Newton said it with "lead," according to James Major, who arrested him.
The officer said that Newton's erstwhile sweetheart, Clara Whitfield, apparently had tired of Newton after a time, and had spurned him. This action is said to have enraged Newton to such an extent that he went to his room, secured a double-barrelled shotgun and ammunition and returned to his former fiancée's home, where he began firing at the windows.
The amorous adventurer drew a $100 fine and costs and was placed in the Bridewell for one year to "think it over."

STATE PRESS COMMENT

A Good Plan

It is announced that Senator McNary is about to secure a division of the federal court in Oregon. Under the present plan, two judges reside in Portland. The new plan is to have one of the judges reside in Klamath Falls.

We are no more interested in Klamath Falls than in Portland, but we are interested in taking justice closer to the people. There are enough judges. What is wanted is the division of the districts so as to have the litigants put to as little trouble as possible. By no argument, by no system of reasoning can two judges be permitted to remain in Portland. One ought to go to the southern part of the state—if not to Klamath Falls, there are other mighty good towns down there.—Salem Statesman.

On Suspicion

If the railroad detectives seeking to solve the Skikyou tunnel train holdup, have no better evidence against the D'Autremont brothers, whom they accuse of the crime, than they had against Bernard La Chance whom they heralded the brains of the plot and a "dangerous radical organizer," the mystery is as far from being solved as ever.

La Chance proved a perfect alibi. In a hard-working industrious Sunday school youth, and should be entitled to heavy damages for being broadcasted over the nation as a murderer.

The evidence connecting the D'Autremont brothers with the crime is based upon a receipt for a money order a year old found in the pocket of a blouse picked up in the mountains near the scene, made out to one of the brothers. The rest is purely hypothetical Sherlock Holmes surmise, while the blouse may have been worn by someone else. The hills were full of hunters, and loggers are a roving lot, and not particular about whose carb they wear.

There is nothing in the history of these youthful barbers to justify the assumption that they have turned bloody desperadoes. Their records have been good, and their reputation fair, wherever known. It would seem that baffled by the mystery, these detectives have sought to save their conclusions and have not hesitated to recklessly accuse upon suspicion, heedless of the effect upon the reputations of their victims.—Capital Journal.

Just More State Machinery

When a property tax offset was proposed in the legislature during the consideration of the income tax—when this plan which would have prevented higher taxation of those who are already paying their share of taxes was proposed—it was advocated by one of the members of the legislature that such a law would raise no more than $60,000 a year.

If his figures are correct $60,000 is the anticipated tax upon the "tax dodgers." All the rest comes out of those who are now paying taxes.

Yet to collect income taxes in Oregon costs the federal government $137,000 a year.

The proposed state law creates a new state department. It puts no limit on the number of employees and no limit upon the size of their salaries.

The main thing resultant from adoption of the income tax would not be lower taxes upon present payers but another big state department, filled with tax-eaters, paid for almost wholly by the present taxpayers.—Oregonian.

Sensible Mothers

We notice that a Chicago meeting declared that children's lives had been lengthened 19 years by sensible mothers. This means by mothers who have had the opportunity and taken the pains to get hygienic instructions for the care of children. Wherever this is done the children respond and live longer.

We hope the above paragraph has been carefully read, because we shall proceed to apply a local application. Marion county does not have a nurse. Mothers in the out-of-the-way places are not instructed in the rearing of children. They cannot be "sensible mothers" in the interpretation of the Chicago standard but they are mothers who love their children and would give their lives for them, if that could be done. The unprepared mother suffers the anguish of losing her children because she does not know, nobody has shown her how to rear a child. Hygienically, Marion county could not make a better investment than to have a county visiting nurse.—Oregon Statesman.

New Directory Soon

Comparison of the Oregon Newspaper Directory as published in Oregon Exchanges last December with the directory as lately printed in Sam A. Koser's Blue Book, is another demonstration that this is a changing world. Last December's directory is now absolutely obsolete, and already there have come a considerable number of changes of ownership and personnel, since the Blue Book was issued a few weeks ago.

Two points to make in this connection: It's apparently as easy to get into—and out of—Oregon Journalism as it ever was. And the next directory to be issued by Oregon Exchanges will appear in about two months—probably in the December number. A real effort will be made to bring the directory up to date, and the co-operation of newspaper people is desired.—Oregon Exchanges.

Medical Profession

Commercializing of the medical profession in the offensive sense is not desired by any right-thinking citizen. But commercial methods of practicing professional service in preventive medicine, health maintenance or "life extension," whatever you may wish to call it, will have the result of improving health and prolonging life. The medical profession

ADVICE OF LAWYER LEADS TO GALLOWS

Missouri Negro, Told to Turn Down Court Compromise, Must Die by Noose

(International News Service.)
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 31.—James B. Williams, 23-year-old colored lad, is today facing death on the gallows because his lawyer talked too much. Williams was charged with shooting James Puckett, another negro, on June 5 in a quarrel over a woman. When the case was called to trial in Judge Calhoun's court the judge offered Williams his choice of a trial or a sentence of life imprisonment, if he pleaded guilty, doing away with the necessity of a trial. "Don't you do it," whispered Williams' colored lawyer, Ignatius Page, into his ear. "The worst you can get is a life sentence, as they never sentence anybody to death. Besides they might not be able to convict you, or you might get only 15 of 20 years or so."

Williams elected to stand trial. The jury found Williams guilty. Its verdict was death on the gallows. When Williams tried to plead guilty to get the life sentence the court would not listen. "The law must take its course," it ruled.

GROWERS DEMAND REASON FOR LOW PRICE ON PRUNES

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Oct. 30.—Prune growers of the Walla Walla valley, incensed over the returns they have received for this year's crop held a mass meeting at College Place near here last night to hear the report of their special investigating committee named at a previous mass meeting.

"To examine the state of affairs of the cooperative association which handled the crop. Because all the returns on sales have not yet been received it was said to be impossible to report how much the growers will receive but the directors agreed to endeavor to submit a report shortly. W. R. Parvin, who handled the crop, it was reported is ill in Kansas City and a representative of the association has been sent there to assist in closing up the affairs of the association.

The growers expressed great disappointment over the probable returns but most of them favored a continuation of the cooperative plan of marketing. They stated that underselling by other companies not in the cooperative movement caused the slump in prices.

HOW MUCH MONEY ARE YOU LOSING

If you are throwing manure out of the stable window day after day without giving a thought to its value, just apply the following figures to your own particular farm.

The value of stable manure, as you are already aware, lies chiefly in its organic content and its content of the essential plant food elements of which nitrogen is the most important.

The combined liquid and solid manure of the horse barn chemists tell us contain seven-tenths per cent of nitrogen. This per cent in a ton of manure amounts to about fourteen pounds. Well over half of this nitrogen is lost to the atmosphere as ammonia gas due to the formation of volatile ammonium carbonate in

Y. W. C. A. RAPS BOOZE PARTIES

By KENNETH HARRIS
(International News Service Staff)

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—The hip-flask, prohibition jokes and "wild" automobile parties must depart from university life.

These "evils" are becoming far too commonplace on university campuses throughout the country, according to Miss Louise Whitehead, president of the Y. W. C. A. at Northwestern University, who returned to Evanston, Ill., recently from Washington, where she attended the law enforcement and citizenship conference. In handling down her talk, Miss Whitehead explained that girl students can put a stop to these baneful practices if they choose, and she optimistically predicted they would.

Whispered Evil

"In the Washington conference," said Miss Whitehead, "it was generally admitted that drinking in colleges is more widespread than the public thinks."

"While I do not think the problem has reached proportions at Northwestern which should cause alarm, still I am convinced that the situation here, as well as in other educational centers, will merit an investigation."

"Not long ago I was informed by some girls that at a recent out-of-town football game almost every man they saw had been drinking at least a little and was slightly intoxicated and that they also saw six automobile parties, who made only slight effort to conceal stocks of gin in their machines."

Women May Aid

"Northwestern does not stand for such things. If these conditions continue the women of the campus will take active measures to combat them. At Madison, where reports have it that affairs are quite terrible, girls have adopted resolutions against dating with men who have been imbibing. We probably shall institute 'dateless nights' at Northwestern. Girls attending school here do not drink. They should be able to influence the men against it."

Sees Wide Reform

"A nation-wide movement against violation of the Constitution in the form of making, consuming, or selling alcohol is sure to be made in the near future. I anticipate special efforts along the line of abolishing the prohibition jokes now so frequently heard at the theatres and which often appear in print. They encourage law violation. They have a detrimental effect especially on boys away from home for the first time. They think it smart to carry flasks and get on a 'tear' occasionally."

"I know of no letter time than the present to begin teaching youngsters that they must respect the laws of our land. They should be taught that when they indulge in such practices they are just as much law-breakers as the men who 'crack' safes."

CAN'T KID KOKOMO KOMPANY

(International News Service.)
MONTICELLO, Ind., Oct. 31.—"Ku Klux Klan or Kappa Kappa Kappa" inquired a member of the county fair committee when a truck bearing the insignia "K. K. K." drove up.

"Neither," replied the driver, "it's the Kokomo Kandy Company."

"CURBSTONE MORON" IS UNDER BAN IN KENTON

(International News Service.)
KEOKUK, Ia., Oct. 31.—Curbstone morons must go, according to the edict of Chief of Police McPherson. Although this is no metropolitan city, the youth of the town have city ways. They insist on taking young flappers for joy rides without first being properly introduced.

Hence several male vamps, termed "curbstone morons" by the police, are languishing in jail to pay for same social errors.

RARE ART TREASURE IS PURCHASED "FOR A SON"

(International News Service.)
LONDON, Oct. 31.—Considered by its owners as one of the most famous pictures in the world, a picture which is believed to be a forgotten work by Giorgione, master and founder of the Venetian school, has been picked up for the proverbial song by Professor Milgros, art connoisseur and collector, and now hangs in a modest room in southeast London.

The work is the untouched duplicate of the picture in the Palazzo Pitti in Florence, which was altered in the seventeenth century and is a portrait of a clerical group in which two faces are depicted, and is called "The Concerto."

Giorgione died at the early age of 33 and did not leave many pictures behind him. "The Concerto," which he painted when he was seventeen, is considered his masterpiece.
