JUNE IS GREAT MONTH FOR ALL MASONS

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 12.—The month of June holds many anniversaries of peculiar significance. Masons have had a conspicuous part in world events for over two centuries and it is the customs of Masonic lodges and organizations to memorialize the men who have been leaders in the struggle for liberty and progress. Masonry is preeminently a patriotic fraternity and takes advantage of historic anniversaries to inculcate American principles.

Linking modern times with the revolutionary days, June 7, 1775, has a deep Masonic interest in that on this day Braddock set out for Fort Duquesne. On his staff was a young officer, then in his teens, who was destined to write his name among the greatest, George Washington.

Twenty-one years later, June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee, a Mason, offered in the American Congress a resolution declaring that the colonies should be free and independent.

On June 15, 1776, Washington accepted command of the American army and began that series of military campaigns that Frederick the Great declared demonstrated that Washington was a strategist of the first rank.

The Battle of Bunker Hill was fought on June 17, 1775. Although this battle was a defeat for the American forces it served to arouse the colonies and therefore cost the British dearly.

General Joseph Warren who lost his life in this skirmish was formerly Grand Master of Masons of Massachusetts. Fifty years later Marquis de Lafayette, another famous Mason, laid the cornerstone of the Bunker Hill Monument.

The Battle of Waterloo occurred on June 18, 1815, on which occasion the allied armies under the generalship of the Duke of Wellington smashed the armies of Napoleon and brought the dreams of the Emperor to a disastrous end. The Duke of Wellington was a member of Lodge No. 184 on the Irish roll, held at Trim, in the County of Meath.

Pioneer days will be remembered on June 24th because on that date in the year 1607, the Holy Sacrament was first administered at Jamestown. Among the Englishmen who laid the foundation of that early commonwealth were many Masons.

Masonry's consistent battle for the rights of the people will be emphasized on June 22. Giuseppe Mazzini, the great Italian liberator, was born on June 22, 1805. Mazzini was Grand Master of Masons of Italy.

Another Italian patriot whose name is closely linked with the fraternity is Giuseppe Garibaldi, who, with Mazzini, shares the honors of obtaining liberty for Italy. Garibaldi's death occurred June 2, 1882. He was made a Mason when a young man and was made Grand Commander of the Supreme Council, of Italy in 1863. While in the United States in his early manhood he is said to have affiliated with Tompkins Lodge No. 471, Stapleton, N. Y.

Defies Age by Using Ordinary Buttermilk to Beautify Complexion

This Pretty Girl Tells Druggist Not to Take Anyone's Money Unless This Delightful New Vanishing Cream Shows a Decided Improvement.

Buttermilk Cream creates beauty almost like magic. The most wonderful thing about it is the fact that whilst it turns the dull, most lifeless complexion to radiant beauty and makes red or rough hands or arms snowy white, yet there is not the slightest sign of its use after application. It actually vanishes from sight and the most heated atmosphere will not produce the least shininess or greasiness of the skin. No matter whether you are troubled with a poor complexion, wrinkles, puffiness around the eyes, freckles, crows feet or lines around the mouth, ugly finger nails, or just a simple roughness of the face, hands or arms caused by wind or sun, you will find that any or all of these troubles will quickly disappear with the use of Howard's Buttermilk Cream.

LOVE-OR FAME?

VIOLET DARE

Author of "The Half-Time Wife"

DOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit PERISS GRANT and try to break into the movies. She meets LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity man, and after a quarrel with Persa, goes to a girls' club with SYLVIA STEARNS and lives there. Through French she meets JOHN SEWARD, a famous star, and is engaged as his leading lady in an independent production that he is making.

XX—A MISUNDERSTANDING.

I COULD be ready to leave for Cape Cod at once, of course. We talked most of the rest of the evening about the picture, but I got to know John Seward as I never had before, though we'd seen so much of each other at the studio. Of course, knowing what a wonderful thing he'd done for me made a good deal of difference about the way I'd felt. Then, too, I'd noticed how he'd been looking at me.

VIOLET DARE

ways thought of him as a big man; I'd seen him on the screen so often before I ever met him that that made him hard to feel intimately acquainted with for me. And in the studio, though he'd always been awfully nice, he never was really chummy.

"I've always wanted to know you, though," he told me that evening, when we were having dinner out under the stars, and the little brook in the ravine down below us was tinkling away so that it sounded like really beautiful music. "It's about time you got acquainted, isn't it?" And he looked at me with such a new, friendly smile that I did truly feel like a friend of his.

Of course I felt awfully flattered that he should want to know me, and his kindness in giving me such a wonderful opportunity was simply overwhelming. On the way home, as we coasted down the long hills and then went rushing through the summer night, I tried very hard to thank him for all he'd done for me, but he just laughed in sort of an embarrassed way and changed the subject. It seemed funny for a star to be really shy.

Sylvia was out somewhere with Lawrence when I got home, and when she came in, at about eleven, she didn't come to my room at all. I wanted to go in and talk to her, but I remembered the way she'd looked at me when I left the studio, and didn't.

Lawrence didn't come to the studio the next day, and Sylvia wasn't working so I didn't see either of them. And the day after that was Thursday, when I was to leave for Cape Cod. I called Lawrence up and told him about it.

"You're going with Seward?" he repeated when I'd finished. "Yes—Mrs. Phipps and Mr. Haynes are going, too," I told him. He didn't answer for a moment, and then he just said very gruffly: "Well—hope you have a good time," and hung up the receiver.

He was so disagreeable that I couldn't sleep that night, on the train, for thinking about him. I just lay awake and wondered and wondered about him, and at last, though it seemed awfully conceited to think so, I decided that perhaps he was in love with me. For there were lots of little things he'd done and said when we were together that meant a lot to me now as I looked back on them, though at the time I hadn't thought about them at all. And the way he'd looked that day when I'd told him John Seward was going to drive me home had a new significance now, coupled with his being so cross because I was going to Cape Cod with Mr. Seward.

I didn't really know whether I liked thinking Lawrence was in love with me or not. He'd been such a dear always, but he'd seemed more like a brother than anything else. That was really the way I felt about him. He never seemed romantic, as John Seward did. Not that Mr. Seward would ever fall in love with me, of course!
