KUYKENDALL OUT FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

Robert B. Kuykendall today announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for attorney general of Oregon.

Mr. Kuykendall comes of one of the oldest pioneer families of the state. Born in Eugene, he is the son of Dr. William Kuykendall of Lane county, and grandson of John Kuykendall, Douglas county pioneer of 1852.

His grandfather was one of the founders of the old Wilbur Academy, an early Methodist institution near Roseburg. His father, one of Oregon's best known physicians, at one time served as president of the state senate.

Mr. Kuykendall is a graduate of the University of Oregon and for the past two years has been president of its alumni association. He is also a graduate of Columbia university of New York City, where he took his course in law. His legal training began in the office of his brother, D. V. Kuykendall, formerly circuit judge of the district comprising Klamath and Lake counties. For several years he was associated with the law firm of Carey & Kerr in Portland and is now engaged in the private practice of law in that city.

Mr. Kuykendall is a world war veteran. When war was declared in 1917 he entered the first officers' training camp at San Francisco and when commissioned was assigned to the 91st division and accompanied that famous fighting outfit to France. After the armistice he was with the army of occupation in Germany.

"The state of Oregon is conducting a large public business," says Mr. Kuykendall in his announcement of candidacy. "It is entitled to the same loyal and efficient legal service that modern private business organizations receive. If nominated and elected attorney general it will be my aim to organize and conduct the state's legal department as to render such service."

Fragrant Musk Plant Is Losing Its Scent

Why has the fragrant musk lost its scent? This is the question which many English florists and gardeners have been asking and wondering for 30 years. Formerly this little flower was among the most fragrant in the botanical records. It was originally found by David Douglas in 1826 growing on the margins of the Columbia river, and was exported to various parts of the world from there. When discovered it was sweetly scented. In 1877 the musk was hybridized in England, and although much larger flowers were produced by this artificial method of culture, the flower was often devoid of fragrance. One theory is that the loss of scent dates from this time.

Only in one instance has an odor been recently ascribed to the English musk, and that was in 1917, when the earl of Waldegrave sent a few rare specimens to the Royal Horticultural society in London. Although only seven years have elapsed since the earl made his report, the same plants, unmolested and untransplanted, have already lost their scent.

In addition to the hybridization theory of the loss of the musk's fragrance other ideas have been advanced to account for the discrepancy. One is that the human sense of smell is no longer so acute as formerly and cannot register the flower's odor. Another theory is that the leaves of the musk 50 years ago were very hairy, but after transplantation in alien countries the hairs were lost and with them the scent.

The idea most endorsed by the English botanists, however, is that essential oils, conducing to the flower's fragrance, have been lost in the process of acclimatization.

Old French Wedding
Custom Is Revived

An odd old custom was revived last October in the Flemish village of Comines, tucked away in the north of France.

About 1454 the Seigneur Jean de Comines, having been imprisoned after the good old custom by a neighboring prince, managed to reveal his whereabouts by throwing the wooden utensils given him for table use out of the dungeon where he was confined.

When his faithful subjects came to rescue him, he established a fair at which the ceremonial of throwing these "louches"—as the country people still call them—among the crowd was always carried out.

But after a few hundred years of throwing louches the people of Comines got tired of it, and the custom was abandoned. This year, however, some enterprising member of the Comines Rotary club thought it high time to disinter the old tradition, and the white bearded father of the municipality solemnly mounted a platform guarded by two huge and grinning wooden dolls, and hurled the wooden louches into the assembled throng.

Not everyone in the crowd escaped injury, but, according to a French account, "You could see people boasting of the fact that they carried on their heads the marks of the blows received in this rough distribution."—Living Age.

Employment Aids Ignored

Juvenile unemployment centers, established in England by the co-operation of the ministries of education and labor to assist and protect school boys and girls between the ages of fourteen and eighteen, seeking work, have not been entirely successful in Middlesex, England. The object was to enable the youths to better themselves while accepting the "dole" and were compelled to attend classes. The "dole" is the government unemployment stipend, but many of the younger generation, especially the girls, surrendered the "dole" rather than attend classes.

Everything Provided

An old Highland clergyman was lecturing a group of his people in the village hall, and again and again repeated the words: "There will be weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth." A would-be wit at the back of the hall called out: "What about those that have no teeth?" The minister looked down over his glasses and said with great solemnity and complete conviction: "Teeth will be provided."

The Diva

The poster advertised the world's greatest diva and depicted a very corpulent lady. Members of a crowd assembled were discussing it. "Queer spelling," ventured one. "Don't they mean diver?" "I don't think so," declared another. "It is evidently a foreign word for something or other. She's too fat for a diver."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Mongols Were Suspicious

It took some persuasion to convince the Mongolian government that the purposes of the Andrews third Asiatic expedition were purely scientific. An elaborate expedition of 20 men, 75 camels and motor cars was not believed to be looking for old bones. A quest for gold and oil was thought more likely.

THEATRES

Liberty Theatre.

If you want to see a picture with real thrills, adventure, humor, atmosphere and a corking love story, drop in at the Liberty theatre where they're playing "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," Sunday and Monday. It's the screen version of Edward Eggleston's widely-known novel and it's a faithful depiction of the Hoosier country during the period before the Civil War.

Then Indiana was harassed by bandits. No one knew who the guilty were but every one looked at his neighbor with suspicion. The Flat Creek district was no better than the rest of the country and perhaps a little bit worse.

To this section comes Ralph Harri-son, the new schoolmaster. He is warned that his pupils will probably throw him out but he's willing to take the chance and stay. He rounds up the gang of bandits who are worrying the district—although the mob almost lynch him before he succeeds in doing it and falls in love with Hannah Thompson, the orphan girl, who according to the custom of the time has been "bound out" as a servant.

Majestic Theatre

The same careful attention to detail and authenticity of locale which has characterized the many stage successes produced by Richard Walton Tully is said to have been exerted by this producer in a magnificent picturization of Du Maurier's immortal novel, "Tribby," which, as a First National attraction, is to be shown at Majestic theatre commencing to-night.

Mr. Tully spent several months in Europe, during which time he took a great many scenes in the very locations described by the distinguished author, a task made difficult through Du Maurier's habit of altering the names of places he described.

"For instance," says Mr. Tully, "the block on which the three chums of the story dwell in the Montmartre was called 'Anatole des Arts' by the author, whereas I found it to be in reality 'Andre des Arts.' And 'Cirque Bashibazooks,' which figures prominently in the drama, was in reality 'Cirque Boom Boom,' now called 'Cirque Medrano,' and still used as a theatre."
