when Jacob said: "Carry down the man a present, a little henna and a little honey, spices and myrrh, nuts and almonds." When pistachio nuts are used for flavoring ice cream, a very small quantity is used and the color is often deepened by aniline green, which does not improve the flavor.—Cleveland News-Leader.

Chant to the Auto.

My auto, 'tis of thee, short cut to poverty—of thee I chant. I blew a pile of dough on you three years ago, now you refuse to go—or won't or can't. Through town and countryside I drove thee full of pride; no charm you lacked. I loved your gaudy hue, your tires so round and new—now I feel mighty blue, the way you act. To thee, old rattlebox, came many bumps and knocks; for thee I grieve. Badly thy top is torn; frayed are thy seats and worn; the crop affects thy horn, I do believe. Thy perfume swells the breeze, while good folks choke and sneeze, as we pass by. I paid for thee a price, 'twould buy a mansion twice; now everyone yells "Ice." I wonder why. Thy motor has the grip; thy spark plug has the pip, and woe is thine. I, too, have suffered chills, fatigue and kindred ills, trying to pay the bills since thou wert mine. Gone is my bank roll now; no more 'twould choke a cow, as once before. Yet if I had the yen, so help me John—amen! I'd buy a car again and spend some more.—Bay City Motorist.

Had Horror of Red Hair.

Red-haired boys and girls are, says Prof. Karl Pearson, the most conscientious, athletic and popular. Yet Madame De Boigne tells in her Memoirs how her friend, the duchess of Chevreuse, "conceived a horror of her children because they were indifferently enough to have hair of the same fiery red color as her own. Her chief preoccupation in life was to prevent people from knowing the color of her hair, and she neglected no means of disguising it. As the duchess' hair had grown somewhat during her last illness she ordered it to be cut and thrown into the fire before her eyes, so that no trace of it might survive her. Two hours after this was done the duchess died."

"Quaker Guns."

Dummy cannon are called "Quaker guns," in reference to the doctrines of nonresistance held by Quakers. The Confederate general, Joseph E. Johnston, speaking of his position at Manassas in early 1862, said: "As we had not artillery enough against their works and for the army fighting elsewhere at the same time, rough wooden imitations of guns were made, and kept near the embrasures, in readiness for exhibition in them. To conceal the absence of carriages, the embrasures were covered with shreds made of bushes. These were the 'quaker guns' afterwards noticed in northern papers."
