

'DOC' HILL, WELL KNOWN INDIAN, DEAD

Digger Indian Lad Captured by Rogue River Tribe and Finally Saved From Death by Pioneer of County

'Doc' Hill, a Digger Indian and a well-known character of the Willbur vicinity, died Sunday after a short illness. As near as can be estimated, 'Doc' was about 91 years of age. It was early in the year 1846 when Fleming Hill, one of the best known pioneers of this county, came upon a band of Rogue River Indians in the act of preparing for the torture and death of one of their prisoners. The Rogue River and Digger Indians were at war and those who have read the histories of the Indian wars know the relentlessness which marked the capture of prisoners. Mr. Hill saw that the captive was a mere slip of a boy and in his compassion he bargained with the Rogue River tribe and finally traded a horse for the boy who apparently was about fourteen years of age. His Indian name being unpronounceable, the boy was given the name of 'Doc' for as he sat upon his horse with saddle back behind and in front, he resembled one of the early country doctors who rode many miles in the early days with their medicine cases, and oftentimes provisions and emergency supplies and medicine in saddle bags upon their horses. As the young Indian lad grew up Mr. Hill treated him like one of the family. He was placed in the Willbur academy, where he obtained a fairly good education. He displayed his gratitude to his benefactor by always remaining with the family and assuming such work as he could find to do. Sometimes with the family, and sometimes alone in his cabin, he has remained with the sons and daughters of Fleming Hill until death came. He was buried yesterday in the Willbur cemetery.

EYE IS INJURED IN ACCIDENT YESTERDAY

Thomas G. Blevins, while at work yesterday morning, slipped from a log and fell into the brush, running a stick into the corner of the right eye, breaking through the orbit of the eye into the upper back portion of the nose. The stick also cut the inner part of the upper lid, which had to be stitched back into place. Mr. Blevins is employed by the county and was working near Tyoe when the accident occurred. He was brought to this city and received treatment under Dr. Seely. It is impossible to determine the exact seriousness of the case until time is given to see whether any infection starts.

NEPHEW OF TOURIST KILLED

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Hayes of Merced, California, stopped in Roseburg last night on their way through to Portland and Vancouver and other northern points. They were quite shocked yesterday to pick up a newspaper bearing an account of the death of Mrs. Hayes' nephew, Ray Langdon, a student aviator, who was killed at San Francisco Sunday. The young man, while flying with his instructor over San Francisco bay, descended too near the water and the machine went under and drowned both men. Mrs. Hayes says that her nephew was intensely interested in aviation and recently purchased one of the war planes which the government offered for sale and was taking lessons from a private instructor.

HAIL FELL HERE AT ONE O'CLOCK TODAY

An electric storm passed over the north part of the city about one o'clock today that was quite severe for this section, and probably many who were not accustomed to such phenomena were frightened considerably. There was some wind, and this was accompanied by a downpour of rain, intermingled with scattering hail. Some of the hailstones that were picked up and exhibited at the News-Review office directly after the storm passed, were as large as small walnuts and had jagged edges, somewhat resembling saw teeth. There were several peals of thunder and a display of lightning, the storm drifting toward the North Empqua, where it appeared to be most severe. Since the shower of last night the atmospheric conditions have been unsettled and gusty, indicating that more showers might be expected, although the rainfall of yesterday evening appeared to be entirely local and confined to a small area along Deer Creek and the North Umpqua country above Winchester. During the night the storm area widened out considerably, the general direction of the wind, however, being northerly. In all sections visited by the showers the fields and orchards were greatly refreshed and benefited.

(City United Press.) WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—President Coolidge told White House visitors today he had decided to adopt a "reasonable" attitude in the matter of clemency for war violators, but that he recognized that some of those still imprisoned were only receiving just punishment for the crimes which they were convicted.

At the club they were discussing marriage and a girl's opportunities for making a good one. Some contended that a society girl stood the best chance. Others maintained that girls in business life met substantial men every day, and consequently often made excellent matches. Sensational marriages made by ladies of the chorus were mentioned, and then the talk veered around to department stores. Said one member: "Many of these salesladies are beautiful. Many a girl is married from a department store." "And," chimed in another, "sometimes the store has to take her back."
