BEND. Oct. 23.—Six persons were burned to death in what is believed to be a murder and suicide plot near Deschutes. The dead are Eli Chasse, a French Canadian: his three children, and a widowed sister, Mrs. Anna, Lordee, and her infant.

A revolver was found near Chasse's lody in the kitchen, leading to the belief that he shot the family and see the house affre and then shot himself.

Mrs. Lordee and her child were in one bedroom and the two Chasse's youngsters in another, while the blackened body of another; while the blackened body of another child was found beside the father's body on the kitchen floor.

Several hours rubbing shoulders and having a good social time.
There was nothing formal about the gathering—just the ordinary plain "stuff" characteristic of the Rotarian spirit, and no one was noticed trying to lend any dignity to the occasion. President Seely, of the Rose-burne delegation of live-wire boosters while President Seely, of the Rose-burne delegation and who "performed" as chairman of the meeting, did his best to keep his herd as well as that of Eugene, under control. county school system in the work of the American Junior Red Cross. Miss Nell Holsinger, representing division headquarters of the Red Cross located at San Francisco, is here on this mission and is conferring with A. A. Wilder, chairman of the local Red Cross chapter, and the school authorities.

The Junior Red Cross is not new, having been organized in the schools of the country in 1917 to open to the pupils a channel for their energies in aiding the soldiers and sallors, but its work since the close of the World War has differed so greatly from its activities of six years ago that it presents many new phases.

The plan of organization of the American Junior Red Cross makes the school—public, parochial, and private—the unit, not the individual pupil. Application for membership is made on behalf of a school by the principal, or head teacher, in co-operation with a committee of pupils.
Each pupil who takes the pledge of service earns the right to sign the membership roll by the performance of some act of service for his fellows, his school or community, and is then presented with the Junior

The method of raising, as well as the amount of the service fund out of which is finan-ced all Junior activities, is left to the judgment of the chapter school committee and the school authori-ties.

In promoting the general cause of child welfare, Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick and first aid, may be established in all Junior auxiliaries. Mutual serand first aid, may be established in all Junior auxiliaries. Mutual service, helpful community work, such as clean-up campalgas promulgation of health regulations, participation in civic and patriotic movements—all of these creative agencies designed to translate into life and action the regular school program are parts of the machinery which the American Junior Red Cross places at the disposal of the school authorities. Projects that give piny to practical acts of service for others embodying the principles of citizenship are provided for use by the school.

Much interest centers in the Junior Red Cross system of international school correspondence. American schools are actively engaged in ex-
