UNEXPECTED RESULTS FROM ADVERTISING

Printers' Ink tells how a comparatively small grower of celery who made a small try at advertising, came out as the result of his effort. An advertising man passed a vacation on this man's plantation and got him interested in pushing his product. He induced him to prepare special labels for his boxes, special bands for individual stalks, to print some illustrated booklets. He originated a trade name, and tried out a limited newspaper campaign in only two cities. The celery grower thus described the result: "That business of ours has just jumped up, the same as light crops do in the Everglades muck, almost overnight. I'm more interested in advertising now than in raising celery." A great many people who have never advertised much would be equally surprised if they would try it out in an enterprising way. They need not spend any very large sum of money, nor take any very big space to start with. The main thing is to pick out some special lines that they feel have exceptional merit, put in a brief description of them, state why they are believed to be of superior value, and then quote prices. Every seller or producer of merchandise has such special opportunities to offer. He can go through every section of it, and pick out things that look to him particularly good, which he takes pride in offering as the result of his enterprise and judgment and experience. He will sell them to his best friends, knowing that they will be pleased with them, and feel he has done them a service in attracting their attention to these lines of goods. Now if he will pick out a few of these articles or lines, and tell the public about them in a few terse words, not fancy language, nor fine writing, but just plain every day talk, and quote the prices on them, he can hardly help getting results.

One of the chief attractions of the summer for many people, is that it encourages the picnic habit. This appeals specially to the women folks, possibly, because there does not have to be any dishwashing afterward. Women picnic lovers would deny that their love for picnics is based on such material considerations. To them some pretty scene in the big outdoors adds an inspiring touch of romance, so that even plain bread and butter sandwiches taste like some nectarian food fit for the gods. The attitude of the men toward picnics is less enthusiastic, particularly when it appears that the heavy lunch baskets have to be carried to some inaccessible spot before the correct atmosphere is secured. However the men folks like it better than they will admit, particularly as it gives them a chance to display before the admiring women folks their ability in the arts of camping and woodcraft.

The political orators are about to begin their campaigns of education, but it is doubtful if the people know any more next November than they do now.

President Coolidge is spending his summer in Washington, so that an experienced man will be in charge of haying on the White House lawn.

Oh boy, this is great weather for the farmer—and the farmer needs all the help he can get to help his crops up out of the ground.

Congress did not pass any great number of notable laws, but the output of jaws has been large.

The old folks missed their guess today. It is going to rain some more.

TENNIS PLAYERS BATTLE FOR TITLE

(Associated Press Leased Wire.)

WIMBLETON, Engl., June 18. — The keenly awaited battle for team supremacy between the American and British women lawn tennis players began on the courts here today. In the singles the American champion, Miss Helen Wills, had for her opponent Mrs. Phyllis Covel, while Mrs. Molla Mallory, former champion, faced a real test in meeting Kathleen McKane, Great Britain's best.

Miss McKane won her match from Mrs. Mallory, 6-3, 6-3.

Miss Helen Wills, the American woman tennis champion was defeated in her singles match in the team event today between the American and British women representatives. Miss Phyllis Covell of England won from the young Californian in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4.

Miss Wills' erratic game, far below her customary standard, lost her first singles match in tournament play in this country. Her English opponent played with marvelous steadiness throughout setting the pace most of the time and pegging away persistently at the American girl's backhand, which for the day was overstrong and weak alternately.

Mrs. Mallory played a steady back court game while Miss McKane seemingly improved over her form of last year, slashed hard and steadily from all parts of the court and was able thus to capture the match.

Miss Wills accepted defeat unperturbed. After the match she calmly chatted with Mrs. Wightman and others clustered about the umpires perch, drank a glass of water and posed with Mrs. Covell, for the photographers.

LONDON, June 18. — Susanne Lenglen, women's lawn tennis champion of the world, and Helen Wills, the American title holder, are seeded in opposite halves of the coming singles championship play at Wimbledon, so there is a good possibility of their meeting in the finals to decide the question of supremacy.

SLEMP DECLARES STORY OVERDONE

Says Published Reports Were Overdrawn and Disagreement Was Not Serious.

CONFIDENT IN PARTY

Believes Strong Personnel of Ticket and Soundness of Platform Will Make Opposition Futile.

CINNCINNATI, June 17.—Published reports of any disagreement between him and William M. Butler, republican national committee chairman, were overdrawn, said C. Bascom Slemp, secretary to President Coolidge on his arrival here today from Washington.

"The published reports of any disagreement between me and Mr. Butler were considerably ovedrawn," said Mr. Slemp. "The statement that I had gone to the president and threatened to resign was also much stronger than the facts of the case. I went to the Cleveland convention merely to observe how things were going on and to pick up what facts that I believed should be reported to the president. I noticed that there was some dissatisfaction on the part of some of the republican leaders that they were not being consulted by Mr. Butler in the running of the committee and it appeared to me as well as to them that he ought to be surrounded by a group of advisers, representative of the leaders of the party from the various sections of the country and I so reported to the president. However, the president himself had already decided that such a course should be pursued."

Mr. Slemp came to ascertain the condition of his cousin, P. W. Slemp, president of the Elkhorn Junior Coal Company, who is a patient at the Jewish hospital, ill with appendicitis.

"We are going to go before the people in the fall election on the basis of the high character of the personnel of our ticket and the soundness of our platform," Mr. Slemp said. "We feel that with such high class candidates as President Coolidge and General Dawes and with a platform as sound and safe as that adopted by the republican party we shall have the confidence of the people and we shall win regardless of what the democrats or third party may do."

Asked whether President Coolidge would make any speaking tour during the campaign he said that this had not yet been planned.

DRY LAW DEFENSE IS HEARD TODAY

Assistant Attorney - General Appears Before Senate Investigating Commitee.

ACCOUNT IS SPIRITED

Woman Attorney Objects to Interruptions by Wheeler —Thinks Section of Act Is "Fool Provision."

WASHINGTON, June 17.—As the chief official of the department of justice charged with enforcing prohibition, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney-general, submitted a defense of the law administration today before the senate Daugherty investigating committee.

Many times in the prolonged hearings, witnesses have made charges against the enforcement regime and Mrs. Willebrandt went into details of these accusations, introducing letter from Attorney-General Stone which said that much of the testimony dealt with "half truths and impressions."

"The point I am making," Mrs. Willebrandt said, "is that many witnesses have given you testimony against the department of justice when in fact their real grievance lay against another branch of the government."

On several occasions she told Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, the committee prosecutor to wait a minute when he sought to interrupt in her spirited account. Senator Wheeler finally broke in:

"Oh, I know that this whisky business is continually kicked around between the prohibition unit and the department of justice," he said. "but the department of justice has responsibilities of another."

Mrs. Willebrandt remarked that section 26 of the Volstead act was a "fool provision" because it did not allow the effective confiscation of autos or marine vessels used in unlawful transportation of liquor.
