ROSEBURG, OREGON, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1923.

THIS IS THE TIME TO SWAT THE FLY.

This is the time of year to swat the fly—in fact, every day in the year is a good time to exercise your authority on the little pest. But with the coming of fall rains the "animal" becomes more sympathetic for indoor sports and is very prolific in its desire to confine its activities, not only to choice and other food-stuffs, but makes life almost unbearable for a person who is not in the habit of being hammered on the head, especially, if that uppermost piece of your anatomy bears the earmarks of once having had a covering of nature's precious gift. An energetic fly perched on the ivory dome of a 200-pound individual can cause more unrest and uneasiness than a whole army of youngsters disseminating watermelons at a public feed.

But the most disagreeable feature of all applied to the nasty little animal is the friendly attitude it has for a fellow about meal time, hopping about over the food and sampling all the delicacies before you even get a chance to spread the paper napkin under your chin. And, in places where their presence is not discouraged they come in droves to welcome you and remain on the job until your appetite fails to respond to the alarm of the inner man and you are compelled to leave in utter disgust, overcome by the buzzing, parading across your dinner plate and the startling aerobic stunts done in mid-air before your very eyes, using your sizzling cup of coffee as a life net in case of an accident.

Yes, coping with the fly is a great vocation if you don't weaken, and it is really strange how many people like to encourage its presence. Little, if anything is done to stamp out the insects as dangerous, nauseating and germ carrying pests, though campaign after campaign has been suggested. There should be no let up to exterminating the fly. Every eating house in the community should go to the uttermost extreme ends to rid their place of this dirty and filthy type of pest. Their presence is not conducive to the best interests of trade, and while many customers refrain from openly expressing their thoughts of the nuisance, they often refrain from patronizing places where no effort is made to cope with the disagreeable condition.

Constant effort on the part of any establishment will eventually bring results. Oftentimes it is necessary to resort to more drastic means than merely swatting the fly. But it pays in the long run. The satisfaction of a customer eating his morning meal without being "rode to death" by the fly family starts him off with a full stomach for a good day's work.

It's the little things in life that are annoying—and the pesky fly is one of the little things that should be completely eradicated. So let's start something—and start it quick. All it requires is a little energy and pep.

Roseburg's new library is just about to become a reality—and the Umpqua Tribe, a new booster organization, is rarin' to go. Now, if we can get that road completed up the North Umpqua to Diamond Lake, throw a rope around the Umpqua Park and tourist ground, get a bridge leading across the river to the beautiful location, get those new street lamps installed before the dead of winter, pick out and establish a city park within the city limits, get a new district attorney appointed before the next term of circuit court and the bumper crop of Douglas county prunes under cover before the fall rains peel off the outer skin everything will be fine and dandy. But, everybody will have to keep right on the job to get these results.

A determined effort is being made to make the recall of Governor Pierce a popular measure but its adherents are having a hard time keeping their heads above water and are already gasping for breath. Mr. Pierce will never be recalled for anything he has done in a public way since taking hold of the helm of state government. Assuming that he has erred in some instances there has not yet been one iota of evidence produced that he is subject to recall. Better forget it and get down to business instead of wasting a lot of valuable time trying to put over the impossible.

This paper put in a damage claim for news print about four months ago to the local railroad company and to date has had no settlement. But our patience is not exhausted. Everything comes to him who waits—even death—and we'll probably be knocked dead when we get the remittance.

When a minister quits his profession to go into business for himself it is evidence that a good man has been lost from a worthy profession. Good business methods and religion are a fine combination to a successful career.

A fellow at Astoria took two drinks of moonshine and died. The brand is getting better. A year ago one drink knocked 'em dead.

It should not be the policy of automobile drivers how fast their machine can run; but how safe it can be propelled.

Giving service is a misnomer with some people while "getting by" is looked upon as a virtue.

CANNOT RESIST DOLLAR BILLS.

RICHMOND, Virginia, Sept. 21.—(A. P.)—Complaints of the handling of dollar bills in this country, particularly those coming from the United States, have resulted in action being taken by the International Postal Union. Unless there is improvement, the union says, Romania may have to withdraw.

When Fancy Is Fact

(By Wickes Wamboldt) A negro was lying asleep in the shade of a pile of boxes on the wharf of a southern steamship company. He was snoring lustily and his mouth was wide open.

A young man came along who was doing for malaria. Some English impulse caused him to fish a five-grain quinine capsule from his pocket and drop it into the open mouth of the negro, who continued to sleep peacefully. In a short while the quinine capsule dissolved and released the bitter contents.

In course of time the negro appeared, wild-eyed, at the office of the steamship agent. He was in a state of near physical collapse. "Mistah Bellario," he gasped hoarsely, "Get me a doctor quick, please sah. Ah done bust my galls."

Now, this negro came very near expiring before the facts in the case came out, after which he was as good as now within a minute. He had thought he was going to die because he did not believe a man could fire with a "busted gill" and he knew right well that he had "busted" his. There was no doubt in his mind about it. He knew an untruth so positively that, to all practical purposes, it became a truth to him.

Many a person has unwittingly committed suicide in the same way. A surgeon in a large Baltimore hospital told me recently that they had removed a perfectly good appendix from a woman because it was necessary to do so to give her peace of mind. He said that for a long time she had been declaring that her appendix was in bad shape and was undermining her health. Examinations indicated to the contrary. Nevertheless, she was positive that she could never be well or even live unless the devastating appendix be removed.

The surgeons held a consultation and decided that the woman had a severe case of mental appendicitis and the only way to cure her was to remove the physical organ. This they did and she entirely recovered. Ever since man began to think he has recognized in a greater or lesser degree the effect of mind action and made use of it ever before he began to understand its principles. Today we fully appreciate the effect of the mind on the body. We talk theoretically by the hour, just as I am doing now. We read the evidence of its unmistakable action, just as you are doing now. Then we promptly go ahead and disregard it, just as you and I will probably do when we have finished with this article.

It is a great big job—learning to control one's thoughts. It is in fact the basis of spiritual and physical harmony. It is the largest thing that confronts us in this world. All we can do is to keep plugging away at it. Every bit of evidence and every additional gleam of insight should encourage us to continue our efforts.

WANTED TOOTHPICK; STARTS FOREST FIRE

BEND, Ore., Sept. 21.—(United Press.)—Something new in a defense to the charge of starting forest fires was handed out by Tim Sullivan, stockman, when he appeared before Justice Cleaves, of Crescent south of this city.

Sullivan explained that he and Walter Mallory, his herder, had finished eating, when Mallory wanted a toothpick. Lacking that climax to their otherwise perfect outdoor repast, Sullivan gave the herder a match, which Mallory whittled down on the non-

THE VILLAGE RHYMESTER

Dear Folks: The Injun chief with tomahawk a-lifted in his hand, in front of stores that sold cigars was wont to take his stand. His face was haughty, proud and stern, his feathers bright with paint. He did his work from day to day, not once he made complaint.

No more we see this Injun chief. No more he takes his stand in front of stores that sell cigars. He's in another land. Perhaps you wonder why he left, what made him disappear. He never moved without a push from someone in the rear. And so altho his face was stern, and the his paint was bright, his usefulness was not enough to keep him out in sight.

The world has many Injun chiefs who glare from beady eyes, who swing their tomahawks aloft, a-pointed to the skies. They make a show of earnestness that's not misunderstood, for folks can look right thru their paint and see they're made of wood. It takes a push or else a shove to make them move an inch. They never take a step alone, not even in a pinch.

They too must soon pass on their way and find another land, some other place where they can live and hold their haughty stand. For usefulness means more than show and feathers painted bright, and nothing comes to Injun chiefs who simply stand upright.

service end, and used. Then, carelessly, he admitted, Mallory dropped the match to the ground. It wasn't ignited and Sullivan's belief was that a chipmunk found the match and set it afire while chewing on it. From that beginning grew the great forest fire.

Health Hints by the Father of Physical Culture BERNARD MACFADDEN

Nowadays efficiency is recognized as a quality that can be developed to greater or less degree in all men and women. The first step forward is universally conceded to be the development of that physical energy upon which the accomplishments of the individual must be based, first, last and always.

Confronted by the most gigantic task man has faced in all his history, the allied democratic nations of the world overcame their adversaries chiefly by superior, all-round efficiency, based on physical vigor.

America, a land in which national efficiency had received scant attention, productive efficiency not a great degree more, and personal efficiency least of all, faced far-reaching changes in the performance of its share of the task to which its hand was set. Its initial task in the training of men to take up the tremendous exertions and extraordinary ordeals of modern warfare was to develop the health of these men to the highest degree practicable in every individual.

A few brief months of intensive physical training effected a great transformation in hundreds of thousands of young men. The colorless, inert weakness became the alert and vigorous man, physically and otherwise fit for the performance of herculean tasks.

The most stirring chapter of all history tells the story of this demonstration of the relation of health and efficiency.

To gain the master-key to good health it is imperative first of all to equip oneself with knowledge of the construction of the body, of the means by which life is sustained, and of the laws that govern physical well being.

I quote this paragraph from Macfadden's Encyclopedia of Physical Culture.

By far the greater percentage of diseases is preventable. The best equipped and most eminent authorities have demonstrated the truth of this statement—a statement that applies to those living even under favorable housing and hygienic conditions. Hundreds of thousands of men and women die before the body is actually worn out, and millions more are weak, suffering, unhappy and inefficient because of lack of knowledge of how to care for the body and how to conquer the forces of disease.
