THE MONEY JOBS

A newspaper man was asked the other day by an acquaintance of former years, as to what he was doing now. "Oh, working on a newspaper," was the reply. His old acquaintance seemed to lose interest in him on hearing that. He remarked rather contemptuously that he would never want to go into that business, because "there is no money in it." The fact that the newspaper man might have had very enlarging experiences, that he had seen a good deal of life, that he had perhaps been able to serve his community, amounted to nothing in the other's eyes. Similarly a newspaperman was talking the other day to a relative about the choice of profession just being made by a younger member of the family. This relative expressed much dissatisfaction on learning that the young man proposed to go into newspaper work. He also said, "There's no money in it." That settled it for him. There was no other motive that would count for him. These people in choosing an occupation think simply of the amount of money in it, often make a very poor choice from their own point of view. They forget the matter of adaptation and fitness. The who goes into a certain occupation because he has been told that it is lucrative, frequently has no qualifications for it. If he sticks to it, he has to hang on the ragged edge of the business all his life, and just barely make a living while others get rich. He would have done better financially to have found a calling for which he had some personal adaption, even if it was not considered a lucrative trade. But money rewards are not the principal ones in this life. Friendships are perhaps the best fruits, and they come to the people who give most generously, rather than those who are always seeking to get.

Three boys were caught on the top of an elevated railroad car in New York City a few days ago, and were put off at a station before reaching the cross platform that would have hurled them to death. Their stunt was unusual, but millions of others keep their parents on the ragged edge of worry by doing foolhardy things. There is nothing new in this. Back on the farms the kids used to jump off the high haystacks and climb to the tops of shaking trees and skate on thin ice and so on. The only reason why some of them did not ride on the tops of elevated trains was that there weren't any near at hand. Many of them have always paid the penalty for the take a chance spirit, and their little lives end in needless tragedies. Safety first instruction is an essential element in school work.

It is a common remark in daily life, that many men cannot stand prosperity. Give them a little success, and they become proud, arrogant and selfish. It is one of the benefits of college and school athletics, where the same are well conducted, that they help their players to get a different point of view, and take both victory and defeat in the right spirit. You see this exemplified on many football fields. The thoughts of a gentlemanly team that has won a game are not merely on their triumph. Instead of gloating over fallen rivals, they try to soften the sting of defeat, making the losers feel how much their friendship is valued and their sportsmanship and skill admired. Fellows who get this point of view should know how to act later in life if fortune smiles on them.

Perhaps if the women folks were not chasing so much after new wrinkles in their clothes, they wouldn't get so many wrinkles in their faces.

It looks as if it would be necessary to give some people an anesthetic before you can get their income tax out of them.

The groundhog has boldly made his annual excursion, but the politicians will keep well under cover for at least six weeks.

Some people may not do much but anyway they manage to keep an office chair occupied during business hours.

THE VILLAGE RHYMESTER
by Carlyle Emery

Dear Folks:

I'm in the dumps and at a loss to know just where I stand. No more I find the joy of life will rise at my command. It's hard for me to learn the truth of what I really owe, that's why my mind is all upset, that's why it's filled with woe.

I sit with pencil in my hand and nibble at its end. I try to face the jumbled mess with which I must contend, but figures swim before my eyes and leave me much in doubt, while clauses marked from A to Z just make me want to shout. I've got to figure what I've paid, and what I didn't pay, and where I was a year ago and why I didn't stay. I've got to make a careful list of cash that I have had, and when and where, and why it went. That's why I'm feeling sad.

I've got to add and multiply, subtract and then divide. I've got to open up myself and show all that's inside. I've got to swear to what I sign and say that it's true. I can't remember all I've done, that's why I'm feeling blue.

I ought to finish up the work and put it in the mails, for well I know the penalty that comes to him who fails. But still I sit and gaze at space instead of writing facts. I hope that where I go from here, there'll be no income tax.

PRUNE PICKIN'S
BY BERT G. BATES

GOOD EVENING FOLKS—

There wasn't nuthin' lively in the Village yestiddy Except a flock Of chorus girls.

DUMBBELL DORA THINKS

Campin' gum is what the tourists chew.

If you can convince your wife that spadin' garden is good for her complexion you're a genius.

As the parting instructions were being given, the fresh young salesman picked up his grip and started on his initial trip. "Good luck to you," said his chief; "wire us important news."

The following day his message was received: "Reached here safely, good room with bath, feeling fine."

The manager wired back: "So glad, love and kisses, goodbye."

Prophet Bell hung the sun out this morning to dry.

Those who have nothing else to do are watchin' the Copco fellers at work on Cass street.

'Ston bad that the Teapot Dome is not located near the village so this neck of the woods could get a little free publicity.

The editors are goin' to meet in Eugene this week end and many of 'em are plannin' on a fine time. Others will take their wives along.

The bride who last June promised so sweetly to obey can now make him lie down, roll over, or jump through a hoop every time she snaps her fingers.

Folks are getting nicer every day. When we were kids we didn't think anything of goin' swimmin' down at the foot of Oak street near the sewer.

A note from Paris tells us that damsels are soon to quit bobbing their hair and if some of 'em don't quit pretty quick they'll be bald-headed.

Maggie and Jiggs brought their costumes along this year, which is quite a relief.

The biscuit-shooters of the village were out with their cameras yestiddy takin' pictures of themselves with their arms draped around their gentlemen-friends.

Dresses now reach the instep say a fashion note. Ye ed. watched 'em dance Sat. night and it's surprising how high insteps some damsels have.

Tomorrow is Abe Lincoln's birthday and great is the joy among the bank clerks of the village.

Have you purchased your Valentine yet?

On acct. of the well known pun all bald headed fellers are takin' back seats at the show tonight.

The broccoli patches of the valley are beginnin' to break out.

"Windin' their watch at night is about the hardest work some fellers do."

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hopes Other Women Will Benefit by Her Experience

Skowhegan, Me.—"I was sick most of the time and could not get around to do my work without being all tired out so I would have to lie down. One day when I was reading the paper I saw the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertisement and saw what it did for other women, so I thought I would try it. I have taken three bottles, and cannot begin to tell you what it has already done for me. I do all my work now and keep up the whole day long without lying down. I have no more headaches nor tired feelings. I hope every woman who takes the Vegetable Compound will get as much benefit out of it as I have."

—MRS. PRUE W. RICHARDSON, R.F.D. No. 2, Skowhegan, Maine.

You have just read how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped Mrs. Richardson. She gave it a trial after she saw what it had done for other women. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been this great woman's friend. For sale by druggists everywhere.

JIGGS AND MAGGIE AT ANTILERS TONIGHT

The beloved, but unfortunate Jiggs Mahoney, has been aided on the road of immortality through the offices of his creator, George McManus, to appear in the flesh at the Antlers theatre tonight. Jiggs as his legion of admirers know, is the original "Father of 'Bringing Up Father' fame, the popular comic of Mr. McManus and which have given joy to millions and already has become a national institution. The new play, which is described as a musical comedy in two acts and five scenes is entitled, "Bringing Up Father on Broadway." The other characters who figure in the side-splitting adventures as recorded in the dailies all over the country every day will be conspicuously in evidence, particularly Maggie, Jiggs' termagant wife; Dinty Moore, who is still plotting Jiggs' destruction and Kitty who still has numerous suitors for her pretty hand. All told it should be a merry occasion and one destined to add to the glory and reputation of one of the most popular cartoons of the day. A large cast has been employed and special music, song hits and innovations will be provided.

TWO BASKETBALL GAMES THIS WEEK

Two games have been scheduled for the local high school hoop squad for this week, the first to be played Thursday and the second on Saturday. The first game is against the University of Oregon freshmen team and the other against the Coquille high school team. Both games will be played here in the high school gym. The university players are making one trip through this part of the state and are limiting their schedule to Roseburg, Medford, and Ashland. No "dope" on this team has been given out, but the result of the game will have no effect upon the standing of the local team in the league. The game Saturday, however counts a great deal in the standing. Coquille leads the coast district and was once defeated by Roseburg. This contest will be a return contest for the game played toward the first of the season in which the score stood 22 to 12 in favor of Roseburg. Two exceptional games are to be looked for this week.
