BUILDING GREAT HIGHWAYS.

"What's the use of building great highway systems, at an expense of millions and millions of dollars, when in a few short years all the freight and passenger traffic will be carried in the air?" The question is always being asked by some one, usually some one who is unendowed by nature with faculty of thinking straight, but sometimes by those who think, but without data on which to go. The next ten, or the next hundred years, will see enormous strides made in aviation. Mail, some express, some passenger traffic will go via plane, and much sport and travel will use it. But no future development of aeronautics can overcome the fundamental fact of nature, that to raise a weight in the air and maintain it there, requires power, and that power is an equivalent for value; in our terms, money. Therefore, no matter how desirable otherwise, no system of transportation which requires an expenditure to support a weight, can compete in cheapness with those in which the weight is borne by the earth. There will always be railroads, always be vessels on the water, always be roads and road vehicles. They will change, improve, become more economical, more speedy, more safe, but the earth will continue to carry the bulk of the traffic, simply and solely because it doesn't charge anything for holding up the weight, whereas nature makes us pay, and heavily, to hold the weight up in the air, while we transport it. Those who build roads today will not live to see the time when their roads are not used. Those who bond themselves for roads today will never see the day when those bonds are outstanding against disused highways. The airways will be increasingly used, but not for freight!

The increased cost of living is in many places causing children to leave school early in order to help earn the family support. In one large city this fall it is reported that twice as many children as last year are quitting school to go to work. Of course the busy conditions in the factories have helped this movement, but in many cases the motive is the pressure of family needs. It is poor policy for any family, if it can possibly help it, to force their young children to go to work as quickly as they pass the legal age. The high school age is a time when the mind of young people is capable of great expansion. Left undeveloped, their possibilities are stunted in this formative period. A family would better put up with very cramped living conditions rather than cramp the mental growth of their children while they are in the upper grammar and high school grades.

President Faunce of Brown university, addressing his students on the opening day, told them it is better to live in a "volcanic" world than in a "glacial" one. He meant that the turmoil of present conditions is better than the deadness of an age where there is no change or progress. He thought in spite of all the confusion of these times, that a period of so much change opens wide the doors of youth. The truth of this thought can be seen everywhere. These are not times when the young aspirant has to wait until some one dies before his chance opens before him. If he has studied the game of business or his profession, so that he knows how to play it better than older men, he will go ahead very fast in these fast moving times.

THE VILLAGE RHYMESTER by Carlisle Cary

Dear Folks: There lives a man who hurt me once with pain I'll ne'er forget, and though it happened years ago I'm frightened of him yet. I went to him with confidence that all would soon be well, that all my troubles soon would pass. Instead he made me yell.

I placed myself within his hands and breathed a heavy sigh. He looked at me without a word and never blinked an eye. Said I, "My friend, I've got to part with one I've known for years, and well I know that when we part, I'll shed some bitter tears. I've come to you with hopes of help, with hopes you'll find a way, to make the parting brief and short. You're price I'll gladly pay. This pal of mine has always been a friend and one indeed. He never failed to work for me, he sensed my every need."

"I may be guilty of neglect, if so the fault is mine. And still he never made complaint, I never heard him whine. But yesterday he started in to tease and nag me so, I knew that we must part, 'twas time for him to go."

The man who hurt me said, "You're right, I'll do the best I can." So just relax and do your best to be a fearless man." But when he started in to yank, I cried out like a youth, For he was busy pulling out my poor old wisdom tooth.

New Lamp Burns 94% Air

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 25 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe, burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

STATE PRESS COMMENT

Whose Territory?

Klamath as trade territory will not be lost to San Francisco. This is the essence of a circular distributed among San Francisco business men. Work is under way on the Naton cut-off. Soon Klamath Falls will be a city on the Southern Pacific main line. The comparative relations of San Francisco and Portland to Klamath will be reversed. Portland will have the same advantage in distance that San Francisco now has. Presumably freight rates, speed of transportation and communication will follow suit.

But despite these facts, San Francisco business men assure themselves that they will keep the trade of the largest shipping point in Oregon. They rely on the friendly relations built up during the years by accommodation and reciprocity. They rely upon the financing of Klamath projects in San Francisco. They depend on the fact that Klamath does its banking with San Francisco.

We do business with our friends. It is as true an axiom when applied to cities as to customer and storekeeper.

Portland will not win the business of the Klamath country automatically merely because the Southern Pacific is shortening the distance to Klamath Falls. Trade interchange will follow patient building up of friendliness and service.

That is why the excursion of its business men which Portland is now sending to Klamath Falls is a good thing, and why this special friend-making adventure is worth following up by every individual Portland influence.—Portland Journal.
