BOSCH COMPANY ENJOYS PROSPERITY

The placing on the market of the new Bosch shock absorber, the new electric windshield wiper, and the new Red Bosch Spark Plug, together with the release of manufacturers' specifications on standard equipment, is causing the American Bosch Magneto corporation to considerably increase its working force, and to make other plans for an unusually busy year.

This information was contained in a report received by L. G. Devaney, local Bosch representative in this city, which indicated that the Bosch working force at the Springfield, Mass., plant will be over 2000 by the end of January, and will be increased to 2400 by April. This compares with an average of 1600 in 1923, when the plant operated at about 65 per cent capacity.

Fluctuations in the company's business in last year, particularly in the last half, will necessitate a further downward revision of earnings from earlier estimates. Net for the year after charges and interest is expected to be $1.80 a share on 95,000 shares. While this compares with net in 1922 of two cents a share and a loss of over $2,000,000 in 1921, it is considerably below the balance indicated after first six months' operations. Business in last half of the year was only 40 per cent of the total in first six months, which accounts for the unsatisfactory showing.

Gross sales in 1923, according to President Murray, were $10,000,000 against $7,600,000 in 1922. During the year 222,000 ignition systems, 136,000 starting and lighting units and 127,000 magnetos were manufactured, against 83,000 ignition systems, 92,000 starting and lighting units and 73,800 magnetos in 1922.

Unfilled orders at beginning of 1924 were greater than at any time in the company's history and stock on hand was at a low point. While automobile demand was satisfactory during the year, a number of new accounts having been booked, the demand for tractor, truck and farm engine equipment which forms a sizeable portion of the company's volume was unusually small.

Its all here and its all true. Roseburg News-Review.

HOW TO GET LONG LIFE OUT OF THE TIRES ON YOUR CAR

Two casings, one of which had rolled up a mileage of 31,000 and the other 20,000 miles, were recently removed from the driving wheels of a Cadillac sedan owned by A. G. Zeller, president of the Michigan state automobile school, Detroit.

"These casings were in such good condition that I had them retreaded and am using them now for spares," said Mr. Zeller, who attributed their long life as much to careful driving as to tire quality.

"Careless application of brakes and too great an eagerness to accelerate from nothing to 80 miles an hour in a few seconds contribute greatly to tire strain and excessive wear of tires. Improper inflation is another thing that quickly ruins even the best of casings.

"Own a pressure gauge and use it. Take the trouble to remove tires and tubes for inspection now and then; keep the rims clean; watch the tube protecting flap to make sure it is properly in position and not wrinkled. Look the casings over for signs of damage and make little repairs where necessary.

"These things are as important for tires as oil is for the engine. Unfortunately many motorists are unfamiliar with tire construction and tire care.

"Used tires are not always worth retreading, however. Some tire repair shops will retread a casing just to get the job regardless of the condition of the fabric. If the carcass is in good condition it certainly pays to retread it. One of my casings which blew out recently at 32,000 miles, had been retreaded twice, in our own tire department.

"The fact is that tires never were so good as they are today. When one remembers that tires are nothing but cloth and rubber and that just a few thicknesses of these materials

WARNS AUTO OWNERS OF DANGERS LURKING IN CARBON MONOXIDE

- Four rules for protection against deadly effects of poisonous carbon monoxide, always present in exhaust from gas-driven engines, issued by U. S. Bureau of Mines:
- NEVER run automobile engine in closed garage; OPEN DOORS WIDE.
- NEVER crawl under car with engine running. EVEN if car is in open air.
- NEVER sit in closed car with engine running. EVEN if in a ventilated garage.
- NEVER sit in closed car with engine running and all windows shut, EVEN if car is in open air; always have window open.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 26. (A. P.)—So many deaths from carbon monoxide, a gas present in the exhaust from automobiles, have occurred throughout the country during the past few months that the Pittsburgh station, United States Bureau of Mines, has been prompted to call the attention of the public to its danger.

Seldom a day passes at this season but the death of one or more persons is recorded. Fatalities are particularly noticeable in the natural gas belt of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, while deaths from the exhaust gas of automobiles are increasing. Carbon monoxide is given off in quantities by burning natural gas, while it is practically always present in exceedingly dangerous quantities in the exhaust from gasoline engines.

Thousands of houses in the natural gas belt have no flues for carrying off waste gases, which, in such cases,

ADAMS CASE SETTLED

The case of John Q. Adams against the Southern Pacific company was settled yesterday before going to the jury. After the plaintiff's testimony was all in, and several of the company's witnesses had been heard, the company's attorney asked for a recess and during the recess proposed terms of a settlement which were accepted by the plaintiff and the case was dismissed. Adams was suing for damages in the sum of $2,300, claimed because of an alleged lack of medical attention while ill. The company, he claimed, took money from his wages for sick benefits, but when he was ill the company did not fulfill its contract, making it necessary for him to spend money to cover his hospital and doctor's bills.

pass off into the room where the fire is burning. If all windows and doors are closed, as they may be in cold weather when gas is being consumed, the effect sooner or later becomes apparent on the occupants. They become dull and sleepy and, if not aroused, may pass into unconsciousness and eventually die.

The bureau recommends that when a gas heater without a flue is used, a window or door be partly open at all times, half an inch or so will answer. The bureau has found that the air in a room should be changed every hour; that is, the foul air should be completely displaced by fresh air during that period. But if there is a continuous fresh inflow, this will counteract the poisonous gas unless the individual is so close to the source of the waste gas as to breathe it before it is sufficiently diluted with fresh air. The bureau sounds a warning never to go to bed with a heater burning and the windows and doors closed; to do so would be "flirting with death."

The danger from waste automobile gases is no less real. If the engine has to be kept running in the garage, the garage must be ventilated. Drivers are warned ever to crawl under a car when the engine is running, no matter how good the ventilation. Sitting in an automobile in a garage with the engine in motion, is distinctly a dangerous thing to do.

Another hazard of exhaust gas is that of sitting in a tightly closed automobile on a highway, or elsewhere with the engine going. The car may be fitted with a leaky heater, through which the exhaust gets into and concentrates in the car, or the exhaust from the muffler, in some manner gets in and accumulates in its confinement.

"If people must sit in an automobile," says the bureau, "they must have some fresh air entering the tonneau. Otherwise they are playing with death."
