ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

MRS. ELLSBURY

(Address all communications to Mrs. Elisoury, care of News-Review.)

Dear Mrs. Elisoury: Will you give me advice on a very important matter to me. I am in love with a man who is getting a divorce from his wife. They have not lived together for a year, and she is not even in this town. He is getting a divorce from her. Under those circumstances is it all right for us to be sen in public together, and could I wear an engage-together, and could I wear an engage-together, and could I wear an engage-together.

M. J. M. J.: Under those circumstances you may go together, but do not wear an engagement ring, until at loast a month after his divorce is granted. Under the Oregon law you may not marry until six months have elapsed after the divorce is granted.

Dear Mrs. Ellsbury: I am of the opinion that good common sense is a good thing to go by in social conventions, but my husband's mother is a stickler for conventions, and we are always disagreeing over it. Recently I had a caller, a woman who is sup-posed to be very high socially and during the time she was here, my hus band came home, and had to go away over night on a sudden trip. I excused myself and packed his bag. My mother in law entertained the visitor while I was gone which was only a few moments. She told me afterwards that it was not good form to do it, and that I should not have done it under any consideration. What do you think?

When titles of well-known books are changed for the screen versions, there is usually a storm of protest. Critics say that the practice misleads the public.

But it was to keep the public from being misled that Goldwyn changed the name of "Name the Man!" which comes to the Liberty theatre next Sunday for three days.

When Sir Hall Caine wrote the story, he published it under the name of "Master of Man." Since that time, several pictures with similar titles, but based on altogether different themes, have been issued, and it was to avoid a confusion that Goldwyn consulted with the celebrated English
