LOVE-OR FAME?

by
VIOLET DARE

The story thus far: Dorothy Lane, who wants to go into the movies, receives a letter from Persis Grant, an old friend living in New York. Persis knows a motion picture producer, and Dorothy goes to visit her, hoping to get a chance to act in pictures.

III—AT THE DOOR OF A STUDIO
SOMETIMES on the way to New York I felt a little bit scry: it seemed as if I'd undertaken such an awful lot, not knowing anybody who could help me but all except Persis—and she'd just barely met that motion-picture man she wrote about, and she might never have seen him again. I thought of the thousands of girls and women who were trying to get into pictures, and the thousands more who had tried and hadn't been able to make it. I was glad when I followed the porter who carried my bag through the Grand Central Station, in New York, and saw Persis waiting for me.

"My dear!" she cried, grabbing me so hard that my hat slid over one ear. "What do you think? I've got a chance for you to act—you've come just at the right moment if you want to get into pictures, because Mr. Hopson—that's the man who makes pictures, you know—is just casting a new one, and he'd love to have you in it. He's been in our office a lot lately. Isn't that gorgeous?"

Gorgeous! I was so thrilled that I hardly realized that a few minutes later I was riding on a Fifth Avenue bus for the first time. I was just in a dream, but as we passed one of the big department stores, somewhere in the Thirties, Persis clutched me by the arm and pointed wildly to the sidewalk.

"Look—there's Betty Blithe—the girl in the bright red hat—getting into that movie!"

We were riding on top of the bus, and I simply dangled over the side of it, breathless. Sure enough, it was Betty—right there within twenty feet of me. Think of it! A lot of people had stopped to stare at her, and she sort of laughed and ducked into the car quick, but I had caught a glimpse of the violets in the flower holder inside her limousine and of the gold mesh bag that she tossed down on the seat beside her—I could see down through the window. And her clothes were so stunning and she looked so awfully pretty and happy—

I was more convinced than ever that I wanted to be a screen actress.

Persis' room was awfully nice. I wouldn't have called it big exactly; it was about the size of our dining room at home. But she said it was big for the money—and it certainly looked comfortable. There were two couches that we could sleep on, and she unfolded a card table and put an electric stove on it when she wanted to cook. The dresser was behind a screen, and on it she had photographs of Corinne Griffith, Viola Dana, Wyndham Standing, and Harrison Ford.

"You've no idea how they've helped me to keep from being lonesome," she told me when I was brushing my hair before we went out to dinner. "When I first came to New York I didn't care so awfully much about the movies, but after I'd been here a little while, without knowing anybody, I began to go a lot. And after a while I wrote and asked my favorites for their pictures. They sent me such nice ones, and Corinne Griffith even wrote me a nice little note with hers. So I sort of substituted movie friends for real ones—and they made all the difference in the world."

It would be two weeks before Mr. Hopson wanted anybody for his picture, and of course I couldn't afford to waste that much time, so I started out the very next morning to look for a job. I'd hunted up some of the studios in the telephone book, and made a list of them, deciding to begin with the nearest ones.

But at the one on West Fifty-sixth Street they weren't making any pictures, and when I went to the Fox studio there was no chance of seeing anyone, according to the boy who sits at the door and sees all strangers what they want. As I went to luncheon, and prepared to go that afternoon to one of the studios that were out on the edge of town or in a suburb—

"I might change my luck. I can't mother a postcard with a picture of Grant's tomb on it, and I don't think I was having a lovely time; I knew the family would think I'd been sightseeing, and be a lot happier than if I said I was job hunting."

I went on the subway to the studio I'd picked. Finding the right train was awfully complicated, but people were nice about telling me where to go, and some I heard talking on the way there that got off where I was to go, and headed for a big white building. They seemed to know all about it, and when they began discussing "long shots" and "fringe" with the way a set had been built, I was sure they were movie people.

"They went right at a door marked 'offices' when they got to the big building, so I did, too. Inside there was a man to ask what people wanted, and several people were sitting and standing around, waiting for something.

"I want to see the casting director," I told the man. My hands were icy cold, and seemed to be simply cramped around the package of photographs that I was carrying, but I thought my voice sounded fairly unconcerned.

CORONER'S JURY WANTS FOSTER HELD

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
PORTLAND, May 22.—The coroner's jury last night recommended that George W. Foster, alias Paul Hartman, be held to answer to the grand jury for involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Peter Green, a Portland electric power employe who was struck by Foster's auto last Tuesday.

The jury also recommended that Foster be permanently deprived of a driver's license.

Witnesses at the hearing testified that Foster was driving at an excessive rate of speed.

OBSTINATE CASE RELIEVED QUICKLY

SAYS KOREX DID MORE THAN EVERYTHING ELSE TRIED IN 5 YEARS.

"For five years I suffered from gland troubles," says Mr. J. Johnson of Dundee, Mississippi, "and could not get much relief, although I underwent three X-Ray examinations. Then I tried korex compound and it did me more good than all the treatments I had tried in the 5 years. I cannot say too much in praise of it. Although I am now 50 years old, I feel I am only 25."

Many remarkable restorations to vigorous health and normal activity are being credited to korex compound almost daily by enthusiastic users. Sufferers from weakness after the flu, low vitality, lack of appetite, aching muscles, glandular inactivity, and premature old age, will be interested in learning that the American distributors of korex compound, have arranged for korex compound to be sold in Roseburg, Oregon, at Lloyd Crocker's Pioneer Drug Store, 241 N. Jackson street.

ating from America at the false reports of his death. The Ledger correspondent said he had talked for an hour with Dr. Sun at his headquarters and that later he had handed him a signed statement saying: "I have been deeply moved by the manifestations of sympathy which the false report of my death has elicited from the American people. I interpret this less as a personal tribute than evidence of continued American interest in the great processes of change and national readjustment with which I have been identified since and before the Chinese revolution of 1911-1912."

EDITORS BACK OF FOREST MOVEMENT

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
OKLAHOMA CITY, May 22.—A plea for protection of forests now existing and for reforestation was voiced here today at the convention of the National Editorial Association by H. C. Hotaling, St. Paul, executive secretary.

"Our timber is being consumed much faster than it is being re-produced, Hotaling declared. "It is up to the publishers to support every move, not only for reforestation but for the protection of existing forests from fires."

"The day is coming when some substitute for wood pulp will be absolutely necessary as only one-sixth of our virgin forests remain."

"The newspapers are partly to blame, for the whole-sale lack of respect for laws," Wallace Edwards, editor of the Farrington Daily News, told the convention. He urged editors to do all in their power "to command respect for all laws and support the constitution." He made a plea for the retention of prohibition statutes and defined them as reducers of crime and misery.

WELL-MERITED SUCCESS

A distinguished citizen, honored politically and professionally, Dr. R. V. Pierce, whose picture appears above, made a success few have equalled. His pure herbal remedies which have stood the test for fifty years are still among the "best sellers." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and stomach alterative. It clears the skin, beautifies it, increases the blood supply and the circulation, and pimples and eruptions vanish quickly. Beauty is but skin deep and good blood is beneath both. For your blood to be good, your stomach must be in condition, your liver active. This Discovery of Doctor Pierce's puts you in fine condition, with all the organs active. Ask your nearest druggist for Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, in tablet or liquid form, or send 10 cents for trial packages of tablets to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

DERN WINS FROM EDWARDS LAST NIGHT

PORTLAND, May 22.—Ira Dern from Salt Lake won from Billy Edwards of Kansas City in an hour and fifteen minutes of what was scheduled to be a finish match here last night. The agreement was that if no fall was won within an hour one fall should decide the match. Dern sprang on Edwards on their return to the mat, following a mixup in which they had both gone through the ropes and pinned him. The match was believed by fans to be the roughest ever staged in Portland, both grapplers using foul tactics repeatedly.

PRESIDENT'S COLD IMPROVED SLIGHTLY
WASHINGTON, May 22.—His cold having improved slightly overnight, President Coolidge returned to his office today, facing a long series of engagements. The cold appeared yesterday to have grown worse, and as a result he spent most of the time in his room. Today he took one of his early morning walks and was at his desk before any of the White House staff had reported.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Bridgadier-General Charles E. Sawyer, the White House physician said the president had had a very restful night, undisturbed by coughing and that he was "very much better."

White House officials, anxious to save the president's strength, advised cancellation of several of his engagements for the day, but Mr. Coolidge announced he would go through with all of them.

COMMISSION WAIVES PENALTY
(Associated Press Leased Wire.)
SALEM, May 23.—The state tax commission today decided to waive the 100 per cent penalty on income tax payments that are delinquent more than 60 days after March 31, the date when payments were due. The 5 per cent penalty for the first 60 days delinquency will stand. The commission extended the time for paying second installments to July 20 on condition that the first installment has been paid.
