CEYSER DISLIKES SOAPSUDS

Ikey Gave a Dose to the Minute Man in Yellowstone, With Astonishing Results.

The Minute Man, a geyser in Yellowstone park, doesn't like soapsuds. Ikey Einsel may have suspected as much, but, if he did, he wasn't sure, and he wanted to find out. So Ikey, says Mr. Lewis R. Freeman, cooked up a piece of laundry soap in a five-gallon oil can and poured the mess into the crater. "I saw him with an oil can fussing round in the vicinity of the crater," says Mr. Freeman. "Suddenly a succession of heavy reverberations shook the ground, and at the same instant Ikey started to run. He was just in time to avoid the deluge from a great gush of water and steam that shot a hundred feet into the air, but was not quick enough to escape the mountainous discharge of soapsuds that followed.

"Within a few seconds the five gallons of soft soap had been beaten to perhaps a million times its original volume, and for a hundred yards to leeward it covered the ground in great white fluffy, iridescent heaps. Nothing was ever seen like the sputtering little Hebrew who finally pawed his way to air and sunshine from the outburst of the sparkling saponaceous hillocks. For a good half hour the Minute Man retched and coughed in desperate efforts to rid itself of the nauseous mess that Ikey had poured down its throat. Then its efforts became scattering and spasmodic and finally ceased. But for an hour longer gasps and gurgles rattled in its throat. At last even that sound ceased and deathlike silence fell upon the formation. It really seemed that the Minute Man would never spout again."—Youth's Companion.

PEN FILLING STATIONS NOW

Penny in the Slot Machine of Chicago University Gives the Customer Quick Action.

What do you do when your fountain pen runs dry at the most inconvenient possible moment—as it always does? If you are a student at the University of Chicago you patronize the nearest filling station. The campus is supplied with these quite as freely as the Lincoln highway with filling stations for the tourist. A penny in the slot operates the machine and enables the owner of the most voracious pen to appease the thirst of his instrument, says Scientific American.

The machine works with self-filling pens and with the old style that fills from a dropper—provided the user has his own dropper. The dropping of a coin and the turning of the handle releases the ink from the reservoir, and the fluid flows into the right-hand well, whence it can be sucked up by the pen itself or by the dropper. A slot in the upper left hand corner of the outfit contains a wiper with which any damage done by spilling or slopping may be repaired. If one drink turns out not enough, a second penny will, of course, turn the trick.

Horseshoes of Paper.

It has been proposed to make a paper horseshoe that shall for general purposes be the equal of the steel article in the following way: Parchment paper is cut into horseshoe form and built up to a suitable thickness by the use of a mixture of turpentine, Spanish white shellac and linseed oil treated with litharge, and the whole is placed under a hydraulic press. This produces very light and uniform pieces and it is an easy matter to stamp out the nail holes and grooves. Instead of nailing to the horse's hoof they can be applied with an adhesive composition whose principal part is a solution of rubber in bisulphide of carbon. Paper waste could also be molded into the shape of a horseshoe by use of the press, but the result is not so good as with the above.

Almost Repeated.

Of two friends staying at a hotel where most keys fit most doors, one went off to bed, undressed, and turned in, mistaking his friend's room for his own. Half an hour later the friend followed, saw his bed occupied, and returned to the coffee-room. "Did you see me go to my room just now?" he said to the night porter. "Yes, sir," was the reply. "Well, then, why didn't you tell me I'd gone to bed already?" he grunted, and continued to finish the night on a chair in front of the fire.—Yorkshire Post.

A Hard Blow.

Mrs. Brown—'er ain't lookin' too happy today, Mrs. Jones. What's up? Mrs. Jones—What's up? Jones has been promising all week to take me and Billy to see Charlie Chaplin, and this morning, half an hour ago, just as we was getting ready, his article was declared off, and he had to go back to work. That's what's up!—The Pathfinder.

First Rung of the Ladder.

"How did you come to choose a political career?" "I didn't choose it," replied Senator Brigham. "The first time I was elected to office it was because everybody else was too busy to be a candidate."

Needed Treatment

QUAKE IS RECORDED

SPOKANE, Nov. 16.—The seismograph of Gonzaga University between 8 and 8:32 Thursday night registered a heavy earthquake about 850 to 900 miles from Spokane. The direction of the shock was not determined.

PLEA IS CHANGED

R. O. Roberts of Reedsport, indicted at the last term of circuit court on a charge of bribing an officer, today changed his plea from not guilty to guilty. The time for passing sentence was not fixed. Roberts is accused by the grand jury of bribing Jack Connelly, a former deputy sheriff, to refrain from enforcing the prohibition law against Roberts. Connelly is under indictment for accepting the bribe.

Late this afternoon the jury in the case of the state against Clarence Buoy, who was tried on a charge of possession of intoxicating liquor, was still out. The court was forced to take a recess, after starting the case of the state against Esthertle, as the jury panel was exhausted.

BUT THEY ALL REALLY CARE

Persons Who Boldly Defy Public Opinion Know That They Must Pay the Penalty.

"I don't give a darn," says someone when reproved for his actions and told that they will not meet the approval of his friends. "I don't give a darn what people think," said a rather well-known actress when she returned from Europe the other day after her domestic affairs had been given a rather thorough airing.

But they do care. We all care what others think of us. We live a group life, and it is natural to want the approval of those around us. If we must part company with them we can do it safely, for ourselves, only when we are convinced that we are right and they are wrong.

Now and then some spoiled favorite, as in the case of the young actress, snaps her fingers in the face of public approval. That is bravado—or the desire for more advertising, suggests the Milwaukee Journal. Usually those who do it are the ones who have had the greatest favors from the public. Now and then two people, reckless in the attraction of one for the other, defy public opinion. And they pay.

But for most of us the standards of conduct that have been set up are a steady influence. The desire not to go counter to the approval of our fellows often holds us to the path when we are sorely tempted to step aside. And it is well that it does. The don't-give-a-darn policy is dangerous ground.

Seek and Ye Shall Find.

Ash barrels and garbage cans may contain treasures. Many years ago a New York man named Crawford who was visiting the national capital happened to notice an extra large peach-wood can in a garbage can that was standing on the curb, and he wrapped it in a piece of paper and carried it back home with him. He planted it and the seedling that came from that stone was the source of all the excellent Crawford peaches in the world.

Her Neat Little Scheme.

Wife—Dear, if you'll get a car I can save a lot on clothes during our vacation this summer. Hub—How do you mean? Wife—Well, you see, if we go to one hotel as formerly I'll need seven dresses; whereas if we have a car can get one dress and we'll go to seven hotels.—Boston Transcript.
