

What will your children eat during the hot vacation days?

Too much meat in summer overheats the blood; too much starchy food often interferes with digestion.

Children must have plenty of energy-producing food, but it must be wisely chosen.

Grape-Nuts is a safe and satisfying summer food. It supplies the energizing nutriment of wheat and barley, together with the natural mineral elements which many foods lack.

Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food, crisp and delicious, easily digested and quickly assimilated.

Liberty Theatre

For D. W. Griffith to have done a mystery story in "One Exciting Night," a United Artists release coming to the Liberty Theatre today and tomorrow, is one of the interesting surprises of the present season. So accustomed has the Griffith public become to his spectacles and powerful dramas, that it is difficult to reconcile with his customary work this humorous, quick-twisting plot of mystery.

And as to how adaptable the mystery story is to the screen, Mr. Griffith has this to say:

"For the mystery play is one of the most difficult of all plots to portray in pantomime.

"The camera is much more resourceful than the stage to introduce mystery effects. It's greatest handicap is the terror and right and suspense that the voice can express on the stage."

"A PURITAN WIFE"

By Jane Phelps

CHAPTER LXXXIV

Dick looked almost as frightened as did Ann. Perhaps he understood even better than she how venomous Grace would be. They were undecided what to do next, which way to turn. Grace had the flivver, and she had Jack. But where she had taken him they could not imagine.

"I believe she is just driving around keeping him with her just to scare you," Bessie said. "She'll turn up before dark."

But inaction was impossible to Ann, and she urged they continue to search instead of waiting as Bessie proposed. But they met with no success, no trace of the flivver.

"You and Dick go home," Bessie finally advised. "Drop me off and keep the car. We have another. You may hear something, may need one."

There was nothing to do but take her advice. So Dick and Ann left Bessie at home and quietly, but with fearful hearts, went back to their ranch. Dick maintaining silence, scarcely appearing to notice that Ann occasionally spoke to him. Ann knew from his expression that he was in agony, blaming himself; but she also knew he would not acknowledge it.

Nora had brought a semblance of neatness again to the rooms, but grimacingly. She hated and despised Grace Edmunds, to clean because of her was maddening; then too, her thoughts were all a Jackie, her "lamb."

Ann and Dick sat down to the dinner Nora had prepared, but neither could eat, neither could they talk. Too much lay between them. Some day it would all have to be thrashed out, cleared away if they were to be happy again, but just now Jack's absence overshadowed all else.

Ann had telephoned the doctor. He had seen nothing of them or of Hugh. He hadn't shown up at the ranch where he was staying, or there.

"He may be on their trail," the doctor encouraged.

"I can't go to bed! I can't!" Ann declared when Dick urged it. "Go to bed when my baby is in danger!"

"Grace won't harm Jack, Ann," Dick replied. "And he likes her so he will not be unhappy. She is trying to frighten us."

But Ann would not even undress, and all the long night through she and Dick sat scarcely speaking, listening to every sound, starting up at the slightest noise. As soon as it was light Dick started off in Ned's car. Ann was refused to remain at home because of the chance Grace might bring Jack back there. She would not know Ann had returned, and might think she had frightened Dick sufficiently. But the morning wore away and still no one came. Bessie telephoned, said Ned had started to visit the neighboring ranches in the hope she might have gone to one of them.

It was nearly noon when Hugh Norton drove up with Jack in the seat beside him, a flushed and angry Grace in the tonneau. Ann flew out to meet them, gasped Jack in her arms, and with trembling lips questioned Hugh.

"Wait until I come back, Ann," he said. "I have to take my prisoner home first. Child stealing is a prison offense you know," he said gravely. Grace had not spoken, save as her baleful looks spoke of her hatred, her anger at being captured.

Jack was unhurt, and told in his baby way something of where they had been. A long ride, a funny house, and sleeping with "Gace." They would have to wait Hugh's return for the rest.

Before he came, Dick drove in. When he saw Jack safe in Ann's arms he broke down. He told Ann he hadn't thought she meant what she said when she declared she wouldn't remain in the house with Grace, that he thought she was trying to make him small. He said Grace didn't have any sense, didn't know how to do anything but chatter and look pretty. But while he made no apology, Ann knew that he was terribly sorry and ashamed of what he had done. Especially because of Bessie's insistence Grace should not be alone in the house with him, and coming to stay.

"One would think I should not have asked you to come back, Ann, if that had been true."

By and by Hugh came back. Dick knew he had found Jack, was anxious to know how and where. He seemed to have forgotten all his animosity against Hugh, and greeted him pleasantly—as he used to before his jealousy had been aroused.

"Tell us all about it, Hugh?" Ann asked.

"I followed them to San Bernardino. She had gone to an hotel, a small out of the way one. I threatened her, meant it too, told her I would have her arrested for child stealing. I knew the head of the police there and could have had her locked up. Gad, she's got nerve! She declared she would keep Jack. That I didn't dare do anything. She was frightfully angry at you, Dick. Said you had insulted her, had compelled her to leave after virtually making her mistress of your house. I didn't understand it all, but I got Jack."

To Be Continued.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—We are going on a motor trip and I am wondering if an auto baby bed that attaches to the back of the front seat, would be advisable for my six months' old baby. I have seen people using them around town, and have never noticed any tourists with one. I don't see why it wouldn't be practical for a trip like this. We have plenty of room for our luggage and the baby bed too.

SAMANTHA:—Yes, I think the baby bed would be very practical. It would also serve as a sleeping place for the baby at night, if you camp out. Probably the reason so few tourists use them is that they haven't the room for the bed and their luggage also.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—I have been engaged to a young man for several months that I think very much of. He is working now in another town, and I heard that he was going with a girl there. I don't go with anybody else, and I think we shouldn't if we are engaged. Shall I write and ask him about it or wait until he comes home. He has never mentioned in his letters that he has been going with anyone.

MARTHA ANN:—A girl is very liable to hear those things, but you will be wise if you give him the benefit of the doubt and do not believe them. At least wait until he comes home, and can explain himself.

GEORGIA MINSTRELS

For many years the country has been toured by the Famous Georgia Minstrels, a company of colored performers, who have established a clientele second to none, and the announcement that this company will be at the Antlers Theatre July 30 insures a crowded house, as this season they come with a bright new show with a few of the old favorites retained, but with a complete new olio of fifteen vaudeville acts, made up into a program that has plenty of "pep" and a lot of comedy. The wardrobe and scenery is as bright and new as a silver dollar, and the peculiar harmony of the singers is always welcome, while the music is a distinct feature.

WOMAN FIRST AIR DERBY ENTRY

(By International News Service.)

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—To a woman flyer goes the honor of being the first entry in the International Air Races of 1923, to be held at St. Louis Field, October 1, 2 and 3.

Officials of the St. Louis Air Board under whose auspices the big aerial meet will be held, today announced receipt of the first of more than 250 entries which are expected for the eight events. The distinction goes to Mrs. Bertha Dale Horchem, of Ransom, Kansas, who, in a trial here on July 5 last, reached an altitude of 16,900 feet—the highest altitude any woman has attained.

Mrs. Horchem is entered in the "On to St. Louis Race," for which the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce is offering a valuable trophy in addition to the cash award of $1,000. In this race, which is open to civilian fliers only, planes will be flown from all points of the country to this city, in deciding the winner points will be awarded on the speed, the distance and the number of passengers carried, as well as the horsepower of the engines.

Last year, in the similar "On to Detroit Race," more than 100 pilots from all sections of the country competed. The winner of the Detroit race was Walter H. Nash, of Wichita, Kansas, who took first place in a Laird "Swallow." It is a coincidence that Mrs. Horchem, also a Jayhawk pilot, the same type of airplane.

Officials of the St. Louis Air Board also announced that entries from women are expected to come in rapidly, as a complete distribution of entry blanks and race regulations has been made.

It is known that the army and navy particularly are grooming their war planes for the various races in which military entries will be received, also that a number of new airplanes of radical design will compete.

To Myrtle Creek—Miss Stella Parks, of Yoncalla left Saturday afternoon for Myrtle Creek where she will spend the remainder of the summer.

Mr. Cloake In—Kenneth Cloake of Garden Vale was in town Saturday and purchased a Fordson tractor. The sale was made by the C. A. Lockwood Hardware Company.
