REDUCE THOSE DANGEROUS SWOLLEN VEINS

Doctor's Recent Discovery Also Heals Boils, Carbuncles, Abscesses, and Open Sores in a Few Days

Physicians are prescribing and hospitals using a new and harmless, yet very powerful germicide that not only causes enlarged or varicose veins and blemishes to become normal, but also reduces goitre, enlarged glands and wens.

Ask any first-class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and, furthermore, if this wonderful discovery does not produce the results anticipated, you can have the price refunded.

It is not wise for anyone to allow swollen veins to keep on enlarging. Often they burst and cause weeks of pain, suffering and loss of employment. Start the Emerald Oil treatment as directed in advice and improvement will begin at once. Nathan Fullerton, the Rexall Store, Roseburg, Oregon.

THE MISFIT

By JANE PHELPS

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Natalie Horton, secretary to a prominent lawyer, marries Horace Crandell—an aristocratic bachelor and client of her employer. Crandell, who has promised to remain with his widowed mother, takes Natalie to his home after marriage.

Natalie is young, lovely, a clever business girl, but with absolutely no idea of life as lived in her husband's establishment. Mrs. Crandell resents her son's marriage and takes no pains to conceal the fact. Natalie is made to feel she is a "misfit" and also learns that her mother-in-law would have welcomed Beverly Rainsford, a society girl, as Horace's wife.

Craig Harper, friend of Crandell's, takes an interest in Natalie and one afternoon a chance meeting causes the latter's late arrival home for dinner.

CHAPTER XIX

Horace and his mother were at dinner. Natalie sped up the stairs to change her frock, then hurried down to be greeted by a frozen stare from Mrs. Crandell, a look of reproach from Horace.

"I'm sorry I am late, Horace," she said. "I drove farther than I intended."

"Try and time yourself better hereafter," he replied coldly, as he rose and seated her. "Mother has been much annoyed."

Natalie made no further apology. She wanted to say she didn't care if she was annoyed. But, as usual, she kept her thoughts to herself and ate in silence. In their room Horace spoke sharply to her:

"I shall be sorry I gave you the car if you ever let this happen again. Mother was terribly upset. Then, too, it isn't the thing for a young woman to be driving about alone after dark. It was inconsiderate of you. People will gossip."

"I wasn't alone," Natalie was about to say when a maid appeared, saying to Horace:

"Mrs. Crandell wishes to speak with you," and he hurried away. Oh, well, she would tell him later!

Natalie knew Horace's horror of gossip, that it amounted almost to a mania with him, that it was one with his mother. That her having a companion and that companion an attractive unmarried man, might make it worse in their eyes than being alone, did not occur to her. She was too excited over the afternoon's little adventure, too pleased with herself because of Harper's flattery.

She had forgotten Mrs. Baxter entirely, forgotten that she had seen her.

Harper had spoken of her hair—she had had aside her hat at the inn—complimented her upon her distinctive way of dressing it; had told her not many women could stand such simplicity. Natalie rose, looked in the mirror, studied herself. Yes, it suited her. Her long hair had made her sleepy; Horace was probably playing chess with his mother. She smiled a little sarcastically as she thought they had not invited her to sit with them, punishing her because she was late for dinner. Finally she undressed and went to bed. When Horace came up she was sound asleep.

In the morning Horace hurried with his dressing, anxious to get to the office early. He was still rather cross with her, so Natalie thought, and she made no effort to talk to him. After he left she felt rather sorry, she hadn't told him she was not alone the day before, that Harper was with her. But she would tell him that night. He would have time to get over his annoyance because she was late. This idea of making such a fuss over a few minutes seemed puerile, but she had not lived with Mrs. Crandell for months without learning that what she thought right meant nothing in that household.

Beverly Rainsford lunched with them. Mrs. Crandell was very suave, very sociable with her guest, but eyed Natalie coldly as the meal progressed. Her very expression was a question as to why the Lord had so afflicted her in her son's choice of a wife.

"Tell me, Beverly," she asked, "if it is not a secret, is it true that you are going to marry Craig Harper?"

Jerked to attention, Natalie waited for the reply.

"Nothing is settled yet, dear Mrs. Crandell," Beverly replied with a blush of just the right shade and dimensions. "It never will be if I can help it!" Natalie thought.

"He is a fine fellow, a great catch. And more than all else he is one of us," Mrs. Crandell remarked. "One can't lay too much stress on that, Beverly, dear."

Beverly agreed.

Chaotic thoughts seethed in Natalie's brain. Harper was her friend, she liked him. Married to Beverly Rainsford he would no longer be a friend; he would be Beverly's husband. She couldn't afford to lose his friendship; she wouldn't!

No thought of infidelity to Horace in the thought came to her. She had so few friends—that was all, and she just couldn't lose those she had. Beverly Rainsford was popular, had many friends, she didn't need Harper.

It was queer reasoning if you like, but it was Natalie's. And it was the result of her environment, of the lack of appreciation of those she lived with.

Craig Harper thought her lovely, charming, did not hesitate to tell her so. He alone of all she had met in this new life of hers treated her as one of them, instead of as an unwelcome rank outsider.

Her face hardened. She would ask Craig, ask him if it were true he was to marry Beverly Rainsford. He had proposed they have tea at the Ritz some day. She would call him up, tell him she would be delighted to go. Tomorrow—Natalie invites Disaster by the Spanish settlers. History records the occasions when the Spanish emigrated to the southwest of north America in a climate somewhat similar to that of their native country. They brought with them not only their customs and art but always manifested an alluring spirit of romanticism, chivalry and glamour that has never yet failed to make a strong appeal to even those of another race.

Several historic sites in southern California and Mexico were used for "Fortune's Mask," which will be shown at the Majestic Theatre tonight. The nearness of Vitagraph's west coast studios to the Mexican land made it convenient for the company to take advantage of the picturesque country similar to the locale about which the story was woven. The picturesque possibilities of the story appealed very strongly to both Mr. Williams and Director Ensign.

Baptist Prayer Meeting—A special meeting will be held at the Baptist church on the regular prayer meeting night. Rev. Mr. Goette, pastor of the Healsburg, Cal. Baptist church will speak at the meeting. He has made an extended study of the Holy Spirit and will speak on that subject, with particular reference to the manifestations of the Spirit. This is a subject of much interest. The members of the church are urged to hear him. Other church people are invited.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY
(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—Can you tell me the best way to show a boy you really care for him? Will he know it if you give up going with anyone else, and go just with him, or should you go about with others to make him jealous or keep him interested? WORRIED DOLLY.

Worried Dolly:—Until you are engaged to one, go about with all your friends and do not show that you care more for one than any other. When you promise to marry someone, then, to show that you care for him, you should not go with anyone else, but do not do this until you are engaged.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury:—There is a certain boy in Roseburg that I admire very much. I have never met him but would like to. He is a good friend to a boy friend of mine. I am going to have a few friends down to my house soon for a picnic supper. I want him to come but as I don't know him, am puzzled as to how to invite him. Shall I tell this friend just to bring him, or should I invite him personally.

BUTTERFLY:—Have this friend of yours arrange an introduction sometime before your picnic supper. While you are talking tell him that you are having a few friends informally for a picnic supper and would like to have him come also.

MARSHFIELD MAY HAVE NEW HOTEL

MARSHFIELD, Aug. 20.—In line with other progressive moves which have been made in Marshfield this season is a brand new one which came about when the builders and capitalists from the outside, came here and learned what was going on in the city expansion.

The newest project is a proposed building at the northwest corner of Anderson avenue and Fourth street, 100x100, where L. A. Blanc and Walter Irons, of Marshfield, and A. H. Blanc of Portland and L. W. Metzger of Roseburg will construct a three story concrete, reinforced building as a hotel.

The project was discussed today by L. A. Blanc, who is familiar with the plans of the partners, and Mr. Blanc stated that they are ready to start construction immediately upon being assured of tenants for the first floor.

The two second stories are to be given over to the hotel and there will be between 75 and 80 rooms on these floors. The plans provide for at least six baths on each floor.

The building is to be heated with the immediately upon securing tenants for the first floor, and it is expected this arrangement will be taken care of within the next few days.

Mr. Blanc said that the demand for hotel room is such that they have no hesitancy in starting the construction for they have a lessor for the two upper stories who is ready to furnish and lease for a long term of years.

Unless tenants appear shortly, Mr. Blanc said they probably would throw a portion of the main floor into the hotel project and thus be able to go ahead at once and have the building ready for winter.

"We have made the government an offer for room in our building for the postoffice," said Mr. Blanc, "and consider that it was a favorable tender."

EMPLOYEE OF MOUNT PEAK MINE HAS EYE INJURED
A splinter of steel flew into the left eye of Richard H. Halverson, Saturday afternoon, while he was sharpening a piece of steel, cutting into the interior of the eye. Mr. Halverson is employed with the Mount Peak mine, which is located ten miles from Riddle. He was brought to this city and taken care of by Dr. Seely. X-rays were taken, but the exact seriousness of the case has not yet been determined.

PRUNE OPENING PRICE AWAITED BY GROWERS

SALEM, Aug. 20.—Emphatic denial is made at the Oregon Growers' association of a current report that the association is about to slash prices on prunes, especially 30s, and open at some price below the present market.

Manager Paulus, as well as the heads of the various departments dealing with sales, all stated that no such proposition has even been given consideration by the association.

Manager Paulus declared that the association is waiting on the California opening prices before it makes a move as to establishment of prices, and stated that all sales so far made to the association on the tentative basis heretofore published have been made subject to the opening.

The report that the association was contemplating a new opening has been so persistent among certain packers it is known that the contemplated price deal which was nearly put over was suddenly called off, or delayed at least, because of the report, it being held up because the prospective purchaser figures would have to drop the deal if the association came out with the figures that the pruner through were coming.

Association officials, however, insist that any report of this sort is constructed out of thin air.

NOTICE TO THE INDEPENDENT PRUNE GROWERS.

At a meeting of the independent prune growers of Douglas county held in Roseburg on last Saturday the 18th, at which time 60 of such growers were present, it was unanimously voted to expend one tenth of a cent a pound of their selling price for advertising purposes. In order to carry out and put into effect this resolution it will be necessary for each of the growers to sign a contract with his individual packer to withhold the above stated amount from his selling price and turn the same over to the advertising committee.

A meeting of the independent growers in therefore called for two o'clock on Saturday the 25th, at the office of the county agent in the federal building at Roseburg for the purpose of signing such advertising contract. Any grower not able to attend this meeting and desiring to get the benefits of the advertising proposed will find a copy at the office of the county agent where he may sign the same.

MOVIES

Antlers Theatre

In selecting the cast for "The Ninety and Nine," a David Smith production, the Vitagraph big special picture which will be shown at the Antlers Theatre tonight, Colleen Moore was chosen for the heroine from a score of screen stars. Miss Moore was selected because she fitted the role to perfection. She is naturally the demure little country girl who would be willing to sacrifice herself to save others. It was with some difficulty that Vitagraph secured Miss Moore for the role, as she was actively engaged in two other pictures at the time the production was started. Within a month she completed four pictures in which she was starred and then came to Vitagraph to work in an all-star cast with Gertrude Astor and Warner Baxter.

Liberty Theatre

Never before has Douglas Fairbanks waxed so enthusiastic over the success and admiration of a picture as he has over "The Mark of Zorro," his fourth United Artists production, which will be the feature at the Liberty Theatre, beginning tonight.

Those critics who have viewed "The Mark of Zorro" have proclaimed that Fairbanks has excelled any of his previous performances. This is due to some extent to the ingenious story and the opportunities afforded "Zorro" to make the greatest use of his athletic ability.

The background of the story is centered around early southern California of nearly a century ago when its frontiers were vigilantly guarded
