HABIT OF THOROUGHNESS.

Ada Louise Comstock, a noted educator, recently said in the New York Times, that the greatest gift of a college education is the habit of doing thoroughly, intelligently and skillfully whatever is to be done. That reminds one of the definition of education, cynic says. that it is what you have left after you have forgotten what you have learned. It is evident from such conceptions of the higher education, that the negulation of facts is not the chief end. The person who has not had the higher education can easily get as many facts into his head as mybody else. But there is this truth, that a well educated person has been put through a drill in which he has learned that a task must be finished accurately and to the inst detail, and that the best information and knowledge must be used in performing that task. Here is where many uneducated people fall down. They have failed to gain the conception of high standards of work. They are satisfied with ordinary and mediocrestandards. If they can perform a task as well as it has been performed in the past, they are satisfied. The person who desires self education will take up the tasks of life with this conception peop of thorough and skilful work. If he gets a job, he will want to know all about that job. If any books are published that throw light on it, if trade papers or magazines or other literature will version. help him understand that function better, he will want to own or borrow such material, and go to the bottom of his new undertaking so he can do it up to the limit of achievement. The self educated man or woman who gets that conception of his work has gotten what many authorities will say is the most vital essential of education.

Yesterday the income tax bill had been defeated by some four thousand majority. Today the measure is in doubt, which matorially adds to its success, the country districts plling up a very substantial vote in favor of the income tax law.

With "Spark Plug" in the running for Armistice Day celebration in Roseburg the stage is set for a wonderful day-with all the trimmings. Come to Roseburg and take a "squint" at Sparky. Some horse.

Eastern election returns say the democrats are holding their own, which are not very consoling words to republicans, Next Monday is a big day in Roseburg for exservice boys. They're going to put over a real celebration.

With the election off our chest we can now get ready for the Thanksgiving bird and cranberry sauce.

Dear Follos;

The demon Speed is in our midst, and keeps us on the hustle. It seems that life is just a round of clatter bang and bustle. We used to drive the old gray mare and think that we were flying, but now her pace would make us think that she was dead or dying.

We used to eat our noonday meals in leisure and contentment, hut now we take them thrown at us, without the least resentment. The mails were plenty fast enough and never roused our ire, but now the telephones are slow and so we use the wire. We used to ride the good old lake and think our speed terrifle, with thrills that made our pulses heat, it used to be prolific. But now the bike Dark is seldom seen, in autos we go racing, while speed we thought imROSEBURG NEWS-REVIEW, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1923

He was criticit he was tricky: his principles were poor, to say the least; his one sim was to run the State government on a basis that would line his own pockets and give jobs to his constituents. But his efforts were hargely fut-fle, too, He did the State very little damage, for, as people and exult-arity and truthfully, the Legislature blocked him. Those two incidents set me to thinking. They caused me to regard with more admiration than ever the wisdom of the founders of this great and glorious republe.

Why this sudden transition? Poll-It answers many questions in Washington.

When a sudden stroke of fate ele vated Calvin Coolidge from the com-parative obsecurity of the vice presidency to the highest elective office the world his acquaintance with public inen, even with the prominent figures in his own party, was very slight. He in his own party, was very slight. He never called any of them by their first mames, as did Harding, Roose-velt and Taft. He didn't know them.

hands They didn't know him. Before he had long been in the White House, so the story goes, Mr. Coolidge realized that if he were to succeed himself he would have to increase his acquaintance among party leaders, men of affairs in businessnot in merely formal ways-but in a more intimate way.

How could it be done? The question vias discussed, it is said, between Mr. Soolidge and the very few men who have been his intimates for years-when he was a mayor of a Massa-chusette town and later governor of the state.

Hence in the three months that Mr. Coolidge has occupied the presidency there has been a constant stream of

White House. Around his own dinner table Calvin Coolidge is becoming more intimate with those high in the councils of his own party and in the great businesses of the country-the men, who by the way, usually select presidential candi-

But the significant thing is that Calvin Coolidge is overcoming the political handicap of a non-political political handicap of a non-political metualitatince. He is learning to know the prominent men in business and political life and they in turn are learning to know this quiet, smallish unn who is prepared to put up a bit-ter battle for his own succession.
