CAMP FIRE GIRLS HOLDING ASSEMBLY

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 28.—More than 1,000 girls from 7 towns in 17 states are expected here tomorrow for the opening of the national campfire girls campaign. This is the first national assembly where the girls have participated in large numbers. Most of the girls, officials said, have been saving for months to pay their own way. Some are coming as far away as Seattle and New York.

SIX CONVICTS ESCAPE FROM PEN

from the city they stopped an automobile driven by Charles Spurlin, salesman for a local elder works, dazed him with a blow behind the ear and commandeered his car. "Oregon" Jones took the wheel but the convicts made no attempt to eject Spurlin from the car.

Dazed by the blow, Spurlin says that he does not remember clearly anything that the convicts said, except that they kept something that he supposed was a gun pressed against his back and told him to keep quiet.

At the reform school, six miles southeast of the city, the convicts left the main road, turning the car into a side road leading into a timbered and brushy area. They drove about a mile and a half into the woods and abandoned the car, taking Spurlin with them a quarter of a mile further on into the brush. Here they released Spurlin after taking all of his cigarettes. One of the men proposed that they also take his overcoat, but this met with the objections of another, who according to Spurlin, said:

"Hell no! Its too heavy to fool with."

Spurlin was given the key to his car and told that he could go but was admonished to go slow "or we'll blow your brains out."

Warden Dalrymple, said that he did not think the convicts possessed a gun and were simply putting up a bluff on Spurlin.

Poses of Salem police, penitentiary guards and deputies from the sheriff's office were organized immediately and rushed out in pursuit. Spurlin, when he returned to his car after being released by the bandits said that the officers were not more than three minutes behind the fleeing men.

Shortly after 1 o'clock while volunteer posses were being organized to take up the chase, deputy Warden Litley reported to the penitentiary that he had sighted the men on the J. Street Beach farm near Shaw, heading north. He said that he fired four times at them and thought that he had hit one of the four that he saw.

The fugitives then turned south into the brush again. At 11 o'clock the posses heading the wooded area lying in the triangle between the towns of Turner, Shaw and Acmeville, numbered around 20, heavily armed, all under orders to shoot on sight, and more searchers were being dispatched as fast as they could be sworn in.

At 11:30 o'clock it was reported at the penitentiary that the convicts had been turned back north in the vicinity of Turner and were headed toward Acmeville.

A report that the national guard company in Salem had been called out to join the search was denied flatly by Ward Irvine, secretary to the governor, who with Warden Dalrymple was directing the search. The report rose, Irvine said, through his request to Adjutant-General White for any men that he could spare to be sworn in as special officers.

In issuing orders to the possesmen to shoot on sight, Warden Dalrymple explained that all of the escaped convicts have been classed at the penitentiary as "bad men" and that all of them had been kept in strict confinement inside the building, not even being allowed the privileges of the yard.

RUSSIA'S CLAIMS EXCEED BRITAIN'S

Excess Is Said to Be About Two Billion Rubles and Mostly for Damages.

DIVIDED INTO 3 GROUPS

Soviets Say They Are Sure Britain's Experts Will Not Make Them Yield—Negotiations Start.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
MOSCOW, March 28.—Soviet Russia's claims against Great Britain exceed the latter's claims against Russia by two billion gold rubles, M. Zinovieff, secretary of the communist international announced at Leningrad, today.

The British claims, he stated, were divided into three groups, first, state debts and "pretensions" for loans and nationalized property to a total value of 2,450,000,000 gold rubles, second, war debts of 5,000,000,000 gold rubles and third, interest on all the debts of 2,816,000,000, make a total of 10,139,000,000 gold rubles.

Russia's claims were for damages caused by the intervention of admiral Kolchak, and for the seizure of gold.

"If there is no hope for us to receive from England these two billions of gold rubles," he went on, "then we confidently declare that England will not get either war debt or interest. The nationalized property of British subjects presents the most difficult question. There are 115 claims amounting to 600,000,000 rubles.

"We are sure that the British experts will not make us yield. The revolution was a struggle to secure the bourgeois and if the foreign capitalists have been mistaken in their calculations of the safety of the property in a revolutionary country it is their own fault. It is ludicrous to think the working class having sacrificed so much, now should, while starting reconstruction, have to return all it appropriated by virtue of its revolutionary rights. Such are the fundamental points which will direct our delegation negotiating with the British government."

M. Zinovieff said the delegates were instructed to ask only for such credits as they were "in the government could pay."

years and recalls the famous Tracey-Merrill break in 1902.

Clyde Weekly, one of the escaping prisoners, was sent to the penitentiary from Roseburg last July, following his sensational robbery of the Glendale bank. Weekly went into the Glendale state bank shortly after it was opened for business in the morning. He proceeded to take all the money in sight and then backed out to the door. A large crowd had gathered and he forced them to cover by several shots fired over their heads and then took to the hills. Several shots were fired at him as he ran for cover.

Poses went out in search for him but he succeeded in getting away for several hours. Deputy Sheriffs Frank Hopkins and Wm. Branham anticipated the course he would follow in making his escape and finally located him as he reached the Rogue river on his way overland to the California line.

He gave the name of Larsen when first arrested but later acknowledged his name to be Weekly. He spent much of his life in the Glendale vicinity and was well acquainted with the community.

He is a young man and is very cool and deliberate in his actions. He appears to glory in attempting to be a desperado and made his boast before leaving Roseburg that he would not be in prison long. He is believed to be one of the types of men who will take long chances more for the excitement than any other reason, and because of that fact is looked upon as a dangerous character.

Hoot Gibson

'The Ramblin' Kid'

—"The Ramblin' Kid" is a photoplay of the west. But don't mix it up with what are called "Western pictures," because it's one. It's the Universal Film version of the popular novel by Hoot Gibson, king of Western drama.

—A wandering, fighting, fun-loving cowboy; a girl fresh from eastern schools; a great race at the annual rodeo; a dogged search for coffee; a fake drunk; a young lady's garb—questions answered. And so the adventures of "The Ramblin' Kid" started with a bang.
