Antlers Theatre.

Breathing the same spirit which prompted Bret Harte to write his famous stories of the west, the Paramount production, "Salome Jane," which is delighting visitors to the Antlers theatre, throbs with the wild romance of the picturesque days of '49. It is a superb picture and an epic of early civilization in California.

In this story history is brought to life. The lawless pioneers of the west who poured through Boulder creek canyon in Northern California in the late forties live again on the screen. It is a story of the primitive love of the westerner, mingled with his craving for vengeance and his crude sense of justice. The picture was made on the spot where Bret Harte gained inspiration for his story by the same name. It was adapted by Waldemar Young.

Included in the cast are Jacqueline Logan, George Fawcett and Maurice Flynn, the featured players. Miss Logan plays the name part, while Maurice Flynn takes the role of the stranger. Mr. Fawcett is seen as Yuba Bill, the stagecoach driver. The picture is quite worth while.

The Revelations of a Paid Companion

By JANE PHELPS

Author of "My Husband and I," "A Wife's Story," etc.

NO EXPERIENCE—NO REFERENCES Chapter V.

Something stirred faintly within me as I studied the advertisements, something new and strange—hope. Perhaps there was something I could do with this new freedom of mine, something in the world of work that even an inexperienced girl could do. But as I read long columns of "Help Wanted, Female" it was one word in them all that stared up at me: "Experience." It seemingly made no difference whether it was office girl or servant that was wanted, they must as the first, second and last requisite, have experience.

"My spirits drooping, hope receding, my attention was caught by an advertisement for a companion for a lady on a trip East. I read it slowly:

"A lady going East immediately would pay all expenses of a traveling companion. If satisfactory would keep her indefinitely. Apply at once, Mrs. Elmer Ellwood, Hotel Ambassador."

"Going immediately. Apply at once. All expenses paid." I glanced at the clock. Midnight. The place was probably filled. I never thought that few people were so situated they could leave at such short notice, and the hope that had caused my heart to beat fast at a way of escape filtered out.

"I'll go the very first thing in the morning," I said aloud to myself as I went to bed. "It won't do any harm to see her and find out if she has engaged someone."

I slept fitfully, fearful of oversleeping. I arose very early, and dressed carefully, taking pains to make myself as attractive as possible with the little at my command. Then I went out and got some breakfast. I had eaten nothing since the morning before, and was faint with hunger. My breakfast paid for, I had exactly 28 cents in the world.

Ten of that must go for carfare to the Ambassador and back. "Eighteen cents to buy the world with, and no experience," I said aloud as I boarded the car. That word took all my courage from me.

I asked for Mrs. Ellwood, sending word I had called in answer to her advertisement, and while I waited with beating heart, I unconsciously was helped and encouraged by the beauty of my surroundings, the restfulness of the great lobby where I sat.

"Come this way." A bell-boy led me to the elevator, gave me the number of her room, the floor, and I was on my way to my great adventure, my first attempt to achieve independence.

"I was in time—I was in time—the place wasn't taken," so my thoughts tumbled over each other. Mrs. Ellwood would not have wasted time seeing me if she had already engaged someone.

I was shown into a handsome parlor. A tall dark young man was the only occupant. He rose lazily, and asked:

"You are the young lady who has answered Mrs. Ellwood's advertisement?"

Without replying, he riveted his eyes upon me. They not only searched me, they tore through me until I felt they were seeing my very soul. "Why should he look at me like that?" I thought as I waited. Under the penetration of his gaze I could not force my eyelids to drop. I flinched slightly, but could not stir from the compelling quality of his gaze. He turned from me at a slight sound, the door opened and Mrs. Ellwood came in.

"The young lady in answer to your advertisement, Aunt." The young man bowed mockingly.

"Um, yes. Well, my dear, where are your references?" The medium sized, ill-looking woman asked. Her face was very white, and there were dark shadows under her eyes. I noticed she walked uncertainly.

"I haven't any. I never have had a position."

"You have lived at home with your parents?" She studied me as she spoke.

"Until they died two years ago. Since then I have been living with my father's sister. She was buried just a week ago."

"You have friends who can recommend you, the pastor at your church perhaps?"

"No, my Aunt allowed me no friends. I seldom went to church." I replied, then something within me forced me to say: "I am sure I can be of service to you. Aunt was often ill and I was her only nurse and companion. And I must go somewhere at once."

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

by MRS. ELLSBURY
(Address all communications to Mrs. Ellsbury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: Like many others I am coming to you for advice. I do not dare let my aunts know how foolish I have been. I have admired someone for a long time, and seemingly this person has never liked me. I am sure they almost hate me. Please advise me just how to get this one out of my life. I have admired this person against my own will. I now do not want to care for anyone. I think myself better off alone. To my way of thinking, if you are looking for trouble, just get married nowadays. Thanking you for advice.

RESIDENT OF COUNTY HOME DIES SUNDAY
R. W. Howlett, of Glendale, died yesterday at the county home after a long illness. Mr. Howlett was about 80 years of age and spent 23 or 24 years in Douglas county prior to his death. He spent many years in the Glendale vicinity, where he was engaged in mining and prospecting. He was brought to the county home about three years ago, when his health became such that he was not able to take care of himself. He became quite ill a few days ago and death occurred yesterday. The only known relative is a nephew who resides in the east and an effort is being made to get in touch with him.

WORRIED: Through being repressed, the attraction that this man holds for you has probably magnified itself out of all proportion. Resolve to yourself that you will put this man out of your mind, and then interest yourself in other people, and interests. If you make a real effort to do this, I am sure that in a short time you will wonder how you could ever have felt as you do now. Attractions of the kind you have are not uncommon, but believe me, they are very foolish and you will realize this later. You are wrong to think yourself better off alone. Do not worry about marriage, and wait until you are really in love with someone who reciprocates your affection, and you will feel differently.

A. S. GLIDE, OREG.: I am not printing your question, but will try to help you if I can. There is only one cure for bashfulness, one way of avoiding it, and that is to cease thinking of oneself. You have been sure that you have been afflicted with bashfulness, and every time you talk to anyone you think of it again, and expect it, and so of course you become self-conscious. Forget yourself in interest in other people and what they are saying. Bashfulness is really a nervous disease, and you can be helped by a little intelligent study of psychoanalysis. If you care to study this subject, and will send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I will send you the name of books on the subjects that can be secured through the library. Overeating is not a contributing cause. Be your pleasant natural self to this man, and when you have an opportunity of seeing him be friendly. In he cares to continue the acquaintance he will do so.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

In Regard to Dixonville Road.

Editor News-Review:

In last Tuesday's issue of your valuable paper appeared an article by Dr. C. H. Bailey in regard to Deer Creek road, in which it was stated the road was rapidly deteriorating and full of chuck holes.

This statement is correct to a certain extent, however, the writer of the article was misinformed or several other statements as follows:

First, Not one dollar of gasoline tax or auto license fees are turned over to any road in Douglas County excepting the Pacific highway, Coos Bay highway. These fees being turned over to and under control of the State Highway Commission.

Second, he states he does not know the assessed valuation of this district. According to the 1922 tax roll summary the assessed valuation of road district No. 2 was $480,880, as this district extended to the Lone Rock ferry and took in part of Edenbower who can readily see there are nearly 30 miles of road in this district including the side roads.

He further states that the road levy is 5 mills in this statement. He is again misinformed, as the last year's levy was only 2 9-10 mills, instead of 5 mills. According to law each road district receives but 70 per cent of this levy or approximately 2 mills, which on an assessed valuation of $480,880 will raise approximately $1000. Divide this by your road mileage of 20 miles and you have an average of $50.00 per mile per year to maintain the roads of this district, which has never voted any special tax for years, although their attention has been called time and again to the necessity of such tax for maintenance purposes.

This year however, they voted a small tax for a section through Black Mud Hollow which is 100 per cent worse than any of the road from Roseburg to Dixonville.

This letter is not written to in any way apologize for the present condition of the Deer Creek road which is bad enough, and while dragging might help the road temporarily, the road is worn out and needs at least 3000 yards of fine crushed rock for resurfacing in order that the grader may have material to work into the chuck holes.

In view of the fact that 35 road districts have just voted special taxes for maintaining and improving their roads including the West Edenbower and Melrose district. West of the rail road track has just voted another 10 mill tax for paving. It does seem that the residents between Roseburg and Dixonville should at least be willing to vote a small tax to assist in the maintenance of this important road.

Spend the Money at Home.

Roseburg, Jan. 21, 1924.
Editor News-Review: Today we put in the drive to raise money to feed the starving Germans. Here is hoping we raise it. The thought has just come to me, what are we going to do with this money when raised? Are we going to send it East? There to buy the very things we've here to sell?

We have thousands of tons of prunes that the growers cannot find a market for at profitable prices. Prunes are a good wholesome food and no doubt will be included in supplies sent over, but bought in New York at a great increase in price over what they can be had here for, owing to that "overhead" we hear so much about.

Not one dollar of the $100,000 Oregon is asked to contribute should be sent out of the state but spent here among the producers. We have everything needed, flour, fruit, dried and canned, dairy products, salmon, in fact anything needed to feed starving people.

We have a slogan continually preached at us, "Spend your money at home." Let us try it.
Write Mr. Strang, manager of the drive in Portland. Quota made up—pounds of prunes. Send shipping instructions.
Practice what you preach. Spend your money at home.

EXPERTS CONSTANTLY STUDY TO PREVENT DESTRUCTIVE FIRES

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Fire prevention is the subject which perhaps more than any other interests the Underwriters' Laboratories, with work shops in Chicago, New York and San Francisco where tests to secure dependable data on all kinds of fire resisting materials constantly are being made. The recent experience of the city of Berkeley, California, with a destructive fire drew attention again to fire resistive roofs. By means of specially designed furnaces roofing materials were once more subjected to the same exposure to fire and wind that they would meet in actual emergency, and the tests showed that there need never be such a thing as a roof fire.

The Laboratories, operated for service under the auspices of the insurance companies, headed by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, have had a busy year. Originally they consisted of two men working in one room. They now have three large plants and employ nearly 200 engineers.

Many facts of vital importance have been brought out in the tests of fire doors, fire windows and shutters and building materials used in walls, floors and partitions. These are compelled to withstand flames at a temperature up to 1700 degrees for periods varying from 45 minutes to an hour, and in some cases even longer. Safes are heated to 1700 degrees for an hour. They are then hoisted 30 feet and dropped on a pile of brick, reheated for another hour, and when opened must show no damage to their contents.

There has been a notable increase in the number and variety of electrical apparatus submitted to the Laboratories, and the small percentage of electrical fires as compared with those from all other causes, is said, according to the annual report of the association, to be largely due to Underwriters' Laboratories inspections and tests.

In the automotive field the Laboratories' tests have included gasoline tanks, fuel feed systems, carburetors, gauges, generators, starting motors, ignition systems, mufflers, exhaust heaters, etc. With the cooperation of the principal automobile manufacturers, research work is being carried on with a view to developing certain new standards of design and equipment.

The aim of the Laboratories is to establish a minimum standard of safe practice in the case of each device or material examined. The result of their investigations is public property.
