FLAPPER BANDITS.

Recent dispatches from New York and other cities have reported a considerable number of young women bandits, more or less of the flapper type. They astonish the police and their victims with the cool, masculine and daring way with which they handle firearms and bluff people into giving up money. Some old fashioned people may say that such developments are the result of taking women out of their home lives and coarsening them by contact with the world. As long as women devoted themselves to purely home duties, and were sheltered from life's rougher side, they claim you never heard of flapper bandits. But it can be said that these instances of brutal crimes by women are still very rare relatively. Thus they attract wide attention, while men are perpetrating hold-ups and burglaries every day. The flapper bandit is thus too rare a bird to have any great social significance. It is no doubt true that the more sheltered people are, the less danger there is that they will break loose in lives of crime. But the world will not advance unless people are given power to express themselves and to do the things they are capable of. For every one flapper bandit, there are many thousands of women who have gained useful power by their wider experience. But it remains true that the modern girl has to meet more temptations in her freer intercourse with men, than the women of former generations did. There is a great need for club work and helpful associations, that shall take up the interests of girls who are restless in their surroundings and demand excitement and adventure. More athletics and other activities for girls would keep some of these headstrong young women in the straight and narrow path.

The angel Gabriel would better look out how he runs for office in this country, as they would go over his record with minute care.

The first step in the movement to bring Russia back to normal, would seem to be to send over a good lot of barbers.

They should not make golf balls so elastic that the players will knock them over into the next county.

DUMBELL DORA THINKS

Babe Ruth wrote "The Bat."

Here's a gag we run in this colyum about a year ago but its so good and it has been mailed into our sanctum so dern many times that we herewith present it again:

A bald-headed shoe clerk was waiting on a flapper whose attention was everywhere except on what she was doing. Finally, however, she suddenly glanced at her feet and mistaking his bald head for one of her knees, she quickly grabbed her skirt and covered it up. The poor man was saved from suffocation by the timely assistance of his fellow clerks.

The Chinese have started playing golf. Didn't they invent that too.

Perhaps you also have wondered how the plain drunk of the police court differs from the fancy variety.

Ye ed. thinks the division of talents is about even. When a dog is happy, he wags his tail, whe a mortal is happy, he wags his tongue.

We read of a hen mothering a litter of pigs. Will the hen learn to grunt or the pigs to cackle?

ON BEING A GOOD BOY

I've always heard that dancing is wrong,
That the path to heaven is steep and long,
That smoking is wicked and drinking much worse,
And the devil himself owns the man who will curse.
I never kissed a pretty maid, or even held her hand,
I never knew her waist was made to fit the arm of man,
All these and other sinful things I've truly never done,
But let me warn you all right now; It hasn't been much fun.

The world is divided into two classes—those who pass the collection plate and those who let the collection plate pass them.

If you would really be good, first learn to know how bad you are.

HE PLAYED A DIRTY TRICK ON HIMSELF

Land Lubber—"Must be a deuced lonely job keeping that lighthouse over there?"

Captain—"Yes, the last keeper used to play poker with himself all the time and one night he caught himself cheating and shot himself to death."

It's always a pleasure to teach a beautiful girl anything. They learn so slowly.

Let me think, what was that resolution I made New Years?

Following out the idea of the high school parent-teachers association in selling a corner of the school lawn to each individual in town to take care of, ye ed. today has the bright idea of doing likewise with the specious acreage adjoining our domicile. First we want some outfit to take over the lawn.

STATE PRESS COMMENT

Where Boosting Counts.

Oregon is one state where boosting counts.

Oregon holds the distinctive honor of having more purely get-together booster organizations with improvised names of local merit than any state in the union.

Oregon has the goods!

Oregon means to sell these goods to the world at large.

That's why the Rosarians, the Cherrians, the Cavemen, the Umpqua Chiefs, and the Pirates, if you please, amount to something and account for something.

At Oakland, where turkeys flourish, they're organizing the Gobblers. Even Bandon is talking about having some means of exploiting "Bandon by the Sea." The name "Peppers" has been suggested.

The Coos Bay Pirates have done many constructive things. There is no doubt that their trip to Pendleton attracted many people to this community. It was a booster stroke of merit.

Older folks don't like to forget the good old days of kid-dom. These booster bands are great places to be a kid again and still mighty good exploitation work for the community.

There's plenty of room for the crabs in the bay. We don't want them on land. Let the grouches crawl off to the secluded ferns under the tall trees where they can disturb none but themselves.

But the sons of sunshine, the disciples of deeds, the community cracker-jacks and boosting brothers who belong to the different distinctive organizations of Oregon are doing a great deal to get the state in the limelight.

Oregon does not propose to be a wallflower at the big commonwealth ball and that's why these embiazoning teams of boosters are crying their wares so the world may hear.—Southwestern Daily News.

Drifting Cityward.

A farmer near Portland who is also a skilled worker in one of the building trades, has taken work in the city at his old trade though he holds on to his farm. He says his pay at his trade is sufficient to hire two men as good as he on the farm and still have enough on which to support his family. What he gets out of the farm this year should be mostly "velvet". Is there in this incident any hint of the reason for the drift cityward?

Is there really a drift cityward? The Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation, after an impartial survey of this question recently said: "Since last year another million people have left the farms and moved into the cities. The population has increased during the same time about 1,400,000; which means there are 2,400,000 more people to be fed and 1,000,000 less producers of food."

This shifting of population is just as inevitable under present conditions of low farm prices and high city wages as the flow of water this way or that at the tipping of a trough. A million leaving the farm for the city always means an added two million difference between rural and urban population. At this rate we shall soon reach a balance between country and city.—Portland Telegram.

No Money For Warships.

Adversity brings out whatever strength there may be in man or nation. And the first basis of strength is common sense. The weak may become hysterical when calamity strikes; the strong find resource in poise.

So it is that Japan, pressed to economize to rebuild her stricken land says to the United States: "We have no moneys to waste on building floating targets for somebody's battleships to blow up; and money to build guns to blow up other's targets freighted with humans. Come, let us get together once more and agree not to compete in the race of armaments, agree to restrict our building even more drastically than we agreed to do at Washington."

Japan is thrifty, and shrewd and wise. And if we are alert to our opportunity we shall undoubtedly say to Japan: "Certainly, we will restrict our preparedness program with yours as far as common sense permits." And then we will say to all the world: "Come again to Washington, and let us lay our guns on the table. Then let the janitor throw those guns into the rubbish pile. And let us then adjourn to Geneva, where the wise men of all the nations will show us how to live by the rule of law, instead of by the rule of the gun."

For every nation, big and little, to maintain its own international police force at every frontier on land and sea and in the air is about as sensible as it would be for every home to hire a policeman to guard every exit, and for every householder to maintain his private fire department. But sometimes it takes an earthquake to bring us down to earth long enough to perceive so obvious a fact.—Eugene Guard.

Half a Million.

There is about $500,000 of income tax money in the state treasury at Salem.

It is money derived from incomes. If you don't have the income, you don't pay. The larger the income the more tax you pay, and the smaller the income the less you pay.

The old plan was to collect only from those who have. The have nots did not pay. The more they had, the more they paid. The less they had the less they paid. The principle is exactly the same as the state income tax, being based wholly on whether the individual's property holding was large or small.

If the amount of property as the basis of collecting taxes was just, then the amount of income is equally just. And the amount of income is a fairer basis, because if you get no income you don't pay, and if you get the biggest income you pay the biggest tax.—Oregon Journal.

A CITY BEAUTIFUL

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH OUR WEEDY AND UNSIGHTLY LOTS?

My plan for making our lots more tidy is: Have each school send a committee of boys around all over Roseburg and list up the vacant and weedy lots, then report them to the teachers of the school.

Then have the City Beautiful Committee hire a man to go around and plow these lots. Then charge it to the people of the city, and make them pay a tax big enough to cover what was needed to pay the man who did the plowing.

They could let the schools take care of these lots, especially the lots that are within the district of one of the three schools. The teachers could appoint some boys that she could depend on to keep the ground worked while school was out. Then when the school took up again, the teacher could inspect the lots and if they had been well kept, she could honor the boys by giving them a banner of some kind.

We could have it planted in grass and have it kept mowed and watered. The water bill could be payed from the city treasury, or else you could plant it in garden, and give the vegetables to the poor or sell them to the groceries. The money that you get from them would help keep up the lots. You could have part of them for the childrens' play ground or parks and set shade trees out so the people who come in from the other places and stop off could rest in the nice parks and see how well the city looks so that when they leave and go to some other place if they are asked how they liked it in Roseburg they could say it is the best kept city in Oregon.

MISSING PAYMASTER AMNESIA VICTIM

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8.—A youth identified as Lieutenant Irvin R. Brown, U. S. Navy paymaster who disappeared with $112,000 in government funds from Mobile, Alabama, March 10, was found last night in Golden Gate park here, apparently, a victim of amnesia.

The man taken into custody had $1200 in his pockets. He talked incoherently and under persistent questioning became violent and had to be subdued.

Identification of the youth as the missing paymaster was made by Lieutenant Commander James R. Nielson of the Twelfth naval district, who had seen Brown on several occasions.

In an apparently lucid moment, the prisoer was quoted as saying "If I'm identified, then what's the use of talking."

RAILROAD WORKERS GIVEN INCRE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, April 8.—The increases of five per cent, approximately 500,000 employes of 31 western railroads and railroad lines are reported to have been granted upon last night as a result of negotiations since March 15.

The reported increase of nearly 5,000,000 annually in the payrolls of the railroads was reported to have agreed to in the contract.

Salary raises asked for the men and conditions were also granted by the reported. The railroads opposing the changes in working rules would take away extra allowances and to make certain concessions, some of which are reported to have been made.

The railroads affected employ about 90 per cent of the railroad west of Chicago.

PRISONER SPIRITED AWAY FROM

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

TAMPA, Fla., April 8.—Sheriff J. B. North, aided only by his wife, spirited away from a mob of 31 men last evening by three masked men who overpowered a guard at the county jail and took him away from a cell in the jail at Plant City, near here, where Hall was being held without bond on a statutory charge, had not been returned early today.

Although authorities here and the surrounding territory expressed belief that the mob had not suffered violence from the sheriff, it was augmented possibly by a number of "night riders" in the band or their prisoner had been found by posses which were immediately after North's car.

As the search gradually extended to a wider area, however, hope was expected momentarily.

MILK PRODUCTION RECORD REPORTED

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

CHICAGO, April 8.—A new champion for milk production by a cow 10 years old or over is Grace Conington, pure bred Holstein-Friesian, bred and owned by the Montana State College of Agriculture, it was announced today. The champion, according to the advanced registry department of the Holstein-Friesian association of Omaha, produced in one year 32,294.4 pounds of milk and 1051.9 pounds of butterfat, enough to fill a row of quart bottles one mile in length and sufficient to supply 44 families with one quart each day for one year.

The former milk production record of 21,550.9 pounds was held by Adironac Wietske Dairy Maid.
