WHAT ADVERTISING HAS DONE.

The Victor (N. Y.) Herald Says:

Advertising has made the Victrola dog famous. It has made the Cash Register a big brother to retailers all over the world. It is displacing the truck horse with 40 horse-power trucks. It has introduced you to a substitute for sole leather and has helped you to an appreciation of Stetson hats, Walkover, Douglas and Emerson shoes. It has made the hand-written letter an oddity in business.

Advertising has put hair oil on heads where no hair oil would do any good, and on heads where no hair oil was needed. It has put Castoria and Cream of Wheat down your throat, left bristles in your gums, and then come along with a Rubberset and taken them out. It has scoured your teeth with Sozodent, Pebeco and Pedsodent. It has smeared your face with Palm Olive Shaving Cream and put a Gillette against your hayfield.

Advertising has put Arrow collars around your neck and Ingersolls around your wrist. It has jammed your feet into Holeproof socks, hung Paris garters on your legs and Tiffany rings on your fingers. It has stuck a Robert Burns between your teeth, and worn out your jaws on Wrigley's.

Advertising has sold you Cuticura for pimples, Pears for the bath, and Ivory for the tub, and posted you on what to buy for corns, warts, bunions and ingrowing toenails.

Go anywhere, do anything, and advertising has had a hand in it positively.

And still some folks ask, Does advertising pay?

One of the most thrilling moments ever experienced in a child's life, was lived through in the schools of years ago, at about this time of year, when it was announced that the school committee had driven into the school yard for their annual visit. The children had assembled in their best clothes, stiff and uncomfortable, and full of dread. Many parents were present. The full strain of the ordeal was not felt until the committeemen, awe inspiring and terrible, should enter the room. But while the committeemen seemed to cultivate this impression of fearfulness it was commonly a good deal of a bluff. They might ask certain stock questions to show that they were carefully investigating the school results. But actually, their stern faces concealed a spirit of laughter and good nature, and all they wanted was a reasonable excuse for announcing that all the kids were promoted and everyone could go home happy.

President Coolidge was bothered recently with that trying ailment that lowers the efficiency of so many people, the common "cold". Many people who are subject to this ailment know how it will hang on for weeks and keep them miserable and unable to do their usual work. Most people have their favorite remedies for this disorder, and if a person asked advice of his friends, it would take him about all his time to administer the suggested remedies. The more people are used to exposure to cold temperatures, the less likelihood that they will suffer from "colds". Arctic explorers and people who work out doors in cold climates don't have them much. The habit of cold bathing is a mighty good toughener for those who can stand it, and many people find that if they let up on this practice, they are soon attacked by a cold.

The liquor treaty with Great Britain by which the United States government gets the right to search suspicious ships for liquor, when the same are found within one hour's distance from shore, will put a few more difficulties in the way of rum running. Even if people dislike the prohibition amendment, they must admit that it has been preposterous to permit a fleet of vessels to come up to within three miles from our shores, prepared to unload illicit liquor on the first dark night. With this longer distance to be traversed by the boats that land the illegal stuff, and new coast guard chasers going after them, there ought to be some interesting times off the American coasts this summer. Rum running will not be quite so joyful and festive a sport.

The last day of the recent Strawberry carnival was termed "Portland Day." We don't know why this cognomen. There wasn't a single delegate here from the metropolis—not even a regret. Too bad.

---

The plasterers at Washington are demanding $14 a day. Now it remains to be seen what the congressional whitewashers will ask for.

The use of airplanes is growing constantly, but so far no traffic cops have had to be put up at crowded corners in the ether.

---

Formerly this country used to resound with Indian warwhoops, so it remains to be seen if real progress has resulted.

---

The poets sing about the sweet breath of spring, but perhaps they have not got very close to some of the sports.

---

The bandits must feel that they get public notice far beneath their deserts when they are not bob haired.

DRY CONVENTION STARTED TODAY

why is it that almost simultaneously with the president's joining the church, he pardons one of the worst bootleggers in all America, after he had been convicted? Is it not because the liquor traffic votes as a unit, while the church divides.

"If a certain famous—perhaps I might say in-famous— president of one of the large universities of this country has his way about the matter of platform to be issued by the republican party, and gets a plank declaring for modification of the Volstead Act, some mighty good people are going to find themselves out of a political home."

"No definite planks were suggested with the exception that he said "he was agreed with a noted federal judge who said the Volstead act should be amended so that the former aliens who violate that law, shall forfeit their citizenship and become automatically subjects for deportation."

"Is it not a very great wonder that we have the present marvelous beneficial results of prohibition, then the law is in the hands of its enemies for enforcement? The late lamented war-time president, although himself a Presbyterian elder, issued while governor of New Jersey an address that was so favorable to the liquor traffic that the breweries had it broadcast over the nation and when your speaker called him down on the proposition, the strongest response that could be obtained was that he was sorry, that anything he said was being so used by the brewers. When I asked that he then disown all intention of aiding the breweries, he shut up like a clam.

"If you want law respected, observed and enforced, then you should cast your ballot for that one and only party which has ever stood for law and order.

"Do that and I promise you that in the ensuing quadrennium you will see the liquor traffic killed and not even its ghost shall arise to give you trouble.

"Separation of church and state we all believe in, but God pity us that in carrying out that thought we have seperated our politics from our religion. We should not take our politics into our religion, but most assuredly we should put our religion into effect in our politics and support no candidate or party which fails to represent us and our religious principles. One trouble is that many of our church members get so disgusted with their rum-ruled party, they become discouraged and fail to vote at all. For this they are blameworthy, as the other fellows vote, always and not only 'always,' but in many instances 'often as well.'"

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 5. — Resolutions looking to disbandment of the prohibition national party were introduced in the national convention this afternoon. The first was a memorial to that effect from the Nebraska state convention presented by J. A. Murray, vice-chairman of the national committee and sole delegate from that state.

The second was a resolution offered by Robert H. Patton of Springfield, Illinois. He renewed his suggestion of last night that the convention refrain from nominating candidates, taking its principles to other parties and organizing a new party if they fail to adopt them.

An avalanche of points of order followed and both resolutions were referred to the committee on resolutions.

John J. Coffin, Florida, proposed a change in party name by adding "law and order" to the title, making it read "Prohibition, Law and Order Party." This was referred to the committee also.

According to the belief of leaders as expressed last night by Dr. A. P. Gouley, of Seattle, Wash., the prohibition party has the "best opportunity since its organization to do something on its own account." Its candidate can win in the election if the proper platform is adopted and the proper man selected.

The convention was called to order by vice-chairman J. A. Murray of Nebraska.

Much of today's session was to be devoted to routine business, the organization of committee's and address.

A bare dozen of spectators filtered into the hall just before J. A. Murray, Nebraska, vice-chairman of the national convention reported for order, using a pocket knife as a gavel. Approximately 100 delegates were in the body of the convention.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 5. — A statement in the keynote address of H. P. Faris, temporary chairman of the national prohibition convention that brothers-in-law of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler had served sentences for bootlegging, was disputed this afternoon by E. L. Rohenthal, Connecticut.

The latter said the men were cousins and not brothers of Mrs. Butler.
