Covers were placed for Mrs. Sam Shoemaker, Mrs. Charles McElhinny, Mrs. Ned Dixon, Mrs. George Wharton, Mrs. Glenn Wimberly, Mrs. Edna Thornton, Mrs. Kenneth Quinn, Mrs. Roy Catching, Mrs. George Hanson, Mrs. Roy Bellows, Mrs. Jack Wharton, Mrs. Guy Cordon, Mrs. Carl Wimberly, Mrs. Mrs. Whipple, Mrs. Dixon and Mrs. McElhinny assisted the hostess.

Auxiliary Will Have
Christmas Bazaar
Prominent among the Christmas bazaars will be the one conducted on December 1st by the American Legion Auxiliary, at the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Miss Gertrude Dolan is chairman of the bazaar committee, and will be assisted by Mrs. J. E. Chapman and Mrs. E. A. Post. The money realized will go into the general fund of the auxiliary and a part to the hospital fund, to bring Christmas cheer to the disabled soldiers in the hospitals. Dainty hand-made articles very desirable for Christmas gifts will be attractively displayed by the auxiliary, and an unusual feature will be beautifully dressed dolls, each member of the organization dressing a doll for the sale. Delicious cooked food will also be on sale.

A Thanksgiving dinner is in the nature of a traditional feast, and this is as it should be. It is well that we should have one purely American festival when we gather in family reunion, and eating the dishes beloved by our forefathers, recall the memories of their sacrifices and efforts.

It is not an occasion, therefore, to try for novelty or elaboration in table decoration. Over the greater part of the country Thanksgiving day still finds the russet brown oak leaves clinging to the trees. These leaves, brightened by a few yellow chrysanthemums, make an effective and appropriate background for a dinner which should suggest the country, even if eaten in a city.

Thanksgiving a Yankee Holiday
As Thanksgiving originated in New England, it is to Yankee land that we must look for authoritative rulings on the occasion. The old mandate was two courses only, but that rule has relaxed, and, as we are now allowed three, let us begin with oyster soup or more properly oyster blague. Put two cups of oysters in a small saucepan, cook in their own liquor until the edges begin to curl.

Meanwhile mix together two tablespoonfuls of flour and two of butter until they are creamed. Put two cups of milk in double boiler. Take the oysters out of the liquor, chop fine and rub through a sieve. Add this puree of oysters and liquor to the milk. Stir in salt and pepper to taste. Let it all cook for five minutes. This blague is very good as it is, but can be made richer by adding a cup of cream slightly beaten just before taking from the stove.

Next comes, of course, the job of Thanksgiving, the turkey. A turkey is so large and so expensive that it is no wonder many a housewife dreads the responsibility of cooking it.

But being assured of a perfectly cooked, beautifully browned turkey, we can proceed to its indispensable adjunct, cranberry sauce. Here you find two methods to choose from in serving the cranberry—as an old-fashioned sauce with the whole bird, or as a jelly.

To make the jelly, take four cups of cranberries, wash them, put in the saucepan and add one-half cup of water. Boil briskly for twenty minutes. Press through a sieve; add three cups of sugar, return to the fire and boil three minutes. This jelly may be served in a mold or put in very small glasses and served as individual portions.

Potato Balls Add Variety
For vegetable succotash seems very appropriate, as it is a distinctly American dish. In a saucepan put a can of sweet lima beans and add a can of sweet corn. When thoroughly heated add a tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste. Potato balls make a little variety in the serving of that useful and universal vegetable. Boil and mash enough potatoes to make a pint. To this add a little celery salt, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste and enough hot milk to make it possible to form the potato mass into balls. Have ready a kettle with very hot fat, lard or, if preferred, olive oil. Drop in the balls and cook quickly until brown. A skimmer will be found most useful in this kind of frying.

Pie is the only orthodox finish to a Thanksgiving dinner, and to be strictly correct the pie should be limited to two varieties—apple and pumpkin.

Sweet cider is very appropriate served with this dinner with black coffee to follow.

Did You Ever Try a Boiled Turkey?
For those who have had roast turkey for so many Thanksgivings that they would like a change and who yet hesitate to drop turkey altogether, the suggestion is made that they try a boiled turkey. This method of cooking the turkey has the advantage that an old turkey can be utilized and made quite tender by the process. The very handy kettle with a lid in which comes especially for boiling ham, is ideal for cooking the turkey. Stuff the turkey with oysters and breadcrumbs and serve with an oyster sauce.

Put two cups of milk into a double boiler; when hot stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and two of butter rubbed together into a cream. When all is smooth add salt and pepper to taste, then the oysters and cook for about five minutes before serving. Pour over the turkey and around the platter.

For vegetables have boiled rice and scalloped onions. In a bake dish put a layer of cold boiled potatoes, then a layer of sliced onions which have been parboiled. When the dish is full of these alternate layers, sprinkle bread or cracker crumbs on the top. Pour over the whole a cup of warm milk in which a teaspoonful of salt has been dissolved. Bake in a moderate oven for an hour. Serve with the dish in which it is baked. Lima beans would make a good third vegetable.

For dessert, as the orthodox cranberry could not figure in the main course, try a cranberry pie. Line a pie plate with pastry; put in two cups of uncooked cranberries, one and one-half cups of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter and pour over all a quarter of a cup of water. This pie can be served with a top crust like an apple pie, or without like a cranberry pie.

Why the Turkey is "Inconvenient"
There is a very old story about a man with a large appetite who said, "The turkey is such an inconvenient bird. It is a little too large for me and not enough for two." Mrs. M. is a small or medium sized family who is herself in that position. The turkey looks very large in price as well as in fact. Here is a good and simple dinner which does not diverge too much from the traditions of the occasion.

Instead of soup serve that traditional delicacy, clams on the half shell. Then have a roast chicken. Cranberry sauce of course. Have sweet potatoes in southern style. But a hot dish, place in it a layer of cold sweet potatoes cut in lengthwise slices. To each layer add brown sugar and about a teaspoonful of butter. When the dish is full add one cup of boiling water. Cook in a hot oven. Serve in the dish in which it is baked. Canned corn will go well with this dish.

For dessert try a Duchess pudding. This is very good hot or cold. Put a cup of milk in a double boiler. When it is hot add three-quarters of a can of bread crumbs. Let the bread soak until soft. Then stir in one-half cup sweet potato, one-half cup cream, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, one-quarter teaspoonful salt and the yolk of two eggs, slightly beaten. Stir thoroughly. When well mixed, add the whites of two eggs, beaten very stiff. Have ready a well buttered bake dish and cook in a moderate oven for half an hour. Serve in the dish in which it is baked.

A STRIKING CREATION VIA PARIS

Noted Actress Brings Snappy Styles From Abroad

To Be Fashionable One Certainly Must Be Corseted, Says Olga Petrova, Just Back From Center of Styles

CORSETS are absolutely essential to the woman who would follow the latest Paris styles, according to Olga Petrova, the noted dramatic actress and playwright, who recently returned to New York from Europe, where she spent the summer.

"The styles in Paris are ever changing," said Petrova. "One marked change is the general appearance of the silhouette. It would seem that corsets are to continue to hold sway. Paris says 'A waist line and a bust.' It should be achieved for the ordinary woman without surgery."

Petrova is to appear in her new play, "The Girl in the Green," at the Broadway with her Paris Paris a number of the latest creations of the modern art. The actress of Russian origin has been an American for a number of years. She is considered one of the most fashionably dressed actresses on the stage today.
