REPUBLICANS TO AID MELLON

Administration Forces Will Renew Counter Offensive Against Attacks.

CONFERENCES ARE HELD

Coolidge Renews Request for Action on His Resolution to End the Revenue Investigation.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) WASHINGTON, April 14.—With both sides newly fortified by entries thrown up over the week-end, the senate resumed its war over Secretary Mellon and the future of the congressional investigation proceedings.

(Associated Press Leased Wire.) WASHINGTON, April 14.—The administration is preparing to renew with increased vigor its counter-offensive against the fight on Secretary Mellon in the senate. President Coolidge conferred at length today with the treasury secretary and with Senator Watson of Indiana, one of the administration senate leaders and chairman of the special committee which is investigating the internal revenue department.

Other senators on the republican side are expected to join in the counter attack in the support of President Coolidge's charge that the revenue committee has not kept within its rights.

In renewing his request for action on his resolution to end the revenue bureau investigation, Senator Watson will reply to the statement issued last night by Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who suggested employment by the committee of Francis J. Heney. The Indiana senator takes the position that nothing is to be gained by the inquiry proposed by Governor Pinchot into prohibition enforcement under Secretary Mellon. The general question of the strategy to be employed in the next phase of the battle was discussed at today's conference between the president and Secretary Mellon and Secretary Watson. Afterward Senator Watson said no definite conclusions were reached. He hastened to the capitol to report the views of the president on the conference of republican senators which met prior to the convening of the senate.

Should an agreement be reached by the republicans to proceed with the immigration bill, Senator Watson indicated he would make no move to bring up his resolution today.

The impression was given in administration circles that the opposition to employment of Mr. Heney lay much deeper than the technical legal grounds set forth by the president in his message and that the fight against such a step would be continued regardless of democratic proposals to make Mr. Heney's retention legal by a formal senate resolution.

The president pointed out in his message that to employ the former California prosecutor with the understanding that his expenses would be paid out of the pocket of Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, would conflict with the revised statute. There appeared to be a complete agreement today, however, that Mr. Heney's employment in any circumstances would not only be objectionable to the White House, but would be regarded by Mr. Coolidge and Secretary Mellon as a proof that the inquiry was actuated by destructive and not constructive motives.

Senator Watson charged in the senate Saturday that such a step would mean that every piece of scandal and gossip afloat on the turbulent political waters of Washington would be dragged out to public view and that a "mudslinging" campaign unparalleled in American history would result.

Beyond that, the president and his advisers convinced that if Mr. Heney is permitted to direct the investigation, it will amount to nothing less than a war to the knife between Mr. Mellon and the elements of his party represented for the moment by Senator Couzens and Governor Pinchot.

President Coolidge was told today by Mr. Mellon that the senate investigation had developed nothing that was not disclosed two years ago. The only result, he declared, had been a serious breakdown in efficiency of the internal revenue bureau.

The secretary strenuously opposes any inquiry that will keep treasury officials and employes engaged in digging up records and appearing before committees instead of applying themselves to the masses of work that awaits their attention in the bureau, unless some remedial legislation is to result from the study.

Mr. Mellon reiterated that he will not take responsibility for the treasury inefficiency, resulting from the investigation.

He feels responsibility for any breakdown must rest on congress.

Twin Favorites of Spring

Irene Rich, playing in Cytherea, Shows the Two Indispensable Items of the Spring Wardrobe.

If you can have only two new costumes this Spring, what will you choose? A wrap and an afternoon dress, a rough sport suit and a dinner gown, two fuzzy little suits? Perhaps. But no choice is quite as wise as a dress of the type that all Paris has approved and the suit that smart New York is wearing almost like a uniform. Conveniently enough, these two leading figures of the new styles are a dress and suit which answer the purposes of sports, shopping, luncheons, or afternoon teas as well as with this very limited equipment you can face any daytime occasion with the assurance of being perfectly gowned. The popular black satin dress of the Spring is one such as Irene Rich wears in Goldway's screen version of "Cytherea," which is being produced by George Fitzmaurice. It is of satin in which both the dull and the shiny surfaces are used, the contrast of the fabric surface forming the only trimming. In Irene Rich's gown, the satin runs in contrasting stripes across the skirt, but the Parisienne has also a hundred other ways of using this satin contrast effectively. With this, Irene Rich wears a version of the omnipresent scarf which in this instance closely resembles a cape of the satin. The tailored suit shown in the sketch is of gray tweed bound with black braid. The scarf worn with this is of soft crepe de Chine in vivid reds and yellows, and it is snugly tucked inside the coat collar in muffer style to increase the masculine effect of the suit.
