The Revelations of a Paid Companion

By JANE PHELPS

Author of "My Husband and I," "A Wife's Story," etc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Rita Hall is left orphaned and destitute. Her father's half-sister offers a home in Los Angeles and promises to leave Rita the place when she dies. Instead she wills the home and all else to Jim Bond, a common fellow whom Rita dislikes. Rita answers an ad for a traveling companion and secures a position with a semi-invalid, Mrs. Ellwood. The nephew, Barton Ellwood, impresses her unfavorably. She tries hard to please and does. She meets the family, is intrigued with them but cannot quite place the son, Guy. She is troubled by the latter's attentions.

Mollie Ellwood is attracted by Larry Ward, a young man of whom her parents disapprove. She is friendly but cautions Rita not to tell her mother of what she does. Rita occasionally dines with Mr. Ellwood but adheres to her determination to hold herself aloof from any intimacy with the family. Barton Ellwood arrives for a visit.

Chapter XIX.

MRS. ELLWOOD'S ILLNESS

SHORTENED BARTON'S VISIT
I returned to my room assuring myself that Barton Ellwood was nothing to me, that his coming made no possible difference. Yet even as I did so, I felt a premonition that his coming meant trouble of some sort.

I was surely capable of taking care of myself, and could repulse any advances he might make—he probably wouldn't make any, perhaps had forgotten me. Yet it was with trepidation that I answered Mrs. Ellwood's bell, hoping her nephew would not be with her.

"You remember Miss Hall, Rita?" she said to him as I entered the room. He was sitting beside her, chatting gayly.

"Indeed I do! I have always felt she was my protegee. You remember you asked my advice, and I told you to secure her if you could." He turned to me, the well-remembered cynical smile on his face, and held out his hand.

"How do you do and how are they treating you?" he asked.

"I am very happy with Mrs. Ellwood," I replied, compelled to shake hands with him, or attract Mrs. Ellwood's notice.

"That's fine!" He turned again to his aunt leaving me free to attend to my duties.

I had been needlessly upset. Mollie came to my room before dinner all excited over the advent of her cousin.

"I'll show Larry that I don't have to sit home waiting for him, now that Barton is here," she told me. "He took Nancy Loomis out again last night. I know it was because he was angry with me; but I'll get Barton to give some parties for me, and I'll show Larry that he isn't the only pebble on the beach."

"But Larry don't mind your going with your cousin, a man so much older than you are."

"Of course he won't you little goose. But Larry will mind the men I'll make him invite."

Whenever I had opportunity in the days that followed I found myself studying Barton Ellwood. He and Mollie were great chums, and I wondered a bit at her liking.

Barton was good looking in an arresting sort of way. His eyelids were tired, but when the fringes under them became interested one saw that life had hardened and concentrated his energy. I concluded it was his self-sufficiency that attracted Mollie, that he fixed values for himself, instead of accepting them. It appealed to a certain like quality in herself. They were both full of force, afraid of nothing, determined to have their own way with life.

With Guy I soon perceived things were different. In a way he seemed to resent Barton, although he was distant polite. I could not see that he affected Mr. Ellwood at all, although a favorite with his aunt, whom he laid himself out to please.

He was to remain with them some time.

Now that it seemed as if our lives were going to be lived in the same house for a time, I must hide my dislike as best I could. I really had no reason for it, it was intuitive.

Barton heard me discuss a writer with Mrs. Ellwood, and brought me his latest book. Ostentatiously I left it in her room. I would accept nothing from him. He brought her flowers, great bunches of them, and gave me a single-stemmed rose. I put it in the vase with hers. He would way-lay me, and I would leave him with an unfinished sentence floating after me.

Yet there were times when I couldn't avoid him, when I was obliged to talk to him, or by my actions take others of the family into my confidence—which of course I could not do.

I was now more determined than ever to keep entirely to myself, to accept no attentions from the members of Mrs. Ellwood's family.

He invited me to motor with him. I refused.

Then for a time, everything was blotted from my mind. Mrs. Ellwood was much worse; the doctor, as well as Mr. Ellwood, was anxious. Barton had moved to his club, and although he frequently called I managed to keep out of his way.

I was delighted, when the danger was passed, that he had decided to remain at the club. I should have little trouble avoiding him now that he was not living in the house.

Tomorrow—I Fall to Understand Barton Ellwood.

OIL INQUIRY WILL BE STARTED AGAIN

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Preparations for the active resumption of the oil inquiry were pressed today while accountants searched books of stockbrokerage houses to determine for the senate investigating committee whether government officials had dealings in the shares of the companies formed to take over the naval reserve leases.

Senator Walsh, also is planning to seek action by the senate tomorrow on his proposal to seek annulment of the leases, granted to the Doheny interests.

Oscar Sutro, counsel for the company, conferred yesterday with Mr. Walsh, and Silas R. Straun of Chicago, and former Senator Pomerene President Coolidge to represent the government, in an effort to convince them that former Secretary Fall's dismissal of proceedings designed to recover this section to the government had been just and legal, but the senator said, he failed in his purpose.

After Fall is again called upon by the committee to submit to examination, Wm. G. McAdoo, candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, Josephus Daniels, and George Creel, chairman of the committee on public information during the war, are expected to be given a hearing with reference to statements made by E. L. Doheny, holder of the California naval reserve lease.

ECONOMY PLANNED BY FRENCH GOVERNMENT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The chamber of deputies voted today unanimously in principle the bill for economies in the governmental expenses for 1924 amounting to 1,000,000,000 francs.

The separatists, adopting new tactics began a movement to oblige the government to effect these economies in military and naval expenditures alone.

If Back Hurts
Begin on Salts

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. Be all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.
