ROSEBURG, OREGON, SATURDAY, JUNE 14, 1924.

TUBERCULOSIS STATISTICS

Oregon is one of twenty-four states whose white city dwelling wage-earners showed a lower tuberculosis death rate than the general urban industrial population of the United States, according to death claim figures just compiled by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company based on the 1923 mortality experience of its 15,000,000 industrial policy-holders. The tuberculosis death rate for the United States was 90.5 per 100,000 white industrial policy-holders, while that for Oregon was 43.3

"The regional distribution of tuberculosis presents an interesting picture," the latest statistical bulletin issued by the insurance company states. "The industrial populations of the cities show higher tuberculosis rates, for the most part, below the Mason Dixon Line. In the South Atlantic group Deleware is the only one of eight states whose industrial population death rate is below that for the whole country. The rate for each of the East South Central States, particularly Kentucky and Tennessee, is far in excess of the average. Among the Northern States, on the other hand, every New England State, except Rhode Island exhibits a below average rate; so does every East North Central State except Indiana, every Mountain State except Colorado, every Pacific Coast State except California, and every West North Central State without exception. The most fertile field for the anti-tuberculosis movement in this country now lies among the urban wage-workers of the South Atlantic and East South Central States, and of Louisiana.

Americans are a unit in agreeing that the country is being burdened to death with useless laws. No one denies that all departments of government have hundreds of unnecessary employes. No one could possibly doubt that taxation is exorbitant and mounting higher every day, remarks an exchange. Practically every candidate for public office denounces extravagance in government, demands relief, and pledges his services to a policy of reduction. Every election is a paper victory for the forces of economy and retrenchment. Yet, in spite of it all, the public sees each succeeding administration spend more money than its predecessor, create more offices and bureaus, enact more statutes (an average of 10,000 new laws annually,) and lead the country deeper into the wilderness of confusion and profligacy. Only those men holding public office, who, when casting their votes, oppose extravagance, should be re-elected. Unless the people pick men whose record for honesty and sincerity is unimpeachable, unless they elect the best men to serve them, we shall have more and more extravagance and bureaucratic government. Unless the people show sufficient interest and sufficient energy to select better congressional and legislative material, then the people will have no relief and will deserve none.

It is often noticed that men of an easy going disposition, who have never been inclined to work at all hard, will change their natures radically after getting married and acquiring a family. The feeling that a sweet woman and fine children are dependent on one's industry, is a tremendous stimulus to energy. It is a good deal the same in trying to arouse some sleepy folks to an interest in home town activities. Most of them cherish a genuine affection for their home community. They would feel a pang if they had to leave it. The idea should be impressed upon them that the future of their home town is dependent upon the activity of its citizens. The thought that unless they took hold and helped, their home town would drag and fall behind and fail to keep up with the times, has been a thought that has aroused many men to do their part in assuring its future.

Mr. Pierson, president of the Merchant's Association of New York, said in a recent address that to meet economic changes that have taken place in Europe, this country must either raise its productivity or submit to a lower standard of living. This country can not indefinitely compete with the hard working people of Europe, unless the cost of producing commodities is reduced. This could be accomplished without reduction of the standard of living, if people generally would put the same enthusiasm into their work that was manifested by the people who built up this country. Another means for increasing productivity is through improved machinery. The more people save money, the more capital there will be with which to improve the producing equipment.

Some one asks what is meant by "secondary education." Well, an example of it is given by some students who put more time on their athletics than they do on their studies.

It is claimed that women may be drafted in the next war. Many men slackers would be willing to step aside and give them a chance for fame.

The fact that the gas men are reported to be holding a convention does not necessarily mean that it is a gathering of politicians.

Surprising how some folks like to drink poison when it is doctored up and sold as liquor.

An informal home wedding at Sutherlin Saturday, June 7th, united in marriage Miss Nellie Gleason of that place, and Leonard Swift, of Roseburg. Several friends witnessed the ceremony, and were guests at the dinner which followed. Mr. and Mrs. Swift have gone to Washington to make their home.

DAYTON PREPARING FOR AIR CONTESTS

DAYTON, O., June 12.—(United Press.)—Arrangements are well under way here for the annual International Pulitzer air races, to be staged at the Wilbur Wright field in October.

Several hundred airplanes, capble of going at a speed of 250 miles an hour, will compete for prizes aggregating $50,000.

All highways and streets between Dayton and the field are being paved and 800 regular soldiers from Jefferson barracks will act as special patrol during the events. Dayton business men have subscribed $250,000 for the initial expenses of the races.

Thousands of motorists from adjoining states are expected and a plot of 20 acres near the field has been set aside for parking space.

Nearly every state in the union will be represented in the races, as well as nearly every European nation. Belgium has promised to send two ships, and England probably will do likewise. Sadi Lecointe, the fastest and highest flyer in France, and Brack Papa of Italy have signified their intention of competing.

The army air service will be represented by the two Curtiss racers, which competed last year. They have been equipped with 500-horsepower motors, replacing the 400 horse-power motors used in the 1923 race.

The pilots appointed to maneuver the army airships are Lieutenant W. H. Brookley, both of McCook Field and Captain Bert Skeel of Selfridge Field.

There is still some doubt about the navy entering the race this year, although there is a report that it will be represented by a new speed marvel.

The Barling bomber, the biggest ship in the world, is on the program for a series of spectacular flights. Lieutenant Harold R. Harris will be at the stick.

The Pulitzer race will be the main event of the meet, which lasts three days, beginning October 2. There are ten or twelve other events, including one for small planes, such as those driven by gasoline engines, capable of a long distance flight on a single gallon of gasoline.

For the amateur builders there are six or seven prizes. In addition to the various races, the Shenandoah and a flock of barrage, observance other balloons will be here in a display of light air machines.

Each evening there will be night flying by illuminated planes.

There has been some concern over the difficulty of housing the hundreds of planes expected to enter the races. Wilbur Wright Field can accomodate about 112, McCook Field about 125 and two private fields about 50 each, but many will not be under a roof during the races, it is said.

When you buy a McCormick or Deering mower, binder or rake, you are assured that it is the best implement of its kind that money can buy, and that you can always get parts for it without any trouble. — Wharton Bros., Agents.

The Roseburg gifts bring the grand total now pledged to Albany college up to $265,000.
