CONTROLLING THE YOUNG CROWD

A girl appeared at a dance in another city one night recently, in a dress that aroused comment on account of its extremely delicate cut. Some of the parents spoke to the mother, asserting that she ought not to have let her daughter come in such attire or lack of the same. She replied that she could not help it, as the girl was bound to do just as she pleased, though apparently she was under age as yet. Men who own automobiles often complain that their boys drive their cars in a way that the fathers do not at all approve. They talk and talk to them, but it has no effect. The complaint is made that many very young people are drinking heavily. But if you inquired as to who is to blame, people would say that in many cases the fathers and mothers are at fault, since all the time they are supplying illegally obtained liquor in their own homes. Many such instances raise the question as to how far parents are losing their grip on the younger generation, which in many ways is showing a degree of independence that often runs into disaster. It is very difficult to establish control over young people of the 18 to 20 age, when for years these young people have been doing just what they wanted to. The time for a show down was some years earlier. Many of the young people of the 18-20 age have greater self control and experience than their fathers and mothers had at their age, and are better fitted to take care of themselves. But it would be generally felt by careful parents, that the young crowd are slipping out from parental control too young. The time at about age 14 to 16 is a critical one. If the children establish independence then, they are too immature to realize the perils they confront and are likely to come to grief.

Recognizing the importance of the postal system and the necessity of maintaining a high degree of skill and efficiency throughout the entire personnel of that popular branch of the government, almost every radio station in the United States is daily and nightly permitting representatives of the postal employees to broadcast their messages and appeals for public support of the bill, which is now pending in congress, which provides for a reasonable and well merited readjustment of the salaries of all postal employees from the postmaster down to and including the humblest employe in this great system. Congress was never before so universally besieged in the interest of legislation proposing to increase salaries of government employes. Generally speaking, the public held to the idea that such employes were favored and more than well paid. This idea is all wrong. Government employes should be well paid and Uncle Sam should be an outstanding figure as the model employer. Unfortunately, this is not so, and investigation develops the fact that government employes and particularly those in the postal establishment are about the poorest paid workers in this country.

The month of March varies so widely in different localities that it is impossible to get any general agreement on its characteristics. It is not on the whole a popular month. It has been commonly considered a disagreeable interlude between winter and summer, a time of fierce and blustering winds, when comfort loving people should stay in doors. Bryant said: "Ah, passing few are they who speak, wild stormy month, in praise of thee." But Helen Hunt Jackson had a truer note, when she wrote: "Ah, March, we know thou art kindhearted, spite of ugly looks and threats." Some people in the colder localities who want merely calm and placid weather, may feel it necessary to avoid its searching winds. But no matter how chill its blasts, the cheer of coming spring is in the bright rays of its warm sun, which day by day comes nearer and nearer, bringing birdsongs and the life that will soon burst forth in summer's full bloom.

A recent London dispatch says the doctors of England are astonished to note how much more strength and intelligence the babies born at present have than those born before the war. It is claimed that the modern child just born is as far advanced as the pre-war baby aged from three to six months. This is attributed to physical training enjoyed in war time by the young men who were in the army. About 4,000,000 of America's young men got the benefit of similar training, and it should enable them to transmit more vigorous traits to their descendants. If our young men can produce a stronger race by physical training in war time, why don't they get the same benefit by other forms of exercise, in peace time as well as a war period? Also why should not young women fit themselves to bear harder children through greater attention to physical exercise?

Some people have been asking what value there would be in the trip over the north polar regions which had been planned for the airship Shenandoah under the auspices of the United States navy, and which was estimated to cost $350,000 or more. A suggestion of its possible value is given by the fact that Norway has taken more than 300,000 tons of coal from the Arctic island of Spitzbergen during one recent year. Probably other Arctic islands have valuable resources. Our country will want to get its share of them. The possible value of territory that might be discovered and claimed would seem to justify the cost, the only question being as to how much risk the men in charge of the craft would take.

Local candidates are beginning to appear on the horizon—every now and then—and everything points to the usual good crop of aspirants to serve the country, politically.

PROVES WIFE FAULTED

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
NEW YORK, March 5.—Beverly D. Harris, former vice-president of the National City Bank has succeeded in proving his charges that his wife Eleanor Elaine Lee Harris had falsely represented herself as a member of a socially prominent family and falsified concerning her moral character in his suit for the annulment of his marriage.

Asked to answer six questions, a supreme court jury last night found in favor of Mr. Harris in five instances and the verdict will be submitted to the special term next Monday for final decision.

The only question answered in her favor was to the effect that Harris could have ascertained the truth of his charges before making a separation agreement with his wife.

ON MARCH 18TH

Library Propositions to Be Placed Before Voters of City at That Time.

TO SELECT SITES

Voters Not Only to Consider
Bonds but Are Also Asked to Express Their Preference of Locations.

On Tuesday, March 18, the residents of Roseburg will have an opportunity to express themselves at a special election upon the proposition of voting bonds for the purchase of a library. The city council at that time is submitting to the residents of the city two proposals which will give the city the right to issue bonds in a sum not exceeding $18,000. The voters will then be asked to express themselves on a choice of a site, one site being offered south of the Kohlhagen apartment building on Jackson street, and the other the Marsters property on Rose street, just south of the Perkins building.

The first measure to be submitted is in regard to the bonds. This proposal will give the city the right to issue bonds in a sum not exceeding $18,000. The voters will then be asked to express themselves on a choice of a site, one site being offered south of the Kohlhagen apartment building on Jackson street, and the other the Marsters property on Rose street, just south of the Perkins building.

If the Jackson street site is chosen the full $18,000 will be required in the erection of a modern building. This lot has been purchased by the Woman's Club of the city and has been donated for the library purpose.

The Marsters site combines both library facilities and a rest park. There are four large lots with shrubs, trees and lawn, and a large house which can with little expense be remodeled into a suitable library building. This property with the improvements to the building and the benches, walks, lights etc., which will be needed for the park, will cost around $12,000 and $13,000 it is estimated, consequently being less expensive than the other site, but combining two purposes, although the building will probably not be as well adapted as one constructed primarily for library purposes. Supporters of the Marsters site however, hold that the building will be entirely suitable.

The council has had the library proposition before it for several years, and now expects to get definite action in the election on the 18th. It is believed that the voters of Roseburg are in favor of the library and if sufficient interest is shown in the election that the bonds will carry by a large majority.

COMB SAGE TEA
INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores
Its Natural Color and Lustre At Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.
