TRAVELER'S PHILOSOPHY

The idea prevails among many travelers, that it is not much use to try to economize when you are away from home.

They will consequently go to high cost hotels and spend money with greater lavishness than they can afford.

Reasonable economy however can be practiced in traveling just as well as at other times. People with a philosophical turn of mind will not demand that they have perfect comfort in every respect.

People who are going to get the full benefit of their summer outings ought not to be too fussy about the little details of comfort.

His purpose is to observe his country, and look over unfamiliar scenes and meet people of different sections. It is a rewarding experience and like most good things of life, one has to pay a price for it.

Mr. Godfrey, of the Brooklyn, N. Y. bureau of charities, gives his views about professional beggars in the Better Times magazine.

While the peak of the so called "crime wave" may have passed, yet there is still a tremendous amount of stealing going on, and the tribe of gentry who thrive by "frisking" pocketbooks is very large.

Health, love and sufficient money for comfortable living are the most important things in the world, in the order named.

Some time has passed since those joyous times when the butcher used to always throw in a meaty bone for the dog to munch on for several days.

The people who buy goods out of town are often the same ones that complain because the town does not grow faster.

Not merely are fears expressed that oil will become scarce, but there is a terrible shortage of elbow grease.

The morning postman came around with stacks of mail today. We chatted over this and that and then he went away to leave me with the many friends I'm proud to say are mine.

The bills I quickly laid aside, the rest I read with care. It seemed I had a line or two from nearly everywhere.

I like to take an envelope and hold it in my hand and wonder who the sender is, and what will be the brand of conversation it contains.

If getting mail appeals to you the way it does to me, and if you'd like to have a friend perhaps you'll never see, just drop a line and say Hello in friendly haw-de-do.

Too many people try to be a howling success by just howling.

A statistician claims that 50 per cent of the people go into banks to fill their fountain pens.

The outlook in the motor car trade is excellent, as there are still thousands of houses that haven't been mortgaged to buy cars.

If it wasn't for the payroll, business would be a happy pastime.

"In what state were you born," asked the questioning officer. "Naked," answered the wise/dumb-bell.

THE POOR BALD HEADED MAN.

A clerk in a Centerville, Ia. shoe store, whose head was almost bald, was trying on a pair of shoes for one of the females of the species. She was paying more attention to these around her than she was to her feet.

"You seem to have been in a serious accident."

"Yes," said the bandaged person. "I tried to climb a tree in my motor car."

"What did you do that for?" "Just to oblige a lady who was driving another car. She wanted to use the road."

From all I kin gather, this here free love costs considerable.

FIRPO AND WILLS LOGICAL CONTENDERS

By HENRY L. FARRELL, (United Press Sports Editor.) NEW YORK July 25, (United Press)—Just a year ago Jack Dempsey was dazed practically into retirement because of the scarcity of "logical contenders" for the heavyweight championship.

Every aspirant for the title was loaded down with some kind of a "too" that would not develop the steam necessary to put over one of the modern heavyweight scraps.

In the short space of a few months the whole situation was turned over, several "too's" were removed and now Dempsey has in the makes enough work to keep him busy for a year and bring him another fortune.

Tommy Gibbons was the biggest factor in bringing the heavyweight division back as the leader in the biggest reason that boxing has known in a decade.

It was Gibbons who exploded the popular belief that Dempsey was too good for any of his rivals and that the best of the contenders for the title would be little better than a setup for the champion.

When Gibbons went through fifteen rounds with Dempsey without being knocked off his feet, Dempsey lost all his claim to the title of an invincible superman, and it was only logical to figure that if a light heavyweight like Gibbons could keep Dempsey away for fifteen rounds that some heavier man with a little class, could give the champion a great battle.

Some opinion exists that Dempsey "carried" Gibbons for the very purpose of destroying confidence in his ability so that he could get some big shots against the other contenders.

Dempsey's poor showing against Bill Brennan the last time they met, when Brennan went twelve rounds with the champion, made the Carpenter fight possible, because the public figured that the champion had slipped and that the Frenchman would have a real chance to win.

Perhaps Dempsey did not extend himself against Gibbons. No one knows but Dempsey, but few who saw the fight at Shelby on the Fourth had many doubts that the champion was doing his best and that he really tried to knock Gibbons out.

As a result of that bank-wrecking Shelby affair, Dempsey has two big fights in prospect with Luis Firpo, the South American giant, and Harry Wills the big colored stevedore. Another match with Gibbons would also be an attractive card.

BRUTE LOVERS PREFERRED BY COLLEGE GIRLS

Syracuse Co-Eds Admit They Crave Cave Man, But He Must Be Polite, Too

PAIN ESSENTIAL TO LOVE

Girls Believe That Some Suffering Is Necessary to Make Affection of an Enduring Quality

By CHESTER B. BAHAN, (International News Service Staff Correspondent.) SYRACUSE, N. Y., July 25.—Is greater love inspired by the faultlessly polite wooer or by the brute cave man?

Syracuse university co-eds generally agreed in response to questions propounded just prior to the close of this year's term that it's the man who arouses the primitive instincts of jealousy and anger and fear, who makes suffering and perhaps torments with his cave man ways!

Nine out of ten of the Syracuse aspirants to love and marriage shake hands on the fact that it's the love that carries some degree of suffering that is enduring. And this, they claim is to be found in marriage with a cave-man lover.

Likes Caveman. "Yes, sir; I like the caveman!" admittance Miss Vivian Watkins, '25, third vice president of the Women's Student Governing Association.

"Give me a polite man with just a touch of the caveman," said Miss Dorothy Coleman, '23, president of the Phoenix Literary publication.

Miss Dorothy Coleman, '23, president of the Women's Student Governing Association, has her own ideas about the kind of man to marry. "He must be good looking, with personality and intelligence, and, of course, the necessary politeness of a gentleman. He must be a real he-man."

Wants 'em Strong. "Give me a caveman every time. A very strong one—one who is not afraid to express his feelings. That kind of a man is more appealing; that's what Miss Doris C. Bonham, vice-president of the sophomore class thinks about it.

Some are a bit wary of committing themselves by reason, perhaps of the bejeweled pins above their palpitating hearts, but a keen eye can perceive a flash of interest a knowing look and uncontrollable smile when the word "caveman" is broached to them.

In Syracuse Hill vernacular, the caveman "goes big" and the faultlessly polite wooer who gives in to the slightest whim "is out of luck."

VACATION SCHOOL ENDS THIS WEEK

The Vacation Bible school of the Christian church has entered the last week of the course and will close Friday. The work has proved a success and much has been accomplished in training the children. The attendance has been good throughout the whole session and much interest has been taken in putting the thing over in proper shape.

What Would You Do?

If you were a stenographer, clever and attractive, but had never had the advantage of much education or social training—if you were such a girl and a wealthy young bachelor asked you to marry him, what would you say?

Natalie Horton said yes.

As Mrs. Horace Crandell she found that her official training had not equipped her to take her place successfully among her husband's friends. If that happened to you, what would you do then?
