What God Says

About THE LAND OF MILK AND HONEY

and that floweth with milk and honey. * * * A land which the thy God careth for. The eyes of the Lord, thy God, are always on it."

Who made Palestine a land flowing with milk and honey? God did. When did God take His eyes off that land and stop caring for it? When He scattered His earthly people among the nations of the earth.

But the Jews are going back to Palestine and Zionism is stirring the entire race of Jews with a nationalistic spirit, and just now new nations of fruitfulness are beginning to be seen in their ancient land. Who is bringing this thing to pass? Who could, but God?

Not very long ago, one of the most respected Jews in America was addressing a Zionist Conference, "All Jews are young now, we shall make our old country flow with milk and honey." I would condemn that spirit or that endeavor, but God will have to do it, if He will. If you read Old Testament prophecy, you will see that God has just begun with the Jewish race and He who miraculously kept them a separate people during all the centuries, has scattered over the face of the whole earth, He can, and will, bring a nation back into the land again flowing with milk and honey.

SUMMARY GIVEN OF COUNTY MINES

Writer Describes Activities in Mining Industry in Southern Part of County.

SILVER PEAK LEADS

Rapid Development of Valuable Properties Forecasted When Road From Riddle Is Completed.

By Julian A. Becker

In giving a summary of the mining activities in the Riddle-Canyonville district, it will be best to first speak of the mines adjacent to the town of Riddle which is the distributing point for the whole district.

The foremost mine is the Silver Peak mine owned by the Oregon Exploration company of Portland. This company has a force of some ten miners and helpers, and have about 1000 to 1200 feet of underground workings, showing a vein, or workable zone, about 50 feet wide of which some four feet is very high grade, in many instances yielding as high as $250 per pound; the balance of the vein is a calcopryite, concentrating about one to 20, making a very attractive shipping proposition. The company is now building a road from Riddle to the mine so to begin trucking the ore to the railroad and a good sized crew is thus employed to be ready before the wet weather sets in.

The success of the Silver Peak has been an incentive for much activity along the strike of the vein and many locations have been made, and in every case the development work has shown most promising results. Among the most prominent I would mention the properties owned by Frank Cain, Mr. Logsdon and Mr. Ash, which lay to the south of the Silver Peak property.

There is another vein lying about one-half mile west of the Silver Peak vein showing high values in gold, silver and copper. The best developed property is owned by William Bradford, being on the Wilson creek side of the ridge, and a most flattering prospect. On the south side of the ridge—the Middle creek side—are found the gold properties of William Horn, producing very fine ore.

Leaving Riddle on the way to Canyonville we pass the old Levens Lodge mine owned by the Canyonville Mining company of Portland. This old mine is well known and has always been good—negotiations now being under way with a view of again putting the property into the producing column with its gold, platinum and palladium ores.

We now reach Canyonville and continuing on the highway some three

LOVE-OR FAME?

Author of "The Half-Time Wife"

LOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit PERSIS GRANT, and gets a chance to act in a motion picture as double for a famous star. She meets LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity man. A producer whom Persis knows, named HOPSON, invites the girls to go to a theater and dance club with him and some friends. French wants Dorothy not to have anything to do with the Hopson crowd, and as a result she and Persis quarrel and she decides to live alone. Dorothy goes to a theatrical agent whom French has recommended. She meets

SYLVIA STARRS, who takes her to a girls' club to live.

XV—MY CORNER OF NEW YORK

I'D LIKE to tell you all the details of my getting established at the club, but I haven't got time or space. It proved to be just as homy as it had looked girl who comes to New York to earn her living could stay there.

Sylvia introduced me to the nice woman who had charge of the club, and she made me feel so welcome, and as if I belonged to the club and she was glad to have me there. She made all the preliminary arrangements not a bit as if they were red tape, and when I was all established as a member of the club, I told her who my people were back home and enough about myself so that she'd know I was the sort of girl the club was meant for—she patted me on the shoulder and said she hoped I'd be happy there, and to come to her if she could advise or help me in any way. She seemed like a real friend from that very moment.

I had dinner in the cafeteria that night—only it wasn't like a regular cafeteria, because it seemed so homy. The food was all home cooked, and you just went and got what you wanted, on a little tray, and then sat down at one of the small tables, with any one you wanted to. Sylvia introduced me to all the girls, and before I knew it I was part of a celebration; one of them had been given a part in a play that was going to open on Broadway very soon, and everybody was congratulating her and making a big fuss about it. I couldn't help noticing right away that their work was the most important thing to all of them. A crowd of girls that age back home would have been talking about parties and clothes and things like that, but these girls were all discussing parts they were trying for in plays or movies, pictures, or arguing about make-up or something like that. And they were all so nice to me.

"I've got passes for a show to-night," one of them said to me. "I can't go, because I'm going to a preview of a picture at one of the hotels, so why don't you and Sylvia take my tickets?"

So we did. It seemed funny to me to be going out in the evening without having a man along, but Sylvia didn't seem to think anything about our walking down Broadway just by ourselves, and, as we didn't pay any attention to anybody else, nobody did to us. And at the theater I noticed quite a lot of girls and women alone. There were two behind us—beautifully dressed, too, and awfully pretty. And I heard one of them say:

It was as comfortable as it looked from outside.

"Yes, Ernest wanted to take me to see that new musical comedy to-night, but I knew you and I would have a better time alone, so if you don't mind he'll just take us to supper afterward."

That wasn't a bit the way the girls feel back home; there it's almost a disgrace not to have a man with you when you go out anywhere in the evening; people think it's because you can't find one. I decided that girls in the city were much freer than they are in a small town.

It was really hard for me to wait till the following Tuesday for some work to do, but, of course, I couldn't hurry things up any. Sylvia told me I was very lucky, indeed, to get the chance to work then. She took me around with her to some of the studios, and I left my photographs, and even saw one casting director, but he said that he had nothing then, not even a mob scene. I left my name and address everywhere, though, they gave me cards to fill out, which would be filed—so I felt that I was accomplishing something. I learned a good deal about make-up from the girls; they gathered in my room late one afternoon, and experimented with different shades of grease paint and powder till they got what they thought was the best combination. And one of them showed me the best way to do my eyes. So when I went back to the agency I really felt quite experienced and pretty sure of my success.

This property is too vast to go into details here, but it is being developed extensively. The writer considers this property the wonder of the northwest, and values of $1000 per ton are frequently found.

And finally between Silver Peak and Tiller there are many prospectors in the field, and many very high grade samples of ore are being exhibited, giving the district a very flattering position, and we look for more great properties in the very near future.

TO ATTEND CONVENTION

M. S. Hamm, president of the Roseburg Rotary club, will leave tonight for Vancouver, B.
