THE HALF-TIME WIFE By VIOLET DARE

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

DUNCAN HALE, a young army officer, returns from the Philippines to find that SUZANNE, with whom he is in love, has married GEOFFREY ATWOOD, a prominent man much older than she. Hale tries to persuade her to leave her husband, get a divorce and marry him, feeling sure that she still cares for him. Suzanne is troubled by this and by the report that there is a love affair between DICK LEIGH, Geoffrey's nephew, and a chorus girl.

VI—A DELICATE SITUATION.

SUZANNE wanted to talk to her husband about Dick's infatuation for the little dancer; he had had so much more experience than a she, who would know so much better how to handle the situation. But they seemed to be no opportunity. There were giving a large, formal dinner that evening, and taking their guests to a dance at the Haynes' afterward. He would be too tired when they came home to discuss anything perplexing with her. And the next day he would be off to business early; there would be no chance then. The day itself would be hopeless; she never intruded on his office hours, unless he made an engagement with her.

run into the dining-room, wasn't you?" But arriving guests out his sentence short. Suzanne felt uneasy. Of course the place cards would be all right—yet what if they weren't? She tried to slip away to the dining-room a few moments later, but there was no opportunity. And when at last dinner was announced she was so worried that she felt sure the butler had made a mistake and put the wrong people next each other. She glanced down the table; everything seemed to be all right. Again—and her heart sank. For Hiram J. Caldwell and Senator Graham had been so placed that only one lone woman sat between them. "But I don't see how it could have happened," Suzanne reflected as she took her seat. There had been a Mr. Calkins—she looked carefully; yes, there he was, with the woman she had intended for Mr. Caldwell's dinner partner. In glancing through the cards and arranging them she must have confused the two names, glancing only at the first syllables. Geoff would be wild.

"You are a daring hostess," he told her.

She looked down to the other end of the table, tried to meet his eye, but he was devoting himself to the woman he had taken in to dinner. Suzanne sighed. Geoff would think her both stupid and careless!

To her the dinner seemed interminable; she was grateful when at last she could rise and leave the room. Her duties as hostess were still new to her; she quite forgot when the time came that it was she who must give the signal, and a sharp glance from her husband reminded her.

Monday—The Office Wife.

"You are a very daring hostess, Mrs. Atwood," he said. "Permit me to congratulate you."

"But I—I don't understand," she faltered.

"Your husband would never have dared attempt what you accomplished this evening," he told her. "Senator Graham and I—but your husband can explain more satisfactorily than I can. Perhaps you need no explanation!"

Suzanne, bewildered, glanced at Geoff. He was smiling, and talking with Graham. Then somehow, amazingly, her carelessness had not been so dreadful in its consequences! She was eager to talk with Geoff alone, and find out what had happened.

WINNERS CHOSEN IN ESSAY CONTEST

Evelyn Houser of Roseburg and William Harlinger, also of this city, were the winners in the state dental essay contest for districts of the first class in Douglas county. In districts of the second and third class the prizes go to Joyce Raes of Glendale and Elsa Johnson, of Elgarose. The State Dental Association in order to promote greater interest in good teeth and better health, offers each year a number of valuable cash prizes. Prizes are given to the two best essays in districts of the first class and also the two best in districts of second and third classes so that there is an ample opportunity for all students to obtain one of these prizes. The county winners have their essays forwarded to the state school superintendent and they are then entered in the state contest, a large prize being offered for the best in the state.
