PRUNE ADVANCE IS MADE KNOWN

SALEM, Oct. 3.—With the announcement yesterday of an advance of from 1 cent to 1 3/4 cents on dried prunes packed in 25-pound boxes by both the Oregon Growers Cooperative association and the California Prune & Apricot Growers' association, it is expected that buying will receive a great stimulus and that the market will be on a sound basis.

On 20-30s in the northwest the price quoted by the Oregon association is 16 1/2 cents, and is the same quoted in the southern concern and applies to Sunsweet brand prunes, but on 35-4 the price is 11 cents, a reduction of 1 1/4 cents from the price offered by the California growers. The price of 40-50s offered in Oregon is 10 1/2 cents, 2 cents lower than the California figure. Other prices on different sizes, the Oregon quotation first, are as follows: 50-60s, 9 1/2; 55-65s, 8 1/2; 60-70s, 8; 70-80s, 7 1/2; 80-90s, 5 3/4; 90-100s, 5 1/4. The difference in prices is less for the smaller sizes. Bulk prices are about the same, but neither association is buying, everything being figured on the 25-pound basis this year.

WILL EXHIBIT AT LIVESTOCK SHOW

Douglas County State Fair Display to Be Taken to Portland for Exhibition

WILL ADD PRODUCTS

Fruit and Corn to Be Procured to Add to Articles Now Held in Cold Storage at Salem

The Douglas county state fair exhibit will be taken to Portland to be shown at the Pacific International Livestock exposition on November 2, according to C. O. Garrett, who has had charge of the arranging of the exhibit and who has obtained permission from the county court to take the display to the metropolis for the coming show.

Mr. Garrett is now endeavoring to secure ten or a dozen boxes of extra fancy apples to include with the exhibit and is also after some specimens of corn to include with the display already at hand.

Following the state fair all of the products used there were placed on cold storage at Salem, so that they will be in good condition for the Livestock exposition. Between now and November 2, Mr. Garrett expects to add a great many articles to the exhibit and believes that the county will carry away the first prize at the coming show.

All growers who have fruit, corn, or other products of exceptional size and quality are asked to notify Mr. Garrett, so that he may add to the products which he is arranging to exhibit at Portland. In former years Douglas county has won a great deal of praise and comment for the fine showing made at the Livestock exposition, and it is believed that with the fine record made at the state fair, the display this year will be one to excite the interest and admiration of the thousands who attend this great show.

"The Douglas county exhibit at the state fair was highly praised," Mr. Garrett said. "People were quite surprised to see the wide variety of products grown in the Umpqua valley and found the fruit, grain and other products very interesting. We were extremely gratified by the high score which we attained, especially in view of the fact that Jackson county, which took third place, spent more than four times as much as we were allowed. We are very appreciative of the spirit of cooperation shown by the Umpqua valley growers, and hope that we may be as successful in competition at the Livestock show."

MILK BECOMING AN IMPORTANT WORLD TRADE ITEM, EXPERT REPORTS TO DAIRY CONGRESS

Trade in Dairy Products Between Nations May Be Checked by Several Factors, Says Agricultural Expert—Improvement in Transportation

(International News Service.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Milk and dairy products have now become an important factor in international trade through the employment of modern refrigerating and transportation facilities. Dr. H. C. Taylor, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics United States Department of Agriculture, declared today in an address before the second session of the World's Dairy Congress.

Taylor predicted that international trading in milk products will in course of time replace to a degree the national and local economy systems of seasonal storage.

World Trade Possible.

He said: "Dairy production has now become thoroughly established in the Northern and Southern hemispheres, and as a consequence mutually advantageous seasonal trading between countries is now a possibility, to replace to a degree the system of seasonal storage that grows out of a local or national economy system."

"More than 20 billion pounds of milk were required during the past year to produce the milk products that entered into world trade, as against 5 billion pounds some few years ago."

"Improvement in transportation has affected both the quantity and quality of shipments. Refrigeration also has made possible the transportation of fresh milk over great distances. The processes of dehydration have facilitated trade. The improvement in means of communication of market news has also promoted the exchange of production."

"Trade in dairy products between nations may be checked or hindered by several factors, such as protective tariffs, successful imitations of foreign varieties and effective systems of cold storage of domestic supplies to carry the surplus from seasons of heavy production to seasons of low production."

BETTER FACILITIES

J. A. Ruddick, Dominion of Canada, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, addressing the session, said that the advent of improved refrigeration and transportation methods, together with the installation of refrigerated storage houses, has extended international trade in dairy products to markets previously limited by time and distance. He said:

"During the last ten years the Southern Hemisphere has made its greatest growth in international trade. While many markets feature in international trade the United Kingdom still remains the most important import market for dairy products."

Unexploited Fields.

"The Southern Hemisphere," he continued, "has vast areas which are adapted to dairying which as yet have not been developed. We informed New Zealanders expect to see an increase of 100 per cent in dairy exports within the next ten years. Australia also expects considerably development. There are millions of acres in the two main islands alone that are
