Entered as second class matter May 17, 1920, at the post office at Roseburg, Oregon, under the Act of March 2, 1879.

ROSEBURG, OREGON, TUESDAY, AUGUST 21, 1923.

THE SHEIK TYPE OF HUMANS.

An expressive slang expression is that of "sheik" as applied to a certain type of young man. Also girls of a somewhat similar temperament are referred to as "shebas." Dr. Laforge, speaking before the American institute of homeopathy in Chicago, suggested that a sheik was a handsome young man of the matinee idol type, who has a violent aversion to work and who wears quite pronounced styles of clothing. Girls of the similar type can also be recognized by extreme styles of clothing and beautification. Names and phrases by which such people are known vary from year to year, but the type always exists. Men of much the same kind were formerly called "dudes." The world appreciates neatness and attention to dress, but when men begin to wear clothes to fascinate the other sex, common sense recoils. Idleness and lack of high aims are the conditions that produce people of this type. The insurgent impulses of youth demand some form of expression. If they are directed into wholesome athletics and useful lines of work, the desire for achievement finds expression in a rational way. But there are many fellows of an idle type who in their lazy hours of leisure turn to conquest of the female sex as the form of achievement that appeals to them. A superfluity of extravagantly fine clothes is one favorite method for dazzling the women folks. The fellows of this type revel in the game of following young womanhood, and they take as much satisfaction in this form of sport as a healthful minded boy will get out of athletic or business success. The girls of a similar type show the same characteristics. Parents of children who display these tendencies should watch out that they do not get much time for idleness.

MUST GET O. K. ON LEVY.

The O. K. of a new commission is necessary before any county, district or city tax levy can be valid for 1924 taxes, says the Oregon Voter. Officers of the various tax-levying bodies are just awakening to that fact. When they are fully awake there will be some scrambling very much in contrast with the attitude of sleepy indifference or sneering defiance now manifested by some of the tax-levying bodies. The body whose O. K. must be attached to the tax levy is the Tax Supervising and Conservation Commission of each county. Governor Pierce only recently completed the appointments of these commissions. The published remarks of members appointed indicates that some of them have not the faintest idea of what they promised to do when they took their oath of office. A mass of work is to be performed by each of these commissions and by each tax-levying body between now and Oct. 1. The law clearly specifies just what each commission must demand of each tax-levying body in the way of information. To compile this information will be a chore that will wrinkle many a brow. After Oct. 1 come the hearings on the various budgets. No tax for 1924 will be valid unless it is levied according to the procedure clearly specified in this new law. "No tax levy shall be extended upon any assessment and tax roll except as herein provided, and any tax levy extended contrary to the provisions of this act shall be null and void." So the new law provides. Taxing bodies which wish to have income through 1924 will do well to peruse the new law and start in educating the new arbiters of their fate.

A good start has been made by the city council toward constructing a bridge to Umpqua Park. It is now hoped that the project can be successfully carried out without further interference from all concerned. The matter rests with the city council and a great majority of the people have the fullest confidence in the members to that extent that their judgment will receive approval in furthering and carrying to a successful conclusion the very important enterprise now under consideration by that body.

Dear Folks:

My Dad was mighty proud of me, this fact was plain for me to see. And when I stood and turned around he made a funny little sound like holding back a laugh or two. But mother's face looked kind of blue and in her eyes I saw a tear that trickled down to disappear. Then Sis began to look me over and bade me walk across the floor and back again to where she stood and then she gave her verdict, "Good."

How proud I was, self-conscious too, for life was starting all anew. My day of days at last had come, at first my legs seemed kind of numb, then gathered strength so off I went with heart that sang, with mind content.

The socks I wore were red and green, I took good care that they were seen. I felt my garters pinch and bind, but just the same I didn't mind for tho I couldn't see their hue, I knew that they were bright and new. Then Bill and Peg and Phil and Ned and others too began to yell and shout and talk and laugh and cheer, and praise and scold and smile and jeer. Each word they said comes back to me to linger in my memory. But all day long I looked serene and showed my socks of red and green, and stood the joining of the crowd who knew so well why I was proud.

The night I didn't kiss my Dad, no more was I his little lad. But just before I went to bed I up and shook his hand instead. Said he, "We'll hear no more cants from one who's worn his best long pants."

Los Angeles "Death Traps"
The Grade Crossing Peril

By WILLIAM G. CAYCE
(International News Service Staff Correspondent.)
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21.—The deadly railroad grade crossing in southern California must go. This is the cry of individuals and several civic organizations after a number of crashes of trains and automobiles at rail and highway intersections have taken their toll in death during the last few weeks.

At present there are said to be several thousand grade crossings in Los Angeles county alone, and 750 of these are extremely dangerous to pedestrians and automobile traffic, according to a statement issued by county investigators grade crossings in an effort to effect their ultimate elimination.

Of the additional thousands of dangerous crossings in southern California nine of them are known to the traveling public as veritable "death traps."

Everyone of these "traps" could be made safe, according to E. E. East, highway engineer of the Automobile club of southern California, who has made an exhaustive study of the situation. Changing them into safe crossings would not cost much, either, East says.

"On the crossing north of Ocean side," East points out, "the paltry expenditure of $5,000 would remedy the menace and save 20 lives in 10 years. Twenty persons have been killed on that spot since the highway was built in 1913."

The dangerous crossing at Pomona was taken by East as another illustration. There the county highway crosses the railroad tracks four times in two miles. The danger could be relieved by merely changing the highway, which would be comparatively cheap, East said.

The Pomona crossing is used continually by large busses carrying from 20 to 30 children. Several bad accidents are said to have happened on some of these crossings.

Engineers are unanimous in considering dangerous nearly every crossing on the roads leading to the beach, where traffic is heavier than elsewhere. On the beach lines more trains operate than over the inland routes and they run fast. This, plus the number of automobiles driven on the beach roads, makes a dangerous combination, the engineers claim.

Relocation of the railroad tracks at Cardiff on the San Diego road would eliminate two dangerous crossings there, the engineers claim.

Several years ago when the crossings were built it was taken for granted that because the trains carried the greater part of the traffic they would be given the right of way. Times have changed since then and it is a debated question whether the opposite is true.

An official check was made on one crossing recently and showed the following result:
During a period starting at 8 a. m. and ending at 6 p. m. 11,743 vehicles used the highway, while 491 trains used the rails. The trains were made up of one, two and three-car capacity.

GULLS TO WAGE WAR ON HOPPERS

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Aug. 21.—There is a plague of grasshoppers in the vicinity of Kallispell, Flathead county, Montana, and authorities here asking if it is possible to procure a lot of young seagulls from Great Salt Lake to do away with the pests. Flathead county is said to possess ideal feeding and nesting grounds for the birds.

Seagulls are sacred to Utah. They come in numbers annually from the Pacific ocean to nest on the six islands in the lake.

In pioneer days, when the settlers were about to harvest their first crops in the Great Salt Lake valley there came a scourge of grasshoppers which the seagulls devoured. Hence the birds are under state protection. On the Mormon Temple block there is a large monument erected to them.

Whether Kallispell will get seagulls from Utah or not is a question for the state fish and game department to decide.

HONOLULU DRY ENFORCEMENT RIGID

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 21.—The rumors that the Canadian-Australian liners, plying between Canada and Australia, might eliminate the rigid enforcement of the prohibition law which permits vessels to enter an American port with only "medicinal liquor" have been denied here by Captain Rolfs, commander of the liner Niagara, and by T. H. Davies & Co., the line's agents.

Under the law, the Canadian-Australian liners, may be "wet" only until they reach Honolulu, "dry" between Honolulu and Suva, where liquor supplies may be obtained, and "wet" between Suva and Australia. On an outbound trip from Australia the vessel is "wet" until she reaches Honolulu and "dry" from this port to the mainland.

Singing is Half the Joy of Owning a Culbransen

The songs you like best to hear, sung by some lovely voice, to your own softly-accented, perfectly-timed accompaniment on a Culbransen. There's genuine enjoyment for you!

Select your song rolls from the hundreds upon hundreds available, with the words already printed on them. The key they are pitched in doesn't matter. Too high? Too low? Just turn a knob. The Culbransen instantly transposes.

An ordinary song roll may be played as a splendid and correct accompanying number on the Culbransen. The different fingering is taken care of by the roll. Through the pedals you register your touch, your time, your expression, following exactly the interpretation given the song by the vocalist.

WINNING PISTOL TEAM IS HOME

The pistol team which represented Company D at the recent state shoot at Clackamas, returned last night bringing the cup offered for the best pistol team in the state.

The local guardsmen are quite elated over the victory of the team which made a score of 643. The Portland team which took second place scored 595. The Roseburg boys made a fine showing in handling the pistols and were highly commended for their excellent marksmanship. Each of the contestants was presented with a bronze medal. Private Hash, took fifth place in the individual shoot and won a medal for this record. The local boys were somewhat handicapped in the individual match, as they had never before shot on a 50-yard range, but on the following day in the team shoot, each man made a better score than the winner of the individual match.

The cup and medals won by the team are on display at Bryan's Gift shop. The cup is won three times in succession is retained by the team. The members of the Roseburg team were Lieutenant Harley J. Watson, First Sergeant Gene Frey, Sergeant Howard Helmbolt, and Private Albert Hash.
