PROBE BEING MADE OF SHIP DISASTER
 (By United Press.)
SAN DIEGO, Sept. 13.—An inquiry was scheduled to open here today into the disaster which wrecked seven United States destroyers off Point Arguello Saturday night. The interest in the probe centered on the examination of Captain Edwin Swanson who was in command of the squadron. The captain's staff will be called.
Speed Was 20 Knots.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Confirmation of the report that the seven United States destroyers wrecked off the California coast were traveling at a speed of 20 knots was given the navy department in messages from Admiral Coontz, commander in chief of the United States fleet. Coontz advised that "comment and criticism" be withheld for the present.

Carlisle Graham Bibt in connection with his story "The Diamond-Back" in Everybody's Magazine gives an interesting account of his experiences. In thirty-odd years he has covered much of the old and new West. He's been a pearl-diver; he has played the piano in dance halls, has gone in for historical research, mining and cow-punching. His wife calls him a domesticated nomad.
 The genuine "diamond-back" he says, (in answer to a query about the rattlesnake that appears in his story), is found mostly in Arkansas and eastern Texas. The diamonds of the western rattler are not so clearly defined, nor is that reptile so large. Colloquially, the term "diamond-back" is also applied to the latter. However, the territory in which these two distinct species are found seems to lap over, as I have seen the larger diamond-back as far down as northeastern Mexico and as far west as the Davis mountains, where I lay my story.
Peru's Foreign Trade.
 The total foreign trade of Peru for the year 1921, according to the chief of the statistical division of customs, amounted to 33,329,672 pounds Peruvian (libras peruanas—Lp.), of which 16,669,188 Lp. represented imports and 16,660,484 Lp. exports. The figures for the year 1920 were: Imports, 18,358,224 Lp.; exports, 35,304,156 Lp.; total, 53,662,380 Lp. Estimating the value of the libra peruana at $4.80 United States gold (par), the value of the foreign trade for the year 1921 was: Imports, $81,012,254; exports, $80,989,952; total, $161,982,206. On the same basis, the figures for 1920 were: Imports, $88,226,958; exports, $171,575,198; total, $259,799,156.
Walk Underground.
 An underground moving pathway for Paris is the subject of investigation in that city. Thirteen plans were submitted and five were retained for further experiments. Of these, four work on the principle of parallel bands working at graduating speeds, and the remaining one slows down for each stop.—Scientific American.

MAY COMPLETE UMPQUA ROAD

 spectation of the project within the next few weeks. It is very probable that at that time an agreement providing for the completion of the contract will be entered into. If the county court hasn't sufficient money in the road fund to do this work, it is planned to take the needed amount from the market road money, as this is deemed to be the most important market road in the county, and although it may work a hardship on a few of the smaller districts for one year, the completion of this road means more to the county in general than any one road project in the county.
NO METHOD FOR LONGEVITY
 Impossible to Formulate Rule by Which Man May Prolong Stay on Earth.
 Medical theories for the advancement of longevity remain only theories. The lengthening of the span of life may be worked out to a mathematical nicety on paper, but in practice it proves utterly impractical. Outside influences have an unerring and hostile attraction to the best-laid plans—and instead of attaining the age of John "Shell" the average man dies at 54.3 years.
 The latest of the longevity theorists is Dr. Leonard Williams of London, who declares that men should live to be 140 years old. He says we are not martyrs to disease but victims of folly, and he points out that the trouble lies in a "low level of mediocrity." All of which may be interpreted as meaning that the average person does not take the same care of himself as he does of his motor car or his live stock.
 There is much in what Doctor Williams says, though it hardly could be termed novel. Modern medicine is nothing if it is not a tremendous force combating preventable disease while ministering to the victims of disease. It has preached and is preaching the economic waste of the maladies that may be avoided and it is making steady strides in the treatment of curable and incurable diseases. But the longevity theorist who would put the age limit on the Noah and Methuselah basis overlooks the enemies that constantly menace health in the present complex civilization. A much higher order of human beings would have to be on earth to make his plan at all practicable.
 An American pathologist recently gave us the enemies of health, "heredity, infection, poison, food deficiency, food excess, fear, grief, emotional excess and psychic apathy due to lack of life interest."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Dead Race.
 Eastern museums are sending out calls for cigar store Indians. Obviously the store of wood and paint who once faithfully guarded the door of the tobaccoist's shop is to be preserved for the admiration of future generations. Our good wishes go with him. We recall many silent moments of delightful awe spent in his presence. There was a time when his tribe was large, with representatives in every city and town of size in the United States. Then—something happened to the race. One by one these ruddy braves began to disappear, until now their kind is practically extinct.
 It would be interesting to know just how long the race flourished and who originated the idea, although it is not hard to understand why a wooden Indian was adopted as a symbol of tobacco. It was the Indian who taught his paleface brethren the tobacco habit, just as the white man taught him to drink firewater.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.
