

AND PLASTER!

Now! Car will arrive between Feb. 1 and 10.
Nitrate of Soda also must be Ordered in Advance

AIN TILE—Place your orders at once for next load.
T—Turkeys, Capons and heavy Hens.
you patronizing Douglas county farmers or Port-millers? Buy ground oats instead of millrun.
er feed, and you keep the money at home.
"Let's Make it a Million."

ARM BUREAU COOPERATIVE EXCHANGE
ROSEBURG AND OAKLAND

LIABLE TAILOR

Next door to Umpqua
Hotel
J. H. BERNIER
Phone 149

in Roseburg el Umpqua

ide Batteries

Service Station
repairing on all makes of Starter, generator, repairing lighting system, repairing carburetor
TOWN HORNS
MEL SNUBBERS
WATER KENT Systems.
windshield wipers, auto
of all kinds.
Batteries Station
B. TAYLOR, Prop.
Jackson St. Phone 67

Roasted Coffee

firm believers in freshly ground coffee. No one knows a tin of coffee is going to make a special-bulk coffee. Why pay for cost out of proportion extra.
TWO GRADES
AND 45c PER POUND

Economy Grocery

Phone 63

ide for that Inevitable "Rainy Day"
It Now and Save Worry
the all kinds of Health,
Accident and Fire Insur-

HN E. FLURRY

Insurance Agency
Rooms 1 and 2
Roseburg Bank Bldg.
183 Roseburg, Ore.

10 Per Cent
Discount

in now and get that suit. This is just at you have been look-for. Discount on all and winter lines.

Imperial CLOTHING
SALES

TRY OUR WAY
277 Our Auto Will Call

The Revelations of a Paid Companion

By JANE PHELPS

Author of "My Husband and I," "A Wife's Story," etc.

I AM KINDLY RECEIVED BY THE FAMILY

Chapter XI.

"Home at last!"
Mrs. Ellwood rose with the words as the train came to a grating standstill. We had been ready to debar for ten minutes, ten minutes of anxious waiting for me, of happy anticipation for her. In the days we had passed together I had learned something of how Mrs. Ellwood loved her home, the trial it had been to her to be banished from it even for a short time because of her health.

Then, with porters carrying our bags, we hurried along with the rushing throng, through the gates—then:
"Oh, Mother, but it's good to have you back!" and a tall, rather handsome young man bent over to kiss her, only to be pushed aside by the liveliest girl I ever had seen, while a gay voice cried:

"It's time you came back, I should have fetched you myself if you had stayed another day."
"Would you Mollie?" I almost wish I had remained to see if you really mean that." Mrs. Ellwood replied as gayly, yet with an understanding of meaning I failed to understand. Then a serious looking man spoke.

"We are glad to have you back, Kate," and kissed her tenderly.
A sense of unreality possessed me as I looked on. The dignified man who received me so kindly, the lovely daughter, Molly, so carefully gay, the tall son, who now standing in the background looked somehow less attractive a bit almost silent. It was a tremendous relief when the formal strain of introductions were over and I could escape notice in the general conversation of the family. But I stood on the threshold of a new world and moved in a musical dream.

I was to be one of them, live with them.
I still moved as in a dream as we entered the stately, beautiful home that was also to be my home.
"Mollie will show you your room, Rita," Mrs. Ellwood said, "the same my former companion occupied. I'll ring when I want you."

I followed the lovely graceful Mollie upstairs to a small but beautifully furnished room, which she informed me was near her mother's.

"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

"Mother says you are going to stay on with her," she said after a little. "I am glad—glad of anything that makes mother comfortable; but how can you stand it? Such a drab life. You aren't much older than I am. I was 13 my last birthday, and mother wrote me you were only 19." She brushed back her bobbed hair with her hand, her eyes brilliant with a sort of suppressed fire. "I'd go mad, stark, staring mad if I had to live such a life."

"I am very happy to be here," I said, trying to hide my amazement at her frank speech. At the same time I was so attracted by her beauty, her vibrant personality that I could scarcely keep from staring at her. "Well, it's a good thing you don't care for gaiety. A companion to an invalid has little chance for any, although mother is very kind, very thoughtful." Then turning she left me, stopping in the doorway to say: "There's the servants' bell. Ring if you want anything."

So I was not to be classed as a servant. She would not have told me to ring for them if I were. It was evident they were expected to wait upon me.
I examined my room while I waited. It was so comfortable as to be almost luxurious, yet I was to learn very simple compared to other rooms in the house.

Presently the bell rang, and I hastened to the room Mollie had pointed out as her mother's.
"Your dinner will be served in your room. You will want to unpack, and I shall need you no more tonight. I'll ring when I wake up in the morning."

I wasn't to eat with the servants. That I wasn't to sit with the family gave me no disturbance. It would be delightful to have my meals in my room.
Tomorrow:—My Daily Routine Commences.

me was near her mother's.
"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

"Mother says you are going to stay on with her," she said after a little. "I am glad—glad of anything that makes mother comfortable; but how can you stand it? Such a drab life. You aren't much older than I am. I was 13 my last birthday, and mother wrote me you were only 19." She brushed back her bobbed hair with her hand, her eyes brilliant with a sort of suppressed fire. "I'd go mad, stark, staring mad if I had to live such a life."

"I am very happy to be here," I said, trying to hide my amazement at her frank speech. At the same time I was so attracted by her beauty, her vibrant personality that I could scarcely keep from staring at her. "Well, it's a good thing you don't care for gaiety. A companion to an invalid has little chance for any, although mother is very kind, very thoughtful." Then turning she left me, stopping in the doorway to say: "There's the servants' bell. Ring if you want anything."

So I was not to be classed as a servant. She would not have told me to ring for them if I were. It was evident they were expected to wait upon me.
I examined my room while I waited. It was so comfortable as to be almost luxurious, yet I was to learn very simple compared to other rooms in the house.

Presently the bell rang, and I hastened to the room Mollie had pointed out as her mother's.
"Your dinner will be served in your room. You will want to unpack, and I shall need you no more tonight. I'll ring when I wake up in the morning."

me was near her mother's.

"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

"Mother says you are going to stay on with her," she said after a little. "I am glad—glad of anything that makes mother comfortable; but how can you stand it? Such a drab life. You aren't much older than I am. I was 13 my last birthday, and mother wrote me you were only 19." She brushed back her bobbed hair with her hand, her eyes brilliant with a sort of suppressed fire. "I'd go mad, stark, staring mad if I had to live such a life."

"I am very happy to be here," I said, trying to hide my amazement at her frank speech. At the same time I was so attracted by her beauty, her vibrant personality that I could scarcely keep from staring at her. "Well, it's a good thing you don't care for gaiety. A companion to an invalid has little chance for any, although mother is very kind, very thoughtful." Then turning she left me, stopping in the doorway to say: "There's the servants' bell. Ring if you want anything."

So I was not to be classed as a servant. She would not have told me to ring for them if I were. It was evident they were expected to wait upon me.
I examined my room while I waited. It was so comfortable as to be almost luxurious, yet I was to learn very simple compared to other rooms in the house.

Presently the bell rang, and I hastened to the room Mollie had pointed out as her mother's.
"Your dinner will be served in your room. You will want to unpack, and I shall need you no more tonight. I'll ring when I wake up in the morning."

I wasn't to eat with the servants. That I wasn't to sit with the family gave me no disturbance. It would be delightful to have my meals in my room.
Tomorrow:—My Daily Routine Commences.

me was near her mother's.
"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

"Mother says you are going to stay on with her," she said after a little. "I am glad—glad of anything that makes mother comfortable; but how can you stand it? Such a drab life. You aren't much older than I am. I was 13 my last birthday, and mother wrote me you were only 19." She brushed back her bobbed hair with her hand, her eyes brilliant with a sort of suppressed fire. "I'd go mad, stark, staring mad if I had to live such a life."

"I am very happy to be here," I said, trying to hide my amazement at her frank speech. At the same time I was so attracted by her beauty, her vibrant personality that I could scarcely keep from staring at her. "Well, it's a good thing you don't care for gaiety. A companion to an invalid has little chance for any, although mother is very kind, very thoughtful." Then turning she left me, stopping in the doorway to say: "There's the servants' bell. Ring if you want anything."

So I was not to be classed as a servant. She would not have told me to ring for them if I were. It was evident they were expected to wait upon me.
I examined my room while I waited. It was so comfortable as to be almost luxurious, yet I was to learn very simple compared to other rooms in the house.

Presently the bell rang, and I hastened to the room Mollie had pointed out as her mother's.
"Your dinner will be served in your room. You will want to unpack, and I shall need you no more tonight. I'll ring when I wake up in the morning."

I wasn't to eat with the servants. That I wasn't to sit with the family gave me no disturbance. It would be delightful to have my meals in my room.
Tomorrow:—My Daily Routine Commences.

me was near her mother's.
"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

"Mother says you are going to stay on with her," she said after a little. "I am glad—glad of anything that makes mother comfortable; but how can you stand it? Such a drab life. You aren't much older than I am. I was 13 my last birthday, and mother wrote me you were only 19." She brushed back her bobbed hair with her hand, her eyes brilliant with a sort of suppressed fire. "I'd go mad, stark, staring mad if I had to live such a life."

"I am very happy to be here," I said, trying to hide my amazement at her frank speech. At the same time I was so attracted by her beauty, her vibrant personality that I could scarcely keep from staring at her. "Well, it's a good thing you don't care for gaiety. A companion to an invalid has little chance for any, although mother is very kind, very thoughtful." Then turning she left me, stopping in the doorway to say: "There's the servants' bell. Ring if you want anything."

So I was not to be classed as a servant. She would not have told me to ring for them if I were. It was evident they were expected to wait upon me.
I examined my room while I waited. It was so comfortable as to be almost luxurious, yet I was to learn very simple compared to other rooms in the house.

Presently the bell rang, and I hastened to the room Mollie had pointed out as her mother's.
"Your dinner will be served in your room. You will want to unpack, and I shall need you no more tonight. I'll ring when I wake up in the morning."

TUT EXCAVATORS DISMANTLE SHRINE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

LUXOR, Egypt, Jan. 28.—A visit to Tutankhmen's tomb showed convincingly the growing difficulty that Howard Carter has to contend with in dismantling the four golden shrines within which lies the sarcophagus of the pharaoh. As the work proceeds in the narrow space at the disposal of the excavators, the erection of the scaffolding becomes more complicated and the problem of sealing up each of the various component parts more difficult.

Today's visitors found that the sides of the first shrine had been completely swathed and detached and set back against the side wall of the sepulchral chamber. The wall of the second shrine is still in position but the doors are packed up and stand with the doors and the roof of the first shrine in the ante-chamber.

The third casket, the sides of which are beautifully decorated with a series of figures in light relief on gold, now are fully visible save for the top, which is covered with scaffolding.

Furniture upholsterer. Mattresses made over. C. M. Jones, Winchester and North Jackson Sts. Phone 468.

WARD IRVINE'S HOME IS ROBBED

SALEM, Jan. 28.—When Ward A. Irvine, private secretary to Governor Pierce, returned to his home here last night from a week-end spent in Portland, he discovered that his home had been burglarized during his absence. An automatic pistol, two suits of clothing, an overcoat and several shirts were taken.

SAVE ON SHOES—Serviceable school shoes now $1.95 at the ROSEBURG BOOTERIE.

RIOTING BREAKS UP LENINE MEMORIAL

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
BERLIN, Jan. 28.—While a memorial meeting for Lenine was in progress in a theatre last night, a large crowd outside shouted "Down with the Cebus!" (Protection police) "Down with capital!"

The crowd refused to disperse and the police were forced to use their clubs. Three arrests were made.

SAVE ON SHOES—Genuine army trench shoes now $2.85 at the ROSEBURG BOOTERIE.

ARCHBISHOP IS GREATLY IMPROVED

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
OAKLAND, Calif., Jan. 28.—Marked improvement in the condition of Archbishop Alexander Christie, who has been suffering from ptomaine poisoning, was reported here today. Archbishop Christie has set no definite date for his return to Oregon, but it is believed that he probably will return this week.

SAVE ON SHOES—Genuine army trench shoes now $2.85 at the ROSEBURG BOOTERIE.

RADIO FANS WILL FORM LOCAL CLUB

A meeting of all radio fans in Roseburg and the immediate surrounding community, is being called for next Wednesday evening at Bellows Radio Shop for the purpose of forming a local organization, and Radio club. This club is desired to carry on experiments, and to work for the mutual benefit of the members, and to eliminate interference and make broadcast me was near her mother's.

"There's a door between you and which mother likes to keep open when she is ill enough to need attention," she told me.
I was delighted with my room, the private bath, a luxury I never had possessed, and hastily removing my hat, wondering if I would have time to freshen up before I was needed. Mollie stood looking curiously at me.

CROSS CUT SAWS

DO YOU NEED ONE?

Very Special Price on a Shipment of Atkins Silver Steel Saws

$8.50

Churchill Hardware Co.

The Winchester Store

OVER 17 MILLION JARS USED YEARLY
VICKS VAPORUB
For All Cold Troubles

LOCAL NEWS

Singers, $3.00 month. Singer Store.

Arundel, piano tuner. Phone 189-L.

Y note ride. Call 108 or 276-J.

Moore Music Studio—116 S. Jackson St.

Homstitching & picot edging at Singer Store.

Watkins, products, 120 W. Lane street. Orders delivered. Phone 177.

We buy and sell everything in furniture at Powell's Second Hand Store.

Lloyd's Taxi for easy riding. Special rates on country trips. No trip less than fifty cents. Phone 44.

SAVE ON SHOES—Ladies black or brown suede slippers now $3.95 at the ROSEBURG BOOTERIE.

Not St. Valentine—Imported seed. Strain is about 10 days later than St. Valentine; heads self-protected; cord snow white. The finest strain in existence. Price per pound, $22.50; per ounce, $1.50. Delivery about March. Orders taken for any quantity. Fred Schmidt, Dillard, Ore.

Painless Extraction Gas When Desired

DR. H. R. NERBAS

Dentist

Masonic Building Roseburg, Ore. Phone 488

Teeth Extracted and Replaced same day with or without plates.

1,000 Bargains

If its anything in way of Furniture, Kitchen Ware,

NEW OR OLD,

Here's where you get it at Saving Prices.

Powell's Furniture

Exchange

238 N. Jackson St.

Phone 538

HAVING MOVED TO KANSAS, OWNER WILL SELL 200 LOTS in Highland Park Add. to Bandon, Oregon

$10 PER LOT—CORNERS $15

Warrantee Deed—Title Clear

About 300 of these lots have been sold at $20 and $25. Owner will sacrifice these lots, suitable for summer cottages or camping. They are all level, covered with young growth, 19, 12 years old, good for camp fuel. Water at 15 to 20 feet depth. Lots are 30x100 on 60-ft. streets and 10-ft. alleys, 1/2 mile S. E. from Bandon P. O., near enough to Bandon's famous beach, and yet sheltered from the raw ocean winds. Buy one or more. Send money to Bank of Idaho, Kan., with instructions to hold until warrantee deed is delivered for your purchase. Also have 2 6-room houses in Bandon for sale, $399 and $1,999. Also 1 5-room modern bungalow, large corner lot $1,200, also 45-acre dairy farm, 1 mile from Bandon city limits, fine improvements $4,500.

ADOLPH HABERLY

Idaho, Kan.

PERFECT SHAPE LAUNDERING

Form fitting, roll front and other collars are laundered RIGHT at this plant.

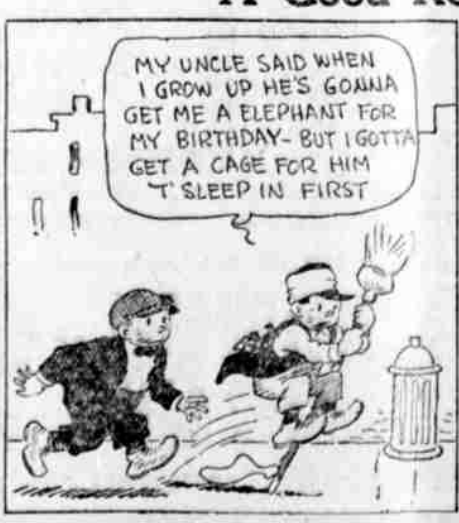

ROSEBURG STEAM LAUNDRY

408 JACKSON ST. PHONE 73

TUBBY

A Good Reason to Kick.

By WINNER

WATCH FOR

"TUBBY"

AND HIS DOIN'S

IN THE

DAILY

NEWS-

REVIEW