SPEAKING OF SILENT MEN.

Commenting on the nation's new president, Calvin Coolidge, the Los Angeles Times has the following to say:

At the present time the characteristic of President Coolidge most deeply impressed on the American people is his brevity of speech. There are, however, a great many more who are loquacious for the same reason. Other things being equal, the world prefers those who can put their thoughts into a few words and at the same time get their meaning across.

Calvin Coolidge belongs to this class of thinkers. He has the gift of pithy expression. He is never prolix. In conferring on him the degree of doctor of laws at Amherst college, President Meiklejohn complimented him on his "adequate brevity."

Adequate brevity! A priceless gift—and how rare! How many editors, how many congregations, how many jurors, how many students, how many readers, how many suffering individuals would part with their dearest possessions to see the world populated with the adequately brief!

On this one score alone Calvin Coolidge deserves the gratitude of his fellow-citizens

Turn back the pages of history and follow the careers of the men who did big things. Some were preachers, teachers, lawyers, those whose profession it is to talk. But outside this group—and sometimes, indeed, inside it—the great leaders were mostly men of few words. They were never garrulous when time was the essence of the contract. A great soldier must perforce be brief.

William the Silent, that sturdy son of Holland, who saved The Netherlands from the yoke of Spain and laid the foundation of the Dutch republic, was a shining example of what the adequately brief can accomplish.

Oliver Cromwell was another leader who changed the government of a country by actions unadorned with speech. When he made himself dictator of England, he merely pointed to the speaker's mace in the parliament house and exclaimed, "Take away that bauble!" No rhetoric, no flow of oratory, no explanations for the Puritan soldier.

Bismarck, again, who bound the loose Teutonic federation into a solid empire, obtained a maximum of results with a minimum of talk.

Some of our most efficient legislators have been men like Senator Crane, who made themselves felt rather than heard. Even those who have employed the gift of oratory to win the hearts of the people live in a few concise, sharp sentences, not in the impassioned, flowery peroration.

The greatest speech in history consisted of but 267 words and took only three minutes to deliver. But it gave the American nation a "new birth of freedom."

And the simplest soul can read, mark, learn and inwardly digest the greatest sermon ever preached in about twenty minutes. Yet the Sermon on the Mount contains all that has ever been said since in the subjects of religious thought, conduct and political economy spread out over wearisome square miles of printed paper.

Nobody is going to find fault with President Coolidge for his "adequate brevity."

A tax-exempt bond is a fine thing for the fellow who owns it but it is tough on the industry which has to raise money for development purposes by the sale of securities which are taxed in every known manner, remarks an exchange. It is tougher yet on the wage-earner who has to pay double taxes through higher commodity prices which must be charged by producers who pay double taxes to raise needed revenue to support the government, in order that no taxes be levied against the income from billions of dollars of tax-exempt bonds. The longer we delay amendment of the law which now provides exemption for public securities, the greater will become the tax burden on industry and the individual.

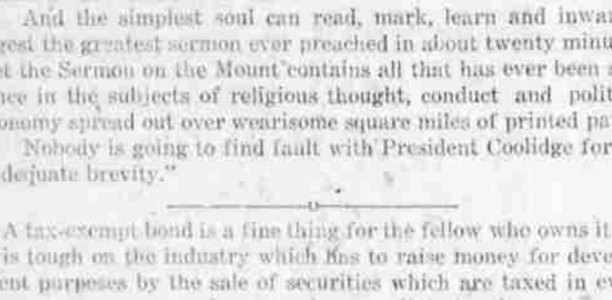
If motorists are unwilling to drive in the road, they should reflect that it is softer in the ditch than up against a tree or rock.



Dear Folks:

Bill Helmick was a handsome man of six foot two or three. One thing there was that Bill would guard, that was his dignity. His wife was fond of household pets, canaries were her joy, but Bill would call each bird of hers a useless, childish toy.

Imagine then the way he felt when Myra said one day, "Miss Sprague will keep my birdies, Bill, while I am gone away. It's taken weeks of hunting 'round to get them safely placed, so you will have to take them, dear, I'm leaving in such haste."

Bill almost wept, but Myra won, such news is never new. Before he'd gone a dozen steps he heard a "How-de-do." It seemed that every friend he had was 'round to stop and stare, to see his face of misery plumb full of blank despair. To make it worse the birdies sang and chirped in spirits gay. Bill's dignity began to ooze then faded quite away. "Be careful, Bill, you'll lose your pets," "My what a pretty sight." Such words as these at every step made Bill just long to fight.

He gave the birds up with a groan. Miss Sprague said, "Thank you much. I s'pose you'll call to take them back?" Bill's answer was, "Not much! I love my wife and always will, but take this tip from me. Canaries and her loving Bill right here part company."

PRUNE PICKIN'S

BY BERT G. BATES

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—
The flapper looked
Into the mirror
Shook her bobbed head
Dabbed a little
More paint on her snoot
And muttered,
"Well clothes, I'm
Going down town—
If you want to come along
Hang on."

DUMBELL DORA THINKS
A cowslip is an accident.

A contrib sends in this one which oughter hit a few local townsmen right square between the optics:

PRAYER OF A KNOCKER

Lord, please don't let this town grow. I have been here for thirty years and during that time I have fought every public movement. I have knocked everything and everybody. I have done all I can to keep this town from growing and never spoken a good word for it. I have knocked hard and often. When ever I saw anyone progressing and enjoying himself, I have started a movement to kill the business or stop the fun. I do not want the young folks to stay in this town and I will do all I can by rule, law and ordinance to drive them away. It pains, me, O Lord, to see that in spite of my knocking this town is beginning to grow. Some day I fear I will be called on to put down sidewalks in front of my property to keep up the streets that run by my premises. This, Lord, would be more than I could bear. If would cost me money, though all I have made has been right here in this town. Then, too, more people might come if the town begins to grow, which would cause me to lose some of my peace of mind. I ask, therefore, to keep this town at a standstill. Amen.

Roy Bellows, who is known as one of the best animal trainers this side of the Cascades, is now engaged in training moths to eat holes like lace.

Following is an advertising idea of a news story.

Robert Steele, eight years old, Anyole avenue was fatally shot while playing with a Swiss & Messen revolver yesterday afternoon at Ipswich and Sacatchawan avenues, in front of Schneldtmeire's Sanitary Apothecary.

The bullet, entering the left side, punctured a suit just purchased at Heppelwhite's Department Store sale now in progress (see 1 inch 2 column advertisement on back page of this paper.)

The boy was attempting to open a "Sanitary-sealed" package of "Jim Dandy" animal crackers with the barrel of the revolver when the exclusively designed trigger, just patented, fell. The cartridge was of the Powerless brand, recently introduced to the trade.

When the youngster fell to the pavement a Never-Squirt fountain pen, in one of his coat pockets, was badly crushed, but is still fit for further use, it being saved by a triple-ply composition rubber case, furnished to each purchaser without extra charge.

The funeral will be held from the Genteel parlors of the Grave Diggers' Undertaking establishment on Tenth street, just opposite the newly erected plant of Hermanstenis' Soy Bean Canning Company.

An "Imperishable Metallic Casket" made only in this city, will be used. Flowers will be furnished by the Dandi-Lione Floral Company who catered to the funeral of Mrs. S. H. C. Buffington-Blubb, the noted society leader, when she died later of acute indigestion recently.

The man in Chicago who fell through a skylight knows just now how it feels to be thrown through a windshield.

An Iowa girl has been called the champion hog feeder. But many a married woman feels that she could easily qualify if she wanted to speak out in meeting.

Did you ever hear of a pair of shoestrings which outwore the shoes?

Saw Al Creason on the main stem yesterday and he was the personification of coolness without his collar.

It might be well for visitors to remember that a welcome soon wears out.

PHILOSOPHY

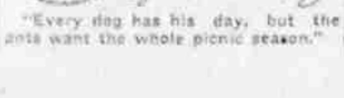
When a bit of sunshine hits ye,
After passing of a cloud
When a fit of laughter gits ye,
And' your spine is feelin' proud
Don't forgit to up and fling it
At a soul that's feelin' blue,
For the minute that ye sling it,
It's a boomerang to you.

Some people are born poor. Some have poverty thrust upon them, while some people buy oil stock.

Truth is stranger than fiction—the way some people tell it.

THEY NEVER DO IT

It is easy enough to be happy
When one has beauty and youth;
But the girl worth while
Is the one who can smile
Right after she's lost a front tooth.



"Every dog has his day, but the ants want the whole picnic season."
