WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

DOROTHY LANE goes to New York to visit

PERKINS GRANT and try to break into the movies. She meets

LAWRENCE FRENCH, a young publicity man, and after a quarrel with Perkins, goes to a girl's club with

SYLVIA STEARNS and lives there. Through French she meets

JOHN SEWARD, a famous star, and is engaged as his leading lady in an independent production that he is making. Seward, known as "the great lover of the screen," falls in love with her. Realizing that she cared more for Lawrence French than for him, she is much upset.

Returning from a location trip early one morning, she sees Sylvia and Lawrence driving to the railway station together, and feels sure that they are eloping. But a note from Sylvia explains that she has an engagement with a stock company out of town and is leaving to fill it. An agent phones her, asking her to see him concerning work. There she meets a movie magnate.

ELKHORN, who offers her an engagement with French, she refuses. A girl whom French has known a long time is at the hotel where Dorothy dines with him, and jealous of her, Dorothy joins Elkhorn at a nearby table.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT.

XXXV—IN THE JAWS OF THE WOLF

WHEN we had gone back to our table Lawrence came over to me.

"Priscilla wants to go to one of the night clubs," he said. "shall you and I go ahead, or what would you like to do?"

"Oh, but Dorothy will not leave now—we are just celebrating her signing her new contract," cried Elkhorn. "Sit down and have a drink with us and hear about it!"

Lawrence gave me such a queer look as he refused—I knew that he didn't approve at all. But somehow I didn't care.

"You had better go on with Priscilla," I told him, indifferently. "I think I will stay here."

"Oh, how I hoped he wouldn't go! He stood there for a moment, looking rather bewildered; then he said so low that only I could hear him: "Do you want me to go and leave you here, Dorothy?"

"I didn't, of course. But I was jealous because he had been so nice to that other girl."

"I wouldn't keep you from your old sweetheart for anything in the world," I told him, over my shoulder, and then he went away without another word.

I stared after him and the others as they left. Priscilla had on a beautiful silk coat over her pink organdy frock, and her hat was simply a dream. She had slipped one arm through Lawrence's and was laughing up at him and chattering away so gaily. I told myself that of course I'd never had any chance with a girl like that, who had simply everything. Why, I'd been wondering a while ago if I'd ever go ahead—and she was going the very next day! It seemed as if some girl had everything.

"The little lady is very tired," Elkhorn said suddenly, interrupting Gibbs in the middle of a story. And then, to me, "Do you want me to take you home?"

"I want to go home," I answered, wishing that I didn't feel so like crying.

"Then we will go at once," he cried, jumping up. "We will leave Jack to pay the check, and we will go—come on!" And he grabbed me by the arm and hurried toward the elevator.

I didn't want him to go with me; program next Sunday at the Canyon Camp.

A. L. Miller of Wolf Creek was in town Wednesday, looking after business matters.

Heleen Russell, wife of Claud Russell, passed away June 23 at the home of Mrs. Ellen Hammons. Mrs. Russell was 28 years, 11 months and 12 days of age at the time of her death. She I'd have much preferred slipping out alone and finding a taxi for myself. But I couldn't tell him that. So we went downstairs together. And there at the entrance of the hotel, waiting for a cab, were Lawrence and Priscilla and the rest of their crowd!

I tried not to meet Lawrence's eyes, as we crossed the sidewalk and got into the stinging French car that had Mr. Elkhorn's monogram on the door. But just as I settled down in the seat, while he gave the chauffeur the address, I looked up and saw Lawrence looking at me. His face was very white, and his jaw was set so grimly that I knew that only the strongest effort was holding him in. I smiled at him, but he gave no sign that he saw me, although he was looking straight into my eyes. And then we drove away, and I wondered if my dreams were always going to be torn to pieces this way.

And as the machine rolled along, over the great span of the bridge and into New York, my thoughts went back to that morning. Then, too, I had been unhappy, even though I felt that I had everything to make for material success. Now, again, I was riding through the streets of the city I had longed to conquer, with even greater success in my grasp—and I was still more unhappy. Yet in the meantime the biggest thing in life had seemed to be mine.

Elkhorn was talking. At first I hardly listened to him; then, gradually, as I realized that he was talking about my part in his picture, I forced myself to pay attention to what he was saying.

"And you play a girl much like you are really—sweet, young, pretty—but when you find that your mother is one of the notorious characters of the town, that in her home more than one big murder had been committed and hushed up, you are horrified and swear that you will leave her. But she has your lover at her mercy, and threatens to expose him unless you go to this man's rooms—"

His voice made me think of a cat licking its chops after it had killed a bird. And he had laid his arm around my shoulder.

"Mr. Elkhorn," I said, just as calmly as I could, moving away. "You needn't tell me any more. I can't play such a part as that—it's pictures of that type that make decent people condemn the movies. And I—I won't have anything to do with such a production!"

"What—a girl like you say?" he asked. "Why, you don't understand. This picture preaches a great moral lesson. It's a sermon, it's—"

He put his arm around me and drew me to him. "Our car has stopped, caught for a moment in a traffic jam. And before he could stop me, I jumped out of it, ran across the street, and stepped into a vacant cab that was headed the other way."

"Drive to the corner just as fast as you can, and then turn off into the next street. I'll give you the address then," I told the driver. I think Elkhorn would try to overtake me, but I wasn't going to take any chances. I was through with him forever.

TICKET SALE MAKES PROGRESS

Strong Interest in Chautauqua Indicated by Way in Which Tickets Are in Demand.

CANVASS THIS WEEK

Guarantors to Make House-to-House Canvass This Week to Dispose of Tickets.

The ticket sale for the coming chautauqua is progressing nicely although no concerted effort has yet been made to advance the sale. The tickets have gone quite rapidly, indicating a strong interest in the coming chautauqua and assuring complete success for this year's entertainment. The disposal of tickets is being left entirely with the guarantors this year, and this week it is planned to canvass the entire city. The guarantors are being divided into committees, and each committee is securing helpers from among people interested in Chautauqua and will make a house to house visit during the week and will endeavor to dispose of all of the season admission tickets on hand. The ticket sale is in charge of D. E. Carr who went to Portland today to attend a conference of Chautauqua workers to talk over many matters relative to various phases of the contracts, and to consider ways and means of advancing chautauqua in the various communities.

It is the plan of the guarantors to dispose of the tickets early if possible and then to sign up a contract for next year so that it will not be necessary during the series of entertainment to discuss money matters, pass out pledge cards or fight for guarantors as has been done in the past. The elimination of this appeal will add much to this year's program.

The guarantors will have representatives in each of the churches of the city and before all civic club meetings during the ticket campaign and will also visit all of the nearby communities. Roseburg people who are interested and who desire to secure season tickets may obtain them at several of the stores or downtown offices. Every guarantor has tickets and they may be obtained also at the following public places: Model Bakery, Chapman Drug Store, Roseburg Cleaners, Dr. Pyle's office, Dr. Lucetta Smith's office, City Hall, Soldiers Home, Heintze studio, Moore Music Store, Spencers, Zigler and Fee Hardware Store, Crocker's Drug Store, Broadway's Garage, Specialty Shop, Ott's Music Store, Roseburg Grocery, Duds for Men, Hudson's Electric Store, Dubar Brothers, Grand Hotel, The Ladies' Shop, Commercial Abstract Office, Chamber of Commerce and Carr's Store.

Buick Again Holds Center of Interest

Eyes of Motordom Are Focused On Flint Awaiting Verification Of Reports

THE eyes and ears of motordom and of the vast motoring public are focused on Flint, Michigan, the home of the Buick Motor Company.

Eagerly, everyone is waiting for the makers of Buick to break their silence of months' standing and settle once and for all the speculation as to what the 1925 Buick line will offer. While rumors on rumor has piled up at the Buick of the Buick organization, no one has been forthcoming in the matter. Instead, Buick has been silent. It is quite possible that the popularity of the Buick line is so great that the company is unable to keep up with the demand for the cars without hearing any unverified report as to Buick and its 1925 line.

It has served to increase the attention that the trade and public are giving to Buick. The persistency with which the Buick organization is harassed with inquiry about the 1925 plans, the speculations that are being made on every hand and the rumors that keep coming to the surface—all are serving to create an interest in Buick which only a definite announcement apparently will satisfy.

Is Buick going to build a Six? Will Buick continue present body lines? Is Buick going to abandon the valve-in-head type of engine? What new additional models will Buick next year?

There are some of those who think that the Buick organization is content with the present line of cars and that it is not going to make any change in the line. It is quite possible that the popularity of the Buick line is so great that the company is unable to keep up with the demand for the cars without hearing any unverified report as to Buick and its 1925 line.
