Many Farmers Undergoing Foreclosure Proceedings

Report of Secretary Wallace Shows That One-Fourth of the Farmers Are Insolvent.

(Grange Bulletin.)
An inquiry made by the Department of Agriculture into the financial difficulties of the farmers reveals, says the Secretary's report, that about 4 per cent of owner farmers in 15 corn and wheat States lost their farms through foreclosure or bankruptcy, while nearly 4.5 per cent surrendered their farms to creditors without legal process and another 15 per cent were actually bankrupt but were holding on through the leniency of their creditors. Records of the Department of Justice indicate that in the pre-war years 5 per cent of all bankruptcy cases were farmers, but that in 1922 the proportion had grown to 14 per cent. Secretary Wallace points out, too, that there has been a drift of population from the farms to the cities which tends to restore a balance between agriculture and urban occupations, but which is nevertheless to be deplored because of the conditions which make it necessary and because it is draining from the country a large number of intelligent and ambitious young farmers.

Millions Are Starving, Says General Allen

In a letter just received at Oregon state headquarters for the American committee for relief of German children, 715 Corbett building, Portland, among other things Major-General Henry T. Allen, former commander of American troops in Germany and now national chairman of this relief work, said:

"My survey of the evidence has convinced me that Secretary Hoover is fully justified in saying that 20,000,000 Germans are now in serious danger. As is always the case in such emergencies, the most acute suffering is to be found among the children and the aged. The childhood of Germany is now gravely menaced by lack of proper food and clothing and the diseases resulting therefrom."

Autos Cheaper Than Whisky

It is common to wonder where the people get all their money to buy and run automobiles. A statistician comes forward with a statement that we are spending less money for and on automobiles in this country than we used to spend for whisky. Which speaks well for the people. Automobiles are responsible for a lot of accidents, of course, but whisky used to wreck more lives and more homes in a week than autos would in a generation.

Agricultural Economic Conference at O. A. C.

Belief that the Agricultural Economic conference to be held in Corvallis, January 23-25, is very much worth while, is expressed by Geo. A. Palmer, Hood River, Master of the State Grange. He urges the Grangers to take part and help in arranging this program of profitable production in Oregon, based on efficient marketing requirements. As he expressed it, "This is the kind of a meeting we need. I will use my influence in encouraging Grangers to take part."

The conference will deal with problems of pressing and vital importance to all persons interested in agriculture in Oregon. Shall we proceed blindly with the development of Oregon agriculture, or shall we adopt a program based upon an understanding of both production and marketing possibilities? Shall the various agencies interested in agricultural improvement work independently or in concert? These questions and similar ones dealing with the agricultural situation in Oregon will be brought before the conference for solution.

Portland—During 1923, 1284 vessels entered port. Total tonnage of ships entered was 3,785,267 and tonnage of clearance was 3,792,633.

MISTAKES MADE BY POETS

Blunders in Literature Are Not All Confined to the Living Authors.

The blunders in literature are not all confined to living authors. Milton's lines, "Thick as autumnal leaves that strew the brooks in Val d'Ambrosia," are familiar to everyone, but, as a matter of fact, the Val d'Ambrosia forests are all of pine trees, so that there are no leaves, and pine needles do not fall in the autumn, but towards spring.

In "Comus" he writes:
And in the violet embroidered vale
Where the love-lorn nightingale
Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth well.

Unfortunately for the poet, the male nightingale alone sings and the female is voiceless.

Another classic writer who allowed his meter to get the better of his sense was Pope, who wrote:

When first young Maro, in his noble mind,
A work of outlast immortal Rome designed.

He had overlooked the fact that, if Rome was immortal, nothing could outlast it.

But neither of these is any worse than the story of Pharaoh's daughter finding the infant Moses among the bulrushes on the banks of the Nile. As a matter of fact, bulrushes do not thrive in that part of the world, and there are none on the banks of the Nile.

In his youthfulness may be found some excuse for Keats writing:
Like stout Cortez, when, with eager eyes,
He gazed at the Pacific.

Balboa discovered the Pacific, and not Cortez.

VULCAN THE GOD OF FIRE

Forger of Thunderbolts for Jupiter When Hurlled by Mother From Olympus.

Vulcan is in classic mythology the god of fire, the patron of blacksmiths and workers in metals, and the armor of the gods. He was the son of Jupiter and Juno, or, according to some accounts, of Juno alone. Owing to his weakness and lameness, he incurred the displeasure of his mother and was cast by her from Olympus. After dwelling for nine years with Thetis and Eurynome in a grotto beneath Oceanus, Vulcan returned to Olympus, but was cast out a second time for presuming to side with his mother in a quarrel between her and Jupiter. He fell on the island of Lemnos and there set up his forge; but afterward removed them to the volcanic islands of Lipari, near Sicily, where he forged the thunderbolts of Jupiter and other marvelous implements.

Vulcan was sometimes called Mulciber and Lemnius—Detroit News.

Curious Things About Starfish.

Legs on a starfish? At first you will more than likely say not, but if you want to make certain put one in a pool of water and watch what happens. Soon you will notice it scrambling over stones and gliding up any rock that may happen to be in its way. This is the moment to snatch it up and have a look at the hundreds of little legs it keeps curled up inside, ready to poke out of holes in the skin when required.

A starfish also has eyes in the tips of its rays, and one particular kind possesses eyelids which open and shut. Another curious fact about the starfish is that if one of its rays is cut off another one will grow, and if the creature is cut completely in half, each half will throw out new rays, so that in a few weeks two starfishes appear instead of one.

Some starfish have a habit of breaking into pieces of their own accord when alarmed. Even a shadow will cause them to give a shudder and break into bits. Most starfish have a curious habit of protecting their eggs. They heap them together in a small pile and then bend their rays downward so that they stand on their tips and form a kind of cage or table.

How to Test Fresh Eggs.

The best test of all for the egg is its appearance after it is broken—if the white and yolk run together it is evidence that the egg is not strictly fresh, though no odor is perceptible. But that is too late to save money, if not to avert an actual catastrophe. One way to tell a newly laid egg is by the "glow" or "blow" on the shell.

This glow disappears after banding and on being exposed to the air for some time. Fresh eggs are full and rose-colored when held up to the light; large dark spots and shadows indicate decay.

A cold-storage egg will be darker and somewhat shrunken in appearance. If the egg when placed in a 10 per cent solution of salt water sinks to the bottom it is to be considered perfectly fresh; if it remains immersed in the liquid, it is at least three days old; if it rises to the surface it is more than five days old.

"In Shallows and in Miseries."

"Your spooners aren't all in the pulp and on the platform," writes T. W. C. "I read the other day of a man remarking that another man who had insulted him had made an 'unpolluted squall.' And not long ago I myself in quoting Shakespeare's 'There is a tide in the affairs of men,' amused my clubmates by rendering the concluding lines:

"Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in millows and in shales."

THE GO-NA MAN

(By Wickes Wamboldt.)

Did you ever meet a "go-na" man? Of course you have—many times. So have all of us. He is always "go-na" do something and he never does it. I remember one such particularly. He had a little place on the bank of the St. John's river. For a year he had been building a fine launch with which he expected to make a neat income taking out boating parties. Somebody said to him, "Vic, you had better test that gasoline tank before you put it in."

"Yes, I'm go-na" said Vic. But he didn't.

They were finishing the boat up late one night, preparatory to launching it in the morning. Vic's old father smelled gasoline and looked for it with a match. He got his whiskers burned off and Vic sold what was left of the launch to the junk man for ten dollars.

Another man I knew discovered a crack in his fireplace. "You'd better have that fixed," his wife said anxiously. "Yes, I'm go-na," he replied, but he didn't. Three weeks later his house burned down.

A married man of my acquaintance said for twenty years, "I'm go-na take out some life insurance." But he didn't and his widow takes in sewing for a living.

An autoist observed that his steering gear was loose. "I'm go-na have that fixed," he said. But he didn't. After they pulled him off a picket fence at the bottom of an embankment he lived long enough to tell how it happened.

Another man said every year, "I'm go-na let my wife home and visit the old folks," he didn't. The old folks are in cemetery now.

A woman of a spicy disposition used to start the day with the exclamation, "I'm go-na stop being cross John when he comes home tonight no matter how mean he is." But she didn't and she is trying to make up for it now by putting flowers on John's grave.

Few of our troubles slip up on us unawares. They usually are preceded by glaring signs. If instead "go-na" do this and "go-na" do that, we really did this and really that, we would prevent a lot of headaches, difficulties and catastrophes.

Carnival Gayeties of Canadian Winter Sport Centers Lure Many Americans Across the Border Each Winter

GOING DOWN! SPEEDY TRAVELING BY TOBOGGANS ON QUEBEC'S SLIDE

Have you ever spent one of the white months in Canada? If not, there is still a delightful experience in store for you. Winter in Canada is synonymous with winter sports. With the advent of ice and snow these sports begin; skis, sleds, toboggans, skates, snowshoes, hockey and lacrosse clubs, together with warm, gay sport costumes, make their appearance. A psychological change takes place in the social atmosphere, merriment radiates its contagion, briskness characterizes all outdoor movement.

For many years Quebec and Montreal have been Mecca for a large number of American winter sport lovers, who flock to these two cities on the St. Lawrence during carnival seasons. There are many other Canadian points where organized sport is a winter feature. St. John has its skating tournament in which many professionals participate. Sherbrooke, Quebec, has planned an elaborate skating contest and is providing some splendid trophies as awards.

Gray Rocks Inn, an all-the-year-round resort in the Laurentian Mountains, 85 miles northwest of Montreal, offers airplane-ski-joring in addition to many other winter sports. Winnipeg will set aside the week of February 4-11, for carnival festivities which are projected on a vast scale, in addition to the great annual bonspiel, lasting several weeks, will be staged as usual. Banff in the Canadian Rockies, which is fast becoming as popular in winter as it has long been in summer, is planning to outdo former efforts. Winter sports are enjoyed there all through the white season and will culminate in a gay carnival lasting from Feb. 9 to 16, the last two days being devoted to a bonspiel. Dog races are a feature of Banff's winter season and famous teams from Le Pas will run at Banff. Le Pas will celebrate in carnival style from March 8 to 15, during which period the famous 200-mile non-stop dog-team race will be run. Revelstoke, a stronghold of ski-jumping, will stage contests Feb. 8th and 9th. Both Montreal and Quebec are making extraordinary preparations for this season's program. Mount Royal, in the former, provides an unexcelled playground where skiing, snowshoeing, bob-sledding and tobogganing may be enjoyed at their best. Skating contests, torchlight festivities on the Mountain and the presence of professional entertainers, provide amusement for Montrealers and visitors.

Quebec is really the Capital of Winter Sports in Canada. Its Dufferin Terrace and Chateau Frontenac are names to conjure with among winter sport devotees all over Canada and the United States. The three-track toboggan slide on the Terrace is generally the center of attraction and crowds line its slides to watch the swift flying toboggans. A fine ski-jump, a skating rink, indoor and outdoor curling, contests and parades by the many ski and snowshoe clubs all every waking hour. A team of husky dogs with sleigh and driver is maintained by the Chateau management for the use of the public. Quebec's carnival will end in a riot of excitement when the third Eastern International Dog-Team Derby is run there on Feb. 21, 22 and 23. Both American and Canadian teams to the number of about eighteen, will strive to win the Gold Cup, Silver Cup and $2,000 in prize money.
