RIVER IS 2,000 MILES LONG

Alexander the Great Bridged the Indus in India and Led His Army Into the Punjab.

The Indus is one of the three great rivers of northern India. It has its source in the glaciers of the mountain region of the north, and after flowing across the hill country, inhabited by the fanatical tribes, of which Kipling wrote, it comes out upon the plains of India, which it crosses, flowing to the southwest, and emptying into the Arabian sea a little south of the frontier of Baluchistan. The distance in a straight line from source to mouth is 1,500 miles, but if the curves of the river be taken into account, the river has a length of 2,000 miles.

The Indus enters the sea through several mouths, thereby forming a large delta, and on the extreme western end of this delta stands the port of Karachi, the capital of the Province of Sind and the gateway for the trade of the Punjab and a large part of central India. The city has a population of about 125,000. It has a large export trade in wheat, oilseeds, cotton, wool and hides. It contains extensive iron works and other manufacturing plants. Karachi is 500 miles by sea from Bombay.

It will be remembered that when Alexander the Great, the Macedonian conqueror, invaded northern India, he came to the River Indus, bridged it, and crossing in the year 326 B. C., led his army into the Punjab. His victorious career continued for a time, but finally his troops refused to advance further, and Alexander was compelled to turn back. He died on the homeward march.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders.

By all means, drink lots of good water every day. Have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

A Slight Error.

He was a very patient and long-suffering young man, but when at last she arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance.
"Darling, you are late," he said, mildly.
"Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's only twenty minutes past."
"Oh," sighed the young man, "then you must have mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since last night."

ALL WORK TOGETHER

ROSEBURG, Ore., Dec. 5.—Editor Roseburg News-Review: I wish to express my appreciation of your article in last night's issue of the News on using home grown products.

We have, in many cases, felt a grievance against our Roseburg merchants for their actions in advertising foreign products to the neglect of the home grown. I realize that the producers are in part to blame for not putting their product on the market in an orderly manner instead of spasmodically.

Let us work together for the good of Douglas county. Both the merchants and the consumers can lend valuable aid in following the suggestions you have made in your article.

The Douglas County Creamery has taken the lead, let others step in line. Our slogan should be HOME GROWN FIRST. Sincerely yours,
FRED A. GOFF.

LAST TO INVAD ENGLAND

Writer Says John Paul Jones Was First and Only American to Forcibly Enter Britain.

A decidedly interesting point is raised by a well-known Chester gentleman who, in a letter, says of John Paul Jones:

"He was the first and the only American officer, in army or navy, to invade Great Britain, and he was the last invader of that country in the world."

Jones carried the torch to England as a British general carried it to the White House at Washington a generation later.

But do not airplanes count as invaders? Many German planes hovered over England and hundreds were killed by bombs dropped from such air craft.

Buy a piece of real estate and the title reaches up to the sky. I imagine England would assume that anybody who invaded her air space was invading England, which would take from our greatest naval hero the distinction of being the last invader.

Very likely it was meant that Jones was the last man-of-warman to reach England, and yet German submarine officers might dispute that.—Girard in the Philadelphia Inquirer.

INDIANS FORSAKE THE TEPEE

Modern Bungalow Replaces Wigwam of Yore on Kiowa Reservation in Oklahoma.

The tepee, traditionally symbolic of Indian life, is fast disappearing. The Indian is leaving the wigwam of his fathers in favor of the white man's house. The picture of the Indian brave, sitting stolidly in the entrance to his tent, must be discarded for the actuality. He is now much more likely to be sitting on the porch of a cozy bungalow.

So reports the Department of the Interior and gives as an example of the Indian's altered housing system the situation on the Kiowa reservation near Anadarko, Okla. Here out of 1,940 Indian families, only 75 are still living in tepees. This "stride toward civilization," as it is characterized, is a rapid one. Twenty years ago practically every one of these Indians was living in tepees and every one of the adults had been reared in a tepee.

Now they are ensconced in homes advertised by real estate companies as "modern in every respect." Many of them, says the Department of the Interior, are better than those of their white neighbors.—Christian Science Monitor.

Beck Didn't Like a Wig.

James M. Beck, solicitor general of the United States, is pleased that he doesn't have to practice law in England, where the wig and gown are essential to a barrister's appearance before a high tribunal, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Mr. Beck, who recently argued America's case before the privy council, contesting the Canadian court's verdict in the General Motors' suit, is authority for the statement that he could not quite overcome the feeling that he was addressing the court in his hat and overcoat—a sensation which interfered no little with his best flights of oratory.

The wig-wearing custom in the courts of Great Britain is not without its virtues, according to Mr. Beck. In court, at least, he says, all men are equal in appearance. The bald-headed advocate does not appear ridiculous, and attorneys who depend upon bovine-like manes or Byronic locks to influence the bench or jury find them selves out of luck.

Build Strength to throw off the cold take SCOTT'S EMULSION

A Chassis as Fine as Its Motor

From whatever viewpoint you study the Willys-Knight car, you reach but one conclusion—It lives up in every way to its marvelous motor.

Take the frame, for example—the "back-bone" of your car. A heavy steel channel, 6 1/2 inches deep at the center, is rigidly reinforced with six cross members (the motor legs add additional strength), which minimize frame distortion, the cause of body squeaks and rattles in the average car. Only one American car (and it sells for almost three times as much as the Willys-Knight) can boast of a front axle construction equal that of the Willys-Knight. There are eight Timken bearings in the front axle—two inside each wheel and one above and one below each steering knuckle King-bolt.

No car in America is easier to steer. The fatigue which generally comes from driving a car as big as the Willys-Knight is almost entirely eliminated by this one stroke of engineering genius. Women find the Willys-Knight an unusually easy car to handle for this reason.

LANDMARK OF MAINE COAST

Mystery of the Old "Powder House" at Hallowell Never Yet Has Been Solved.

Founded on the immovable rocks is that time-honored landmark, the old Hallowell powder house, overlooking the little city nestled beneath some of Maine's most beautiful hills.

This old brick structure has its one mysterious door barred with iron and carved with cabalistic signs that register its visitors of over a century. No trace has ever been found of the erection of this little building, which has stood for two centuries as a silent sentinel over a peaceful and law-abiding community.

It is said that when Peter Clark took his one ruder cart, which he and his father and brave wife had brought with them from their Massachusetts home in 1702, and turned it upside down on the banks of the river for their first shelter, with their one child, the powder house on the heights was standing there exactly as we see it now. Its origin and architects are unknown and unaccounted for and a deep mystery will always prevail around its existence. It is a landmark annually visited by hundreds who have heard of its silent vigil on the rocky heights of the Kennebec valley.

The name powder house was given to it because it has always been used as a depository for the highly combustible ingredients of powder and dynamite and from it has been given the name of the rocky ledge, Powder House hill, adjoining it.—Lewiston Journal
