DUMPING UNDESTRABLES

"The European governments are endeavoring in every possible way to hold their really desirable citizens at home, and are for a roost. striving strenuously to unload on the United States the great maps of the deprayed and degenerate with which their cities are crowded." The foreging statement was made by Congressman are netting. Aswell of Louisiana on returning from a trip to Europe. He went over with Secretary Davis of the department of labor, so he must have studied the immigration question with some care. Perhaps his idea may be exaggerated, but the same statement has often been made by other authorities. There must be some basis for It. This suggests that great care should be exercised in admitting She gave a little shrick of pair aligns into this country. It is not enough to examine them physically and make sure that they have no diseases. Their character and mental attitude and record are even more important than their physical condition. The government should support the immigration service more liberally, so that it could do its work adequately. If possible applicants ought to be examined on the few they are. other side of the water, so that poor people would not be spending their money to cross the seas and then get turned down. Also good enough for her" may often be it is hard to see how such examinations could be thoroughly satisfied to see how such examinations could be thoroughly satisfied to see how such examinations could be thoroughly satisfied to see how such examinations could be thoroughly satisfied to see how such examinations could be thoroughly satisfied to see how such examinations. isfactory unless applicants were prepared with recommendations showing that they had been willing and useful workers and law abiding people in the communities where they had recently lived. A man who has no record of good and faithful work on the other side of the occan is a doubtful proposition as an American citizen. He would better stay where he is, until he has demonstrated his fitness to enter the land of the free.

ISN'T IT TRUE?

One of the greatest factors to successful business building is the practice of rigid economy-but economy when considered in fresh air. the curtailing of your advertising is nothing more than a "leap in the dark," You invite disaster while your competitor's business increases in the light of his greater activity in advertising,

Most of us can look back a few years and recall some product that everybody knew but that is not now known. If we trace the cause of its disappearance we invariably find it to be the false economy of curtailing on the wrong end of the business-advertising-which is like shutting off the electric current in the power house—the car will coast for a while but will finally stop.

Publicity by the local merchant is as essential to his success as publicity by the national advertiser is necessary to the life of his product. Good, progressive local advertising would do much to stimulate home trade and create that confidence in neighborhood dealers which brings a feeling of good fellowship between dealer and consumer. Let the advertising department of this paper help you plan your campaign. Our advice and cooperation are always at your disposal,

Merchants should consider well any proposition offered them gests the form of addressing the premodel by sorrows who have an advertising scheme to put over by unreliable persons who have an advertising scheme to put over and a mania for misrepresentation. Not one out of a thousand of these "cock-sure" propositions mean anything to a merchant in a business way, but on the contrary are a complete fizzle. An army of fakirs are being supported by contributions from business of this is left on the lobe of the ear men.

The Siskiyou bandits are still at large and excitement regarding their capture is quieting down to some extent. But look out, there's always a bill before a storm, and the outlaws may show up any moment.

His nails are black and grimy snowing signs of real neglect, and strange it is he'll go his way and never once suspect his heels and nails are shabby and conspicuous as well; that the he otherwise the street most allus thinks only his creditors are lookin at him."

Her gown is rich and handsome and her face is fresh and fair, noing to Gane-The shadows lightly dance upon her bright and golden hair. Her smile is real contagious and her perfect toeth reveals, but what a chame it is to see her fingernails and heels,

Her heels are worn and shode, running over, 'stead of straight. The cobbler and his set of tools, she ought to cultivate. Her nails are dull and ragged, not at all what you'd expect, and so between her heels and nails she loses in respect.

Fine feathers are delightful and they surely please the eye To get them all you have to have is cash with which to buy. But what's the use of plumage when your careless way reveals, you think not of the greater things, your fingermalls and heels?

Someone has said that gratitude is a lively appreciation of favors yet to come. Maybe so: Even at that it is better than no appreciation at all. Ex-pecting more favors to come is at least the acknowledgement that favors have been received, and that is setter than completely ignoring the matter.
