"A PURITAN WIFE"

By Jane Phelps

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Ann Peabody, a New England girl, marries Dick Belden, a California rancher. Dick has a bad habit of drinking occasionally, and then losing his memory. Grace Edmunds, a cousin of their nearest neighbor, is attracted by Dick. She is a beautiful stylish girl, but selfish, conceited. She tries to make Dick think Ann is intrigued with Hugh Norton. Hugh is injured and taken to Dick's home, where Ann nurses him. Dick comes in just as Hugh is telling Ann of his gratitude, and becomes jealous. He accuses Ann of unfaithfulness, then goes away and stays two days. In the further desire to "get even" he invites Grace over to stay with them. Nora scolds Grace. She goes back to Ned's. Ann declares she shall never cross her threshold again. Hugh goes to Dr. Grayson's. Grace arrives, and Nora tries to bar her out in vain. Ann, Nora and Jack leave.

CHAPTER XXIX

Dick stood on the porch looking after the three receding figures, a blank look on his face. He knew that in spite of Ann's seeming meekness, that once she declared herself, she meant what she said. A peal of laughter from Grace brought his eyes back to her. "Ann missed her calling! She should have been an actress instead of a rancher's wife," she said. "What an act! Nora, with her bare arms, holding me out; poor little innocent me, trying to get in to have a nice chat with Ann; just because she is jealous of me, marching out like a tragedy queen. Oh, Dick, how do you stand it?" "I wish Ann would be friends with you," Dick said solemnly. "It makes it damn unpleasant. She's overworked, nervous. That Norton here, and all," he finished peevishly. "Oh, Norton's being here didn't bother Ann. She wouldn't even let me go into his room unless Ned was along. She was afraid I'd steal him. She couldn't have worried—how she could look at him I don't see. You are worth a dozen of him any day."

"I'm hungry," Dick said. "Let's go in and see if there's anything to eat." Ann, with Nora beside her, now carrying Jack, halted when out of sight of the house. Where she would go, what she would do, she didn't know. She had scarcely believed that Grace would force her way in when Nora barred her way and told her she had been forbidden to admit her, so she had made no plans. Should she go to Ned's? Ned was Grace's cousin, might resent her action in locking Grace out. She knew no one else well enough to impose herself, baby and maid upon. "Where we going, Ma'am?" Nora asked. "I don't know, Nora. Stay here, I guess," Ann laughed a bit wildly. "I've got my money with me. Perhaps we can go somewhere and pay if an auto would come along and give us a lift."

Money. Ann hadn't even considered they might need money.

"How much have you, Nora?" "My two month's wages. I ain't spent none, was waitin' to go to San Bernardino to put it in the bank. It's lucky I didn't get a chance."

Nora took from the bosom of her dress a small purse and laid it in Ann's lap. Just then they heard the honk-honk of a motor. It was Doctor Grayson, returning from a call on a patient. He stopped, surprised to see Ann so far from home as foot, with Jack, and asked if he couldn't take them where they were going.

"The trouble is I don't know myself," Ann said. "I am going to remain away, Doctor, until Miss Edmunds leaves my home. I would try to hide things if I could, but it is no longer possible. I forbade her the house; she insisted upon coming. So I left. That is all there is to it, and please don't ask me any questions."

"You get in, all three of you," the doctor said. "I'll take you home with me, and then we'll talk things over. It is getting late. You can't stay here," as Ann seemed about to object.

They climbed in, Ann thinking she couldn't stay there because of Hugh. Dick would be sure to say and think she had gone to him. But perhaps Jack and Nora could.

Hugh limped out on the porch as the doctor drove his car in the drive. "This is a surprise! I didn't know the old tub would hold so many," he said sally, then as he saw the distress in Ann's face he added: "What is it, Ann?"

"Wait until we go into the house, then we'll talk," Doctor Grayson told him, with a nod toward Nora. "No, Hugh, I can't stay here," Ann said firmly, a half hour later. She had told him no more than she had told the doctor. She had not once mentioned Dick's name. It was, as she told it, simply a matter between her and Grace.

"Neither can you leave Dick and Grace in your home alone. You'd better call Ned and send him over. I'd go, but Ann, Dick doesn't like me, resented my being at your house. I don't know that I blame him, making you so much trouble and extra work, but my going there now might complicate matters. You go call Ned up. He's the proper person to talk to Grace."

Ann did so. She told Ned Grace was at the ranch alone with Dick; that she would not go back while she was there. "You and Grace quarreled?" Ned asked.

"I shall never go back while she is there," Ann said.

"I'll go right over, but I won't promise to take her away—unless she wants to go. You know, she'll do as she wants to, in spite of me or anyone else." Then: "Where are you, Ann?"

"Never mind, Ned. I'll call you later and find out if she has gone." Tomorrow—Dick Demands Apologies from Ann.

Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Miller attended the Grange meeting at Drain last Saturday, and report a most enjoyable evening. We hope to be able to attend the next affair of that kind as they reported the ice cream was served in dishes as large as soup plates.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker, who reside near Oakland, were visiting friends here last week. They were expecting to start on a two-months trip to Yakima, their former home, on the following day.

Mrs. Harrington, who has been at the E. H. Myers home for the past few weeks, went to Portland last week.

Miss Edna Myers spent the Fourth in Roseburg.

His old friends and neighbors here in Hayhurst were sincerely grieved on account of the death of Mr. Watson. Kindly sympathy goes out to the bereaved family in this sad hour.

Why This Doctor Advises HOKARA

SAYS IT GIVES INSTANT RELIEF
IN MANY SKIN TROUBLES

It is not often that a doctor comes right out and endorses any preparation, but when he does you may be sure it is something out of the ordinary. Read what Dr. Johnson, skin specialist, says about Hokara, the aseptic, astringent, greaseless cream:

"For over twenty-five years in my practice I have used many kinds of preparations called 'skin foods,' but never until I found Hokara did I see such beautiful and satisfactory results. I use it on all my patients. It cleanses the skin and makes it soft and fresh looking, producing firmness and giving power to the tissues. All those to whom I have recommended it are delighted with its use."

If you suffer with skin trouble so that the itching seems almost unbearable and the skin is so broken out that you are sensitive about your appearance, don't think it necessary to use some greasy, vile smelling ointment or salve. Just go to Nathan Fullerton, The Rexall Store, and get a bottle of Hokara. It is sold on a positive guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by
MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—My husband has never given me any cause to be jealous until lately that he has been doing something that I wonder if I should object to. He comes home from where he works about six o'clock every night, and for the last two weeks has been walking home every night with a girl that lives in our neighborhood that gets through work about the same time. It was a coincidence at first, but now he waits for her or she for him every night. I don't like it, but don't know whether I should say anything to him about it or not.

WORRIED WIFE.—I think you would be very foolish if you showed lack of trust in your husband. You would be wiser if you made the acquaintance of the girl and invited her to your home. Don't let your husband have friends that you do not know yourself.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—My husband goes out frequently to lodge, about twice a week, and sometimes he goes out three evenings. I know where he is each time, and he does not lie to me about where he is going, but what I object to is that he wants me to stay home every time he is gone. I have often wanted to go to the show with girl friends of mine, or riding, or to see some of my friends, but he just has a fit, and says that he does not want a wife gallivanting around alone at night. Do you think this is right? If he has outside diversions, shouldn't I also, as long as they are innocent ones?

ARBITRARY.—If the case is just as you state it, you are in the right. He should not try to tie you closely at home when he is gone himself in the evening. If you have already

WOMAN SICK TWO YEARS

Caused by Troubles Women Often Have—Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Medford, New York.—"I had a great deal of trouble such as women often have, and this affected my nerves. For over two years I suffered this way, then I read in the Buffalo Times about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and have taken it with very good results. I am very much better and feel justified in praising the Vegetable Compound to my friends and neighbors who suffer from anything of the kind."—Mrs. Wm. H. Adkins, 311 Elm Road, Medford, N. Y.

Feels Like Girl Sixteen
Rochester, N. Y.—"After my twin girls were born I was all run-down. My neighbors thought I was going to die. I saw your advertisement in the paper and bought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The first bottle helped me and I kept on taking it. I only weighed ninety pounds when I began taking it, and I have gained in weight and feel like a girl of sixteen. I never can say enough for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Nellie Douze, 16 Sumner Park, Rochester, N. Y.

HAYHURST NOTES

Mrs. Floyd Williams and Mrs. Clifford Hannan have been visiting at the home of the latter's father, Arthur Williams. We are glad to report that Mr. Williams is some better of his recent illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Francis made a flying visit to our valley last week. Mrs. Francis (formerly Miss Agnes Meyer) was a teacher here in the Hayhurst school for several terms, and both Mr. and Mrs. Francis have a host of friends in this community who are pleased to know that they are prospering in their new location in Lane county. Mrs. Francis is again engaged to teach the school where they live.

Ted Francis has been home helping I harvest his mother's hay crop. One thing we like about Ted is, that he can adapt himself to almost any kind of work, from the farm to the movie show. He can also run a shoe shop or do a good job of house painting, as well as make the nicest kind of cabinet work of many kinds. Now this is not an underhand attempt to advertise this young man, simply to give due credit to a high school student, who is out to win.
