MONTAG COLONIAL PIPE AND PIPELESS FURNACES

THERE'S a MONTAG dealer in your town. He is ready and willing to explain how the MONTAG Colonial Furnace brings greater heat satisfaction with lower fuel cost.

Ask him to show you the fuel saving Montag OVAL FIREPOT that burns all kinds of fuel with equal heating satisfaction. It is one of the outstanding features of modern furnace construction. Its large size and oval shape enables large chunks of wood or coal to be used, thereby requiring less attention in firing than with firepots of less capacity.

Ask him about the high-grade materials and heavy construction which make MONTAG Colonial Furnaces stand the test.

And the natural way in which MONTAG Colonial Furnaces, by circulation, evenly heat every room in the home.

Go right down to the MONTAG Colonial dealer and talk over your heating problem with him. Ask him for the illustrated folder showing the various types and sizes of MONTAG Colonial Furnaces, and their advantages.

Remember that MONTAG Colonial Furnaces are made in the West for Western and Western climate, for city and country homes already built, and homes under construction.

Antlers Theatre

A romantic love story set amid a background of Canadian forests with plenty of thrills and humor intermingled, can be found in "The Critical Age," an adaptation of Ralph Connor's well known novel. "Glen-garry Schooldays," the feature attraction at the Antlers Theatre today. Ernest Shipman, producer, took his company from New York clear up to the upper reaches of the Ottawa river upon the exact locality as called for in Mr. Connor's novel.

The story is that of a son of a poor farmer who has adopted the habit of figuratively dreaming his life away. However, when Bob Kerr, a polished and wealthy city chap, enters the scene and begins monopolizing the girl, then the dreamer shows fight. With the aid of his dog, the country dreamer rescues the girl from the rapids after she has been left to her fate by her companion, the city fellow. The wild chase by an angry bear and the final rescue of the girl's father, whose vote was needed in Ottawa to defeat an obnoxious law, brings the dreamer lad out of the dreamer class and makes him a member of the girl's family.

One of the principal actors is "The Critical Age" is a big Belgian police dog, who stages a thrilling rescue and who supplies a lot of excitement and suspense of the story. The scenes in and about the school, it is said, are extremely laughable.

Liberty Theatre

In speaking of his great work in directing "Jacqueline" or "Blazing Barriers" Mr. Henderson said, "I think this new Curwood picture undoubtedly represents my finest screen effort. I have always enjoyed working on a picture from the pen of this gifted author, not only because he is a personal friend of mine but because I was born in Canada myself and stories of the great Northwest have always had a strong appeal for me."

Although it is true that a director can either make or break a picture, if he is to turn out a really creditable production he must have cast to back him up. In the case of "Jacqueline" or "Blazing Barriers" I was more than fortunate in having one of the greatest aggregations of screen players ever assembled to work with. Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Sheldon Lewis, Edmund Cross, Effie Shannon, J. Barney Sherry, Gus Winberg, Paul Panzer, Kate Bruce, Charlie Fane, little Russell Griffin and a host of others make up the cast. And each and every one is a "trouper" in every sense of the word.

At Liberty Theatre only Sunday and Monday.

Majestic Theatre

An interesting moral is pointed out in a picture which is sheer face comedy.

Sounds illogical, perhaps, but it does occur in "A Million to Burn," the Universal attraction which opens tonight at the Majestic Theatre.

Herbert Rawlinson, the star of the picture, is presented as a waiter in a mountain resort hotel, a hotel seething with rebellious employes.

This waiter is a philosophical chap who writes a few of his ideas across the back of a menu card while idle in the dining room. The ideas are to the effect that discontent among employes which fosters poor service to customers is brought about by lack of understanding between employes and customers.

By substituting a few well directed fistie gestures for his philosophy when a mutiny was threatened, the new manager was able to teach the hotel help that they were better off as waiters and chamber maids and the like, than as sculptors and tennis champions. Also he taught himself the fact that his philosophy was very unsound.

Earl A. Lander of Kandle, is in Roseburg and will spend a few days attending to business matters.
