

U. OF O. PLANS FOR SUMMER SESSION

Many Distinctive Features for Courses Which Will Start June 23

SPORTS ARE PLANNED

Recreational Life Will Not Be Neglected and Games, Picnics, and Week End Trips to Be Provided.

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Oregon, April 19. (Special)—The University of Oregon summer session for 1924 will be held at Eugene and in Portland during the six weeks from June to August 1. The general plan of organization which has become well established during the past two years will be continued, thus giving each session certain distinctive features. At Eugene approximately ninety courses will be offered, providing excellent opportunities for upper division and graduate students. In Portland the fifty-five courses announced are of more popular and general nature.

Familiar names on the campus faculty will include Dr. H. R. Sheldon, Dr. J. H. Gilbert, Professor O. F. Stafford, Professor E. E. DeGou, Dr. A. E. Caswell, Mrs. Anna L. Bee, Professor W. F. G.

DR. L. L. BURLINGAME, instructor in Biology.

Thacher, Dr. Dan Clark, Professor George Turnbull, and Dr. E. Bates who will return from Europe to offer work in literature and philosophy. Dr. J. D. Spaeth of Princeton, well known at both sessions from his previous visits to Oregon, will give courses in English on the campus and Dr. S. B. Harding of the Portland Staff in 1923, will give the music and library will be well re-staff will offer nine courses while Mrs. Beck will work in history. A notable addition to the education staff will be Superintendent C. Washburne of Winnetka, Illinois, who is nationally known for his work in experimental education. His courses will be of special interest to administrators and teachers. Other important courses in education will be those offered by Dean Sheldon and the courses in methods of teaching, high school mathematics, English, and science, to be given by members of the school of education. These courses will be accompanied by demonstration classes in the University high school.

For teachers of science, Dr. L.

PROF. O. F. STAFFORD, instructor in Chemistry.

L. Burlingame of Stanford is to give a course in biology for high school teachers which will be of great practical value. Dr. Thomas D. Elliot, who is well acquainted with the Pacific coast, comes from Northwest University to teach sociology, and Professor C. H. Woddy of the State College of Washington will head the department of political science. The special fields of physical education staff will offer nine courses, while Mrs. Beck will offer three courses in appreciation of music, and three courses in library training are being planned by the University of Oregon library staff. In all departments, particularly the advanced student and many research courses are announced. Since the classes are usually small the campus session affords unusual advantages in the way of personal contact with recognized authorities in their respective fields. The recreational life of the campus will by no means be neglected, a very interesting recreational program has been planned and will be carried out under the direction of Mr. Delbert Oberbeffer, now a graduate student at Teachers' College, Columbia University, and his assistants. The program will include evening sports and games, picnics and week-end trips.

Another interesting feature of the campus session will be the series of assembly lectures to be given by visiting instructors and by members of the campus staff. Much interest will be attached to the addresses of Dr. Spaeth and Dr. Harding, as well as many others. In the Portland session there will be a faculty of twenty-nine, composed of well known professors of the University of Oregon and leading educators from other universities.

Dr. Christian Gauss, distinguished author and editor and head of the department of language in Princeton University, will give two courses in literature. Dr. H. G. Lull, an educator of national prominence and director of teacher training in the Kansas State Teachers' College and Professor Ira Richardson, acting dean of the graduate school of Colorado State Teachers' College, will offer four courses in education. Dr. Bernard C. Ewer comes from Pomona College to give psychology, and Professor Charles McKinley from Reed College to teach political science, a subject increasingly in demand by the students of the Portland Summer session.

Four history courses will be given by Dr. Cardinal Goodwin, head of the history department of Mills College and by Professor Donald Barnes of the University of Oregon. Professor Ralph Hooper comes from PROF. F. M. WARRINGTON, instructor in Spanish and French.

Harvard University to give courses in economics and public speaking.

Dr. P. A. Parsons, director of the Portland School of Social Work and Professor Earl Kilpatrick, dean of the Extension Division, will teach sociology. Professor Miron Warrington, widely known language teacher of the University faculty, will offer two courses in Spanish and two in French, in each instance beginning and second year work. Mrs. Mahle Holmes Parsons, and popular teacher of writers, will give "The 20th Century Novel." Three courses in botany will be given by Professor A. R. Sweetser, head of the botany department and writer on Oregon flora.

Professor Mary Perkins of the English department will give three writing courses. A general course in Journalism taught by Alfred Powers and called "Writing For Press" will be a new feature this year of the Portland Summer Session.

A series of courses in Applied Sociology will comprise an Institute for Tuberculosis workers, History and Meaning of the Playground Movement, Maternal and Infant Hygiene and Problems in Child Health. Each of these will be given by an expert.

An Americanization course will be offered as well as courses in music, art, chemistry, physical education and public health. Classes will be held from eight to twelve five mornings a week in the commodious and centrally located Lincoln High School building. The afternoons will be free for study and recreation.

Preliminary announcements listing the courses and the faculty of both sessions are now off the press and available for those requesting them. A descriptive catalogue will be ready soon. Inquiries concerning the summer session should be addressed to the director at Eugene.

FURNISHING HOUSES TO CHANGE LOCATION

Arrangements have been made by Miss Ethel Webb and Mrs. N. Saul, owners of the Art Shop and Hat Shop now located in the Perkins annex on Cass street, to move to new quarters in the Salzman building which is under construction on Jackson street. The exact date of the change is indefinite, but it will be made about the first of the coming month. The ladies will occupy much larger quarters and will have an up-to-date shop in which to display their large supply of furnishings. The name of the firm will not be changed, and the two businesses will remain separate as at present. With a new location and more room the proprietresses hope to cater to an even larger business than now.
