Egyptians Feared Tut's "Ka, or Earthly Spirit, Was Against Project.

LUXOR, Egypt, Doc, 12,-Science If ACM. Expt. Dec. 12.—Science is again probing in the Valley of the Kings for the secret that for thirty-five centuries has been interred in the tombs of the Pharaons. Ageing sleep is being broken by vanidal picks and shovels that the modern world may view the hoarded treasures of the old.

The ancient Exptians believed that when a man died his soul went linto limbs, but his earthly suite.

ried away from the entrance. A horde of native boys, each carrying a basketful of soil, scurried in endloss procession from the mouth of the tomb to an adjacent dumping around.

This earth had been left at the summer, net only to protect it from robbers but to guard against the rain should a deluge fall. It rains in Luxor only about once every fifty years, but wher tain falls it comes in the form of a coudburst, and the small basis like valley fills like a bathtub when all the taps are turned on. As the tomb of Tutankhamen is situated in the heart of this bare, rocky ravine, any rain must inevit, ably collect first curside the entrance to his sepulahre.
