ROSEBURG, OREGON, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1923.

WHERE OUR MONEY GOES

The United States is spending on future wars alone more than the entire net expenses of the federal government five years ago. It is spending as much as the aggregate net earnings of all the railroads of the country in their most prosperous year.

Roseburg is going to see the day, and not far distant, either, when it will be without a single place for the entertainment of its people and others if some agreement is not reached soon for the purpose of suitable grounds for outdoor amusements.

With the Crown Prince already back on German soil and news dispatches telling of the probable return of the kaiser to his fatherland—all occurring in close proximity to Armistice Day—ought to stir our patriotism to that degree that the celebration of the signing of the armistice be made more elaborate and patriotic than ever before.

Well, it was some day yesterday. The boys put over one of the best and cleanest celebrations ever held in Roseburg. It was a merry-go-round of fun from day break until late last night.

Just when the Oregon income tax law goes over the top word is received from Washington that some substantial reductions will be made in the federal income tax law dating of January 1, 1924.

There's a lad I'm mighty fond of, for there's mischief in his eye, and his appetite is healthy when it comes to jam and pie. There's a hole in either stocking and a bump upon his nose, when it's gone he'll get another, where he'll get it goodness knows.

PRUNE PICKIN'S BY BERT G. BATES

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—We're darn sorry And we wanta Extend apologies, For not callin' your attention To the weekly Bath in last Saturday's issue but You'll probably need it More tonight Than ya did then.

DUMBELL DORA THINKS A briar pipe has thorns on it. Well fellows, she was some celebrator, eh?

When the legion gang puts a show on they put it on, we'll say and with a bunch of live-wires like the boys of Umpqua Post they should be able to scrape some of the moss off the backs of the calamity howlers and make the village set up and take nourishment.

Now its predicted that in thirty years, maybe only twenty years, there won't be any Thanksgiving turkeys left. And no post-Thanksgiving hash. It's an ill wind, etc. that has no silver lining.

That Resbg. Elluks football team musta had a shot of Boswell yestiddy.

And we're darn glad the high school-entomped all over the carcasses of the Grants Passers down in that village yestiddy.

Oh, well, what's the use commentin' on all of it—it was too good for words.

All of us are either better or worse than we appear on the surface to be.

Have you ever seen that awful curse, That comes to you in the shape of a nurse?

See has such a face When she's sent to a place, If the patient don't die—he gets worse.

The poor, like the rich, we will always have among us.

"Evil communications corrupt good manners." There surely was a prophetic vision of telephone service.

Kipling expressed it too mildly. The female of the species is more deadly than three or four males.

"I wish the hot weather would come," sighed the thermometer. "People are beginning to look at me as a thing of low degree."

Soup is the most popular dish among clothes cleaners.

In listening to gossip, we ought to be sure and recollect that everybody—from Adam and Eve down—has been talked about.

The carry birds get the best seats at the movies.

"Don't think you'll be missed," said the militant wife, as she hurled the rolling pin at her husband.

BY OUR OWN ROBERT BROWNING

Why, yes, it's true—if it's the truth you want— And truth's a line I'll hew to and not stray— We've no bananas for the crop in Scant.

And not a single one of them today. We've string beans, onions, cabbage-scallions, so

You see there's not a lack of things we've got—

God's in His Heaven, all is well; but no—

Yes, rather—no bananas in the lot. Tomatoes? Here they are—old-fashioned, too!

Ripe as pomegranates! Bite them—watch them sprout!

Potatoes? From Long Island. But—it's true—

So, yea, we have no bananas here today.

HIS REPLY

"Well—ah! as regards Henry Ford as a candidate for the presidency, say Maj. Ira K. Widenfeller, chief speedometer inspector. "After considerable study of the matter I am inclined to believe that a ticket carrying the names of Wardman's Mont for President and Buch Searens for Vice president would win a strong support from the farmers in general."

You can hatch a plan by setting your mind on it.

"Hands off, Copper, I am wearing Boston garters and no metal can touch me."

TODAY'S ADAGE

Save your banana skins. You can use them for slippers.

It takes a fellow 'bout a month to recover from one of them ther' celebrations.

MONEY-MAKING AND CHURCH-GOING.

(By Wickes Wamboldt.) I have heard a successful business man say, "I can't afford to stay away from church." I asked what he meant. He said he attributed his financial success to his steady attendance at church.

He told me that for many years he worked hard for a living and had barely made ends meet. There was no indication that the future would show any improvement. A steady grind from morning till night, day after day, week after week, year after year, barely kept the wolf from the door. Even then the animal's awesome snout poked in occasionally.

When Sunday came this man was tired. He did not feel like going to church. He felt depressed and listless. He either wanted to lie around the house and rest or get out into the country away from it all.

While contemplating his dismal future, he looked about him. He observed that the majority of the successful people were identified with the churches. In fact, it seemed to him that the church-goers as a class got along pretty well. He wondered if there was not something back of it all that he did not understand. He determined to find out. He began going to church regularly.

Within six months things commenced to change for him. First of all, his own outlook on life improved. This brought a sense of confidence and security that he had not known before. He felt there was a sustaining power back of him, upon which he could lean and rely. The feeling grew. His shoulders "went back"; his chin went up; he began to look his fellow-man squarely in the eye. Mentally he took hold of his own situation. He began to go after things and he began to get them.

At the time he related this story to me he stood well in his church and in his city. He had money and he had influence, and most of all, he had contentment. The church stands for the constructive thing, the wholesome thing, the worth-while thing. It is reasonable that a man putting himself in touch with such forces should benefit financially, as well as otherwise.

Opera Star Forms Her Own Company

FLORENCE MACBETH

To be of royal blood and a famous opera star is not enough for Florence Macbeth of the Chicago operatic forces, who has now become an impresario, formed her own company and is planning to tour the United States with the opera "The Secret of Sunnive." Older women before her, like Mary Garden, have achieved distinction by directing an opera company. By promoting the company in which she will be the principal factor, Mrs. Macbeth has gone further than her contemporaries.
