CARLOAD OF PEARS SHIPPED TO CHICAGO

The first carload of pears to be shipped out of Douglas county was loaded today by Fred L. Strang, local representative of Denny and company. The pears were taken from the orchards of Fred Hamilton, C. A. Brand and C. H. Clapp of Garden Valley, and are choice Umpqua valley fruit and should command a top price. The car is being sent to Chicago upon consignment. At the present time the outlook on the pear market is not good, but it is believed that the price will improve as the season progresses.

CHAPTER III

Among Natalie's admirers was Clyde Blackwell, a young clerk in the office. He was very much in love with Natalie, and before Horace Crandell's appearance on the scene had been quite often in her company. Etta approved of Clyde; he was steady, ambitious, had earned his way through college and had his way to make in the world. He took Natalie to the movies, for an occasional Sunday outing, and saved out of his slender salary so that sometime he might be in a position to ask her to marry him.

Natalie liked Clyde. He was a good-looking, wholesome fellow, and sure to get on even if he had nothing but prospects. He knew of her friendship with Crandell and watched it grow with apprehension. Like Etta, he believed this friendship could lead only to unhappiness for Natalie. But, unlike Etta, he didn't believe Crandell would want to marry Natalie; he thought his rival was simply amusing himself, as so many rich young men do.

Unknown to Natalie, he kept a sort of watch upon Crandell and made inquiries about him. But he discovered nothing save that he was one of a coterie of young fellows whose money gave them freedom from work and the means to have a good time.

Indeed, Horace Crandell had rather an enviable reputation among his intimates. He "played the game" squarely, and so far so scandalous of any sort had attached itself to his name.

Clyde had seen Natalie riding with him in his perfectly appointed motor car, had noticed how frequently Crandell made errands to the office. And he swore under his breath to make Crandell suffer if he were playing with Natalie.

"Natalie, I love you, dear! Will you marry me?" Horace Crandell leaned across the table where they were dining, screened from others by tall plants.

Natalie had known he would soon speak—what woman doesn't?—but even so, his abruptness startled her. "Why, Horace—"

"Don't say no, dear. I can't live without you, my lovely Natalie."

Lovely she was with her warm color coming and going, her downcast eyes, the lashes sweeping her cheeks.

"But, Horace, we are so different! I am just a poor working girl. And—"

"But you love me, Natalie—tell me?"

"Yes, Horace, I do love you." She raised her eyes to his face. "But—"

"Then but me no buts! Oh, you darling! And you'll marry me soon?"

"I haven't said I'd marry you ever, yet," she returned saucily.

"But you will!" He reached across the table and drew her hand to his lips.

"What will your mother say?"

A floating shadow crossed his face. Then he smiled gayly:

"Wait until she sees you! She's sure to love you."

The wedding had been quick, and now that he knew Natalie loved him Crandell was all eagerness to possess her entirely. A month, he declared, was absolutely as long as he would wait. But Natalie laughingly refused to consider so short an engagement.

"Why, I have oceans of things to do—before," she hesitated. "There's my position with the firm. I can't leave Mr. Marshall until he finds someone to take my place, and I have to have clothes, Horace. Not many!"

"But none. Don't ask me to set the day now, dear. Give me a little time to get used to you. Why, we have known each other only a few weeks."

"We never will know each other any better until you marry me and I can take you away from that awful boarding house. I can't call on you there. Had to ask you to marry me in a public place, and while I am dying to take you in my arms I have to sit on the opposite side of the table! You mustn't keep me waiting, dear."

"No longer than I can help, Horace, Natalie replied.

The next day Horace brought her a ring, a wonderful stone that caused Natalie to exclaim in delight.

"A sign of bondage, darling," he said gayly. "Dedicated to my love."

Tomorrow—A Trying Situation.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—I would like to ask you if it will put you to no trouble to answer, could you please advise me as to my complexion. I am 18 years old, and have real light hair, and a terrible red face, and the sunburn makes it redder. I always have a red face, and I am ashamed of it now. How can I remedy it?

X. X.:—If this condition is really excessive I would advise you to consult a physician. If it is merely local I might be able to help you some. First I would advise you not to allow yourself to sunburn. It is not necessary, and if it only aggravates your condition there is no use of it. If you are overweight this might easily be the cause. I would advise you to eat no rich food of any kind, and avoid violent exercise. As a local means of helping this condition, try using a good vanishing cream, followed by a light dusting of pure powder with a puff. This will help your appearance, and tone down the color.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—How old do you consider a girl should be before she starts going out with her boy friends?

H. M.:—This depends a great deal on the girl herself, and upon her boy friends. As a general estimate I would say 17 or 18, and only then with boys that you have known for some time, and about your parents approve of.

and under it. Moreover he had no outside aerial. The "purified" messages were received so distinctly that the sounds could be heard several yards from the carpieces.

In messages from the United States, M. Marrec explained, each letter has now to be repeated three times and each word twice, after which they still require to be deciphered by a keen expert. Under the new system, according to the inventor, a message need be sent only once, and it is recorded in ink on paper. Transmitting stations of immense power and great cost, such as the American and British governments propose erecting, could be replaced, he said, by a series of lower power stations transmitting automatically.

CHANGE OF LIFE LOSES TERRORS

For Women Who Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Pa.—"I took your medicine through the Change of Life and it did wonders for me. I was down in bed when I started to take it and weighed 95 pounds. I had hot flashes and was so nervous and weak that everything would get black and I could not see. I would sit and cry and did not know what I was crying for. Since I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel younger than I did ten years ago, and my friends all tell me I look younger, and I owe it all to the Vegetable Compound. I do all my household work for a family of seven now. I will be glad to answer any woman who writes me in regard to my case."—Mrs. JOHN MEYER, 65 Union St., Greenville, Pa.

Many letters similar to this have been published testifying to the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. They are sincere expressions from women who describe as best they can their feelings before and after taking this well-known medicine. Many times they state in their letters their willingness to answer women who write them. It is an offer dictated by gratitude and a desire to help others.

MOVIES

Antlers Theatre

Through the sombre setting of "Trifling Women," Rex Ingram's strange story, of which he has made a film production, at the Antlers Theatre, moves the brilliant figure of Zareba, the fortune teller, the only woman in the picture, played by the beautiful Barbara La Marr. Against the background of the story, Rex Ingram has made her a part of radiant color, garbed in an infinity of hues, draped in exotic silks and satin, rich velvets and brocades.

It is estimated that upon the fifteen gowns worn by Barbara La Marr in the production over $20,000 has been spent, bringing the cost of each gown to more than a thousand dollars.

Throughout the two months of production the two months of production, and because of the intricacies of design and pattern were barely able to keep pace with the demand.

The story of "Trifling Women" takes place in Paris in the days of the Great War. Thus the gowns, ordered by Rex Ingram, must be made to reflect the exquisite lines and skill with which a Parisienne couturier would have incorporated them.

Majestic Theatre

The newest Playhouse film "Through the Storm," as the feature of their program for tonight. "The Horace M. Pinkham production depicts a powerful drama in which a wife's heart and soul are tossed in life's storm. But after the storm comes the rainbow, and her happiness she found all the more precious for the trouble she had been through enough to conquer. The story is replete with heart interest, action and suspense. Edith Stockton and Louis Kibbell are the featured players.

Liberty Theatre

"Flames of Passion," which opens at the Liberty Theatre beginning tonight for a two day engagement, is a story of strong men and the great outdoors, all of its scenes being laid in the great timber lands of Oregon. To those who enjoy the thrills which can be found only in what must frankly be termed as melodrama, this picture will provide wonderful entertainment. The direction is excellent and it is apparent, at all times, that every effort has been made to faithfully reproduce the real atmosphere of logging camp and lumber mill. This is a fast action picture from start to finish and offers many thrills such as a runaway log train, a really fierce forest fire, one of the roughest conflicts between men ever caught by the camera, and the rescue of the heroine just as she is about to be torn to pieces by the ruthless teeth of the lumber mill's giant saw.

CLAIMS ELIMINATION RADIO INTERFERENCE

(By Associated Press.) LONDON, Aug. 2.—An instrument which, it is claimed, marks the most important advance in wireless telegraphy yet made, is described by its inventor, a Frenchman named Yvon Marrec, as eliminating trailing and interference and reducing the cost of wireless messages by at least one-third.

The new device receives and prints wireless messages on tape, something which, it is claimed, has never before been accomplished.

M. Marrec employs a supplementary apparatus consisting of a series of low frequency valves, which eliminates all extraneous sounds one by one, with the result that the message for which the machine is "tuned in" comes out as clearly as though there were only one operating station in the world. Besides suppressing "parasitic noises," the apparatus completely eliminates every interfering message sent out from other transmitting stations.

In an official test for the British government recently, the French inventor submitted his machine to the most severe conditions. He received messages from the powerful station near Port Jefferson, Long Island, free of all interference or jamming. He chose for the test an ordinary office in one of the noisiest parts of London. His electric trains and motor traffic rang all around and
